MORGENTHAU FOR 'RECOVERY' TAXES, BALANCED BUDGET

Undistributed Profits Levy Fails to Stop Evasion, He Says; Admits It Was a Mistake.

SUGGESTS SURTAX EFFECTS BE STUDIED

By RICHARD L. STOKES
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—Testifying before the House Ways and Means Committee, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau declared today that one of the major tasks of the administration is to promote lasting business recovery, and reaffirmed, "with the same deep conviction," a statement of his made in November, 1937: "The basic need today is to foster the full application of the driving force of private capital. We want to see capital go into the productive channels of private industry. We want to see private business expand."

"Clearly," the Secretary added, "a fundamental objective of sound finance is a balanced budget." He stated that deficits are inevitable during a depression, but that their counterpart should be surpluses during years of prosperity. "If deficits are too long continued," he explained, "the depressive effects of uncertainty tend to make recovery more difficult."

Congress should consider, Morgenthau pronounced, whether present surtax rates on large incomes may not be so high as to discourage individuals subject to them from taking normal business risks.

Undistributed Profits Tax.

The witness said that the undistributed profits tax produces little revenue and has small effect on business, but that the committee should deal with it because emotional criticism has given it prominence as a "psychological irritant." This tax has failed in its major object, declared the Secretary, which was to prevent personal income tax invasion through the retention of corporate earnings.

Morgenthau's suggestions briefly stated, were that the preservation of Democratic institutions over a long period of years required the following objectives:

Promotion of free enterprise and private investment.

Attainment of full business recovery.

Maintenance of public finances in a sound and unassailable position.

Just distribution of tax burdens and a more equitable distribution of national income.

He then made the declaration that "a fundamental objective of sound finance clearly is a balanced budget."

After his appearance before the committee, one of the Administration group engaged in boring from within on behalf of business appeasement made this jubilant comment: "At least we've got one foot inside the door."

Questioned About Debt.

Since Morgenthau had stated that one of the serious problems is Federal-state conflicts, with overlapping and competing taxes, he was questioned by Representative McCormack (Dem.), Massachusetts, as to the comparative increase in the two fields since 1931. The reply was that the increase of gross Federal debt, including estimates for the fiscal years 1939 and 1940, is $28,273,000,000, while state and local debts, represented by bond issues, remained virtually stationary between 1931 and 1938, with a net increase of more than $110,000,000. These debts, it was shown, have consistently averaged around 19 billion dollars.

Against the Federal debt, Morgenthau said, should be charged off 16 billion dollars in durable improvements and $3,324,000,000 for recoverable outlays.

He Admits Mistake.

When he rose to speak, Morgenthau was asked by Chairman Doughton to state his name, address and position. Morgenthau smiled broadly, upon which Doughton added in haste: "I guess the stenographer knows that." The Secretary refrained from identifying himself. He was attended by Under-secretary Hanes and a dozen Treasury experts.

Congressman Treadway of Massachusetts, ranking Republican member of the committee, recalled that the undistributed profits tax was originally advocated by the Treasury, and was passed over opposition by the minority. Treadway aroused laughter by adding: "The minority is very happy to welcome the Secretary of the Treasury to our line of thought." Morgenthau acknowledged that a mistake had

HULL SUBMITS PROPOSAL TO REVISE NEUTRALITY ACT

Sends to Congress Administration Plan Which Would Bar American Ships From Entering Combat Areas.

WASHINGTON, May 27 (AP).—Secretary of State Hull, asking first of all for repeal of the present law's provision for an embargo on shipment of arms to belligerents, submitted to Congress tonight an administration program for revision of the Neutrality Act.

In letters to the chairmen of the Senate and House Foreign Relations committees, Hull outlined a six-point proposal for legislation which he said would "help to keep this country out of war."

He suggested enactment or re-enactment of these provisions:

1. "To prohibit American ships irrespective of what they may be carrying from entering combat areas.
2. "To restrict travel by American citizens in combat areas.
3. "To provide that the export of goods destined for belligerents shall be preceded by transfer of title to the foreign purchaser.
4. "To continue the existing legislation respecting loans and credits to nations at war.
5. "To regulate the solicitation and collection in this country of funds for belligerents.
6. "To continue the national munitions control board and the system of arms export and import licenses."

Proposal Follows Conferences.

Provisions along these lines, Hull wrote Chairman Pittman (Dem.), Nevada, of the Senate committee and acting Chairman Bloom (Dem.), New York, of the House committee, "would make easier our twofold task of keeping this country at peace and avoiding imposition of unnecessary and abnormal burdens upon our citizens."

The proposals were submitted after a series of recent conferences with Hull by the Democratic members of both committees. They were understood to have Roosevelt's approval.

Coincident with Hull's statement Bloom disclosed that his committee has a draft of a bill embodying the secretary's ideas and would give it early consideration. Bloom said hearings would start Wednesday or Thursday.

Secretary Hull's Letter.

The text of Hull's letter:

"In harmony with the conversations I have had during recent weeks with you and other members of the appropriate committees of the two Houses of Congress with regard to pending legislative proposals for modifying existing peace and neutrality legislation, I wish to offer the following comment:

"These proposals are intended to aid in keeping the United States from becoming involved in war. They contemplate, primarily, a state of affairs in which relations in the world have ceased to be peaceful.

"Our purpose must be, at all times, to endeavor to foster that state of relations among nations which will maintain the fabric of world peace. In pursuance of that aim we have done, and must do, everything possible within the limits of our traditional policy of non-involvement in overseas affairs.

"In considering the present proposals for legislation, we must keep in mind that, no matter how much we may wish or may try to disassociate ourselves from world events, we cannot achieve disassociation. The simple fact of our existence as a great nation in a

SHOUTS OF MINER, TRAPPED BY SLIDE, HEARD BY RESCUERS

Crews With Steam Shovel and Drills Work to Release Him Near Shenandoah, Pa.

SHENANDOAH, Pa., May 27 (AP).—Faint subterranean tappings and later the sound of a voice told rescuers today that Robert Galligan, 38-year-old miner, still lived in the deep mountainside coal hole where a rock slide imprisoned him yesterday morning.

The signals spurred them to new efforts as they tunneled into the side of rugged Locust Mountain with steam shovel and power drills.

The first tappings were heard 22 hours after the slide, which occurred while Galligan was 75 feet below the surface. His 80-year-old father, Patrick, sighed with relief and rested from an all-night vigil.

Later, Galligan shouted through the ever thinning wall of rock, "Hello, hello."

Galligan was working with John Leahy and Michael Gilroy when the shaft caved in yesterday. Digging near the top of the pit, Galligan's companions managed to scramble to safety and summon aid.

SEA WASHES ASHORE 4 MEN CLINGING TO EMPTY OIL DRUM

Carries Another, Lashed to Wreckage, to British Guiana Port, Three Days After Ship Sinks.

GEORGETOWN, British Guiana, May 27 (AP).—The captain and three crewmen of a small coastal steamer, who had clung for more than three days to an empty gasoline drum after their ship sunk, off British Guiana, were washed ashore near here early today.

The four, headed by Capt. James Plumpton, brought to five the known survivors among the crew of nine aboard the 34-ton France, which went down 30 miles off Geogetown Tuesday night on a voyage from Port of Spain, Trinidad.

Several hours before they reached safety another crew member, who had lashed himself to a piece of wreckage, was washed up on a beach at Moruca River, on the British Guiana-Venezuelan boundary.

ZOG'S GOLD, LABELED CHEESE, SEIZED ON ALBANIAN BORDER

Italians Report Escape of Man Trying to Smuggle Knives and Forks Into Greece.

TIRANA, Albania, May 27 (AP).—Italian authorities said today frontier guards had seized 675 ounces of gold articles belonging to the exiled King Zog of Albania just as the treasure was about to be taken into Greece disguised as cheese.

If pure gold, 675 ounces would be worth $23,675.

The Italian officials said the guards noticed a Greek passenger with a heavy suitcase on a bus running from Argyro-Castro, Albania, to Janina, Greece. When they asked what the suitcase contained he said cheese.

The guards then opened the suitcase and found it filled with gold knives, forks and ornaments bearing King Zog's crest. The passenger bolted and disappeared in the woods.

CHILE GIVES FOREIGN OIL FIRMS 3 MONTHS TO QUIT

American and British Concerns Notified State Monopoly Will Be Established.

SANTIAGO, Chile, May 27 (AP).—United States and British oil companies in Chile were authoritatively reported tonight to have been notified officially that the Government would establish shortly a state monopoly for the sale and distribution of petroleum products.

The foreign companies were said to have been advised to liquidate their organizations within three months.

The firms chiefly affected are the West India Oil Co., subsidiary of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, and Shellmex of Chile, subsidiary of the Royal Dutch Shell, which have plants valued at a total of about $9,000,000 in this country.

60 NAVY DIVERS WORKING TO RAISE SUNKEN SQUALUS

They Operate in Relays, but Leave Off at Night While Surface Work of Salvage Goes On.

WEEK, MAYBE MORE, TO FINISH THE JOB

Disabled Ship to Be Lifted, in Slow Stages, First by One End, Then by the Other.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., May 27 (AP).—Work was in full progress today on an intricate plan for raising the $4,000,000 submarine Squalus and its crew of 26 dead—a plan so complicated it may take a week or more to execute. Sixty of the navy's best divers were working in relays at the task.

After hours of activity in which a third down-haul line was attached for divers to descend to the Squalus, the undersea workers came up for the night but surface phases of the salvage work continued.

The return from Washington by fast navy plane of two submarine experts—Commanders A. I. McKee and A. R. McCann—with the approved plan of operation was the signal for speeding up the work. Shortly before noon, almost simultaneous with the landing of McKee and McCann, the first relay of divers went down.

Their previous work had been largely exploratory and with the purpose of clearing away some of the obstructions from the Squalus' deck.

Two Weeks, Is One Opinion.

A high naval official said there remained no doubt that the raising of the Squalus would be a long and tedious process. He said at least seven days would be required for the work. From another naval source came the off-the-record opinion that it might be two weeks, at least.

Years of experiments by Navy divers with a helium-oxygen mixture bore fruit when the men going down 240 feet to the Squalus breathed it for the first time under life-and-death salvage conditions.

The Navy said numerous divers using the new mixture had reached experimental depths of about 500 feet and that two divers had exceeded 300 feet in the ocean near Portsmouth last summer.

The new helium combination permits the divers to remain under the sea longer than usual because, officials said, it is not so readily absorbed into the blood stream as is air under such heavy pressure.

Details of the Plan.

Under the plan drafted here and approved in Washington, the Squalus will be raised in stages, first one end and then the other, through a delicate balance between the lifting power of air pumped into the sunken craft and the buoyancy of huge pontoons which first will be sunk 130 feet below the surface.

The pontoons will be attached by cables to the stern of the submarine, into which the water poured on the ship's last dive. Then the pontoons will be pumped out and brought to the surface, bringing the after-part of the Squalus to the 130-foot level previously held by the big air drums.

Next the salvage crew will blow water from the ballast tanks in the forward part of the submarine until its bow actually comes to the surface. Thus the bow will make one long sweep from the bottom to the top while the stern remains at 130 feet.

Then air will be pumped into the ballast tanks in the stern until it, too, reaches the surface.

An optional course, the navy officers explained, is to tow the Squalus into shallower water before bringing it all the way to the surface. This would permit divers to work under less pressure in the event of a slip that might send the submarine down again.

Survivors to Get New Posts.

While the divers worked at the scene of the sinking, 15 miles off shore, most of the 33 survivors, brought up by an escape bell Wednesday, were ready for new duty. Bronchial ailments bothered some, but doctors said they would be out of the hospital at the navy yard soon.

Although some relatives of the men who lost their lives in the disaster arrived at the yard to claim their bodies, officers planned to wait until the Squalus was brought to the surface and towed to dry dock before removing the tragic cargo.

In nearby Dover sat a weeping mill worker, Ruth Desautel, who

O'MALLEY GETS ONE YEAR, $5000 FINE AS TAX EVADER; GOES TO PRISON TOMORROW

CONTEMPT ACTION AGAINST O'MALLEY AND PENDERGAST

Insurance Superintendent to File Motion Tomorrow on Instructions From Gov. Stark.

TO SEEK ALSO TO SET COMPROMISE ASIDE

Effort to Return to Policyholders $8,000,000 Distributed to Insurance Firms Under It.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., May 27.—A motion that Thomas J. Pendergast and R. Emmet O'Malley be cited for contempt by the three-Judge Federal Court which ratified the fraudulent $10,000,000 insurance compromise will be filed with the Court in Kansas City Monday by Ray B. Lucas, State Superintendent of Insurance, on instructions from Gov. Lloyd C. Stark.

At the same time Lucas will file a petition to set the compromise aside. The nature of the petition has not been disclosed, but it is known that it will represent an attempt to obtain the return to policyholders of the $8,000,000 in impounded premiums distributed to stock fire insurance companies under the compromise, without resumption of the rate case litigation which preceded the settlement.

Decision at Conference.

The contempt proceedings against Pendergast and O'Malley were decided upon at conferences between Gov. Stark and Lucas yesterday. Formal instructions to file the motion were given Lucas in a letter from the Governor which was made public after O'Malley's plea of guilty of income tax evasion.

Gov. Stark's instructions were that the motion ask that Pendergast, O'Malley and "others not yet determined" be cited for "contempt of court by obstructing justice in that admitted fraud was practiced upon the Court in the procurement of the compromise by means of bribery."

In a memorandum by the Governor given to reporters along with the letter, it was stated that the contempt proceedings would be "far-reaching and nation-wide in scope." This statement was not explained further.

There has been considerable discussion as to what action, if any, would be taken by authorities against the insurance companies which contributed to the slush fund.

Bribery Investigation.

Gov. Stark added, in the memorandum, that the Court will act in the contempt proceedings as "a court of equity," and will have "complete power to investigate all charges of bribery used in connection with the compromise."

When the Court has completed its investigation, the Governor said, "it can make its order disposing of the compromise case without further litigation."

The letter to Lucas also contained a restatement of the Governor's previous instructions to take immediate steps to have the compromise set aside. Lucas was ordered to "take any and all actions necessary to bring about a prompt return to the Missouri insurance policyholders of the approximately $8,000,000 taken from them by fraud and bribery or other improper methods."

After making public his letter to Lucas, Gov. Stark told reporters he had no comment to make on the O'Malley sentence. His only answer to questions along this line, he said, was contained in the letter.

Another Petition Offered.

Besides the petition to set aside the compromise which will be filed by Lucas Monday, the three-judge court may also consider a petition of similar purpose lodged with the clerk of the United States District Court at Kansas City yesterday by Frank P. Dickson and D. W. Witmer, large owners of residential property in Kansas City.

Dickson and Witmer have power of attorney from 5000 other policyholders, and entered their petition in such form that it may be joined

TEXT OF CORRESPONDENCE THAT A. L. M'CORMACK HAD WITH C. R. STREET ON PAYOFF

Letters Referring to "Our Friends" in Jefferson City and Kansas City Read in Court by Milligan.

By LAWRENCE E. LAYBOURNE
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 27.—The famous "our friends" letters written by A. L. McCormack, St. Louis insurance man, to the late Charles R. Street, Chicago insurance executive and pay-off man in the notorious fire insurance rate compromise, were made public by the Government today. McCormack, the go-between in the pay-off, referred to "our friends" in Kansas City and Jefferson City, the reference obviously being to Boss T. J. Pendergast at Kansas City and R. Emmet O'Malley at the State Capital.

The letters were read in court by United States Attorney Maurice M. Milligan in stating the Government's case against O'Malley, former State Superintendent of Insurance, who pleaded guilty of evading Federal income taxes on his $62,500 share of the pay-off.

Some Suggestions Offered.

The quoted part of the first letter written May 16, 1935, is as follows:

"Dear Mr. Street:

"I have been giving considerable thought to the matter which we were in Kansas City about this week and trust that you will pardon my offering some suggestions.

"I understand that the Governor will be in Kansas City on Saturday of this week and I am writing a letter to our friend, giving him some of the details of this arrangement in order that he may be familiar with them when he sees the Governor on Saturday.

"Our friend at Jefferson City informed me that the Governor wants to make sure that this matter is going to meet the approval of our friend and you can readily see the advantage it has been to make the arrangement which we have made. I do not think there was any way in the world to have accomplished the thing we have accomplished without his assistance.

His Idea of Procedure.

"I would like to further suggest that I am not at all sanguine about Folonie's understanding of this matter. He keeps insisting upon an 80-20 basis when my idea is that all expenses of all kinds should be deducted first and that would leave a balance of $6,300,000, which is to be divided, according to my calculations, 33 1-3 per cent to policyholders of $2,100,000 and 66 2-3 per cent to the companies or $4,200,000. While it is true that the 33 1-3 per cent figure is the same as 20 per cent of the total, it nevertheless is better from a psychological and political standpoint to say that the money is divided on a 1-3 and 2-3 basis rather than on an 80 per cent and 20 per cent basis.

"It is my experience with attorneys (although I happen to be a piece of one myself) that they do not always understand how to present a practical proposition to the courts; they are always thinking in legal terms and this, I think, is a matter which is a little beyond that.

"I was hoping to hear from you today because if it seemed urgent, I might drop over to Kansas City and see our friend, in order to make sure that everything is understood."

"McCormack explained," Milligan said, "that his references to 'our friend at Jefferson City' and 'our friend in Kansas City' meant the defendant and Pendergast, respectively, and when, in the fourth paragraph of the letter, he said, 'I do not think there was any way in the world to have accomplished the thing we have accomplished without his assistance,' he referred to T. J. Pendergast, and the influence he had agreed with Street to exert in order to induce the officials of the State of Missouri, and es-

O'MALLEY GOING BACK TO LEAVENWORTH 65 YEARS AFTER HIS BIRTH THERE

BORN in Leavenworth, Kan., April 12, 1874, Robert Emmet O'Malley, Missouri's faithless former State Superintendent of Insurance will be back there tomorrow, in Federal Penitentiary, 65 years later.

At the age of 23 he started in the cigar business in Kansas City; a few years later he took up a militant career as a Democratic politician, which ended only with his indictment last month, and it was not until 1926 that he entered the insurance field as general agent of a life insurance company. Seven years later he was made State Superintendent of Insurance, with extensive power, at the behest of Boss Tom Pendergast. Gov. Stark fired him in 1937, after which the Pendergast machine took care of him with a job as director of the city Water Department.

By Guilty Plea Ex-Superintendent of Insurance Admits Taking $62,500 Bribe to Put Over $10,000,000 Compromise.

ELIGIBLE TO PAROLE ON NEXT SEPT. 28

Put on Probation for Three Years on Second Count—Besides Cash Penalty He Must Pay About $13,500 Due on Income.

By SPENCER R. McCULLOCH
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 27.—Robert Emmet O'Malley, former State Superintendent of Insurance, who pleaded guilty today in United States District Court of income tax evasion, thereby admitting he took a $62,500 bribe to authorize the notorious $10,000,000 fire insurance rate compromise of 1935, must go to Leavenworth prison Monday with Boss Thomas J. Pendergast, who confessed to receiving and concealing $315,000 of the same slush fund.

O'Malley was sentenced by District Judge Merrill E. Otis to serve a year and a day, and was fined $5000. He will be eligible for parole after serving one-third of his term, or in 122 days, that is, on Sept. 28. If he is not released on parole, good-behavior credit would bring about his release in nine months and 18 days, or on March 16, 1940.

On the second count of his indictment, O'Malley was sentenced for two years, but was placed on probation for a three-year term including the two years. The one-year term is not subject to probation.

The former State official, besides paying the $5000 fine, must pay to the best of his ability, the income tax and penalties on the concealed $62,500. Government officials have figured the amount due as $13,501.20.

O'Malley's city job as director of the Water Department is also forfeited permanently by his plea and sentencing. He took a leave of absence after his indictment last month. Fred Bellemere, City Counsellor, said it would be necessary only for the City Manager to terminate the leave, after which the place can be filled by a new appointment.

Pay-Off in St. Louis.

Important facts, not made known officially before, were stated by District Attorney Maurice M. Milligan in presenting the Government's case to Judge Otis, after O'Malley's plea. St. Louis was named as the place where O'Malley received the bribe money in instalments of $22,500 and $40,000, from A. L. McCormack, go-between in the compromise, to whom Pendergast, in Kansas City, paid $62,500 for O'Malley and an equal amount for himself, from the $440,000 sent to the Boss by Charles R. Street, Chicago representative of insurance interests.

This places in St. Louis, and with the Circuit Attorney, grand jury and Circuit Court of that city, the jurisdiction for prosecuting O'Malley for the now admitted crime of bribery. The Federal Court has no jurisdiction over this offense, a fact to which Judge Otis called attention in fixing sentence.

Used McCormack's Deposit Box.

The District Attorney, relating the details of the bargain between O'Malley and McCormack, and the two subsequent payments to the State official, told how O'Malley used McCormack's safe deposit box at the Mississippi Valley Trust Co. in St. Louis as a place for keeping a part of the money, which was thus left in McCormack's custody, and was obtained from him by O'Malley, $1000 or $2000 at a time.

He told also how O'Malley contrived that his wife and her niece should help to conceal his share of the pay-off. He showed O'Malley as a moving spirit in the deal, probably its originator.

Milligan began the recital with telling of a meeting Jan. 13, 1935, at the Coronado Hotel in St. Louis, between O'Malley and McCormack, who then was president of the Missouri Insurance Agents' Association. At this meeting, he said O'Malley broached the question of a settlement. McCormack replied that he thought the insurance companies would like to settle the rate cases.

O'Malley then asked McCormack if the companies would be willing to pay anybody for effecting the settlement. The St. Louis man said he would have to refer any proposals to Street, who was in Chicago. O'Malley then said, the Government disclosed, that any settlement would have to be arranged through Pendergast, and suggested that a meeting be arranged between Pendergast and Street.

Street, it developed, was willing. McCormack reported to O'Malley and the Superintendent of Insurance promised to get in touch with Pendergast and inform the boss of Street's desire for a Chicago conference.

As was told when Pendergast pleaded guilty Monday, the big deal was arranged at the Palmer House in Chicago on Jan. 23, 1935, Pendergast rejecting Street's opening offer of $200,000 and finally agreeing to $500,000 to swing the deal. Subsequently, Street promised him another $250,000 to expedite matters but when Street died Feb. 1, 1938, the big Boss had $310,000 still coming to him. Important as the conference was, Pendergast took time out to telephone his secretary, Bernard Gnefkow, and instruct him to place a horse race bet for him.

"Our Friend" Letters.

Before O'Malley got any money, and while details of the settlement were being worked out, McCormack wrote his now celebrated "our friend" letters to Street, using that designation to indicate both the insurance superintendent at Jefferson City and Boss Tom in Kansas City. They were distinguished by geographical references, O'Malley being "our friend at Jefferson City."

The mention, in the correspondence, of "influence in the proper place, to disabuse O'Malley's mind of these ideas," was a reference to Boss Pendergast's power over O'Malley.

"Gen. Barker," mentioned in the correspondence, was John T. Barker of Kansas City, former Attorney-General, who represented the state in the litigation and in the official settlement. Barker received fees of $127,140 in 1936, and is now contending, before the Federal Board of Tax Appeals, that he should not be required to pay a Federal income tax on the amount, as he holds that, being employed by the State, he was in the position of a State official. Barker and Floyd E. Jacobs are claiming a joint fee of $275,000 for other services to the State Insurance Department over a seven-year period.

O'Malley got his first payment May 23, 1935, five days after the settlement was signed, the Government disclosed. McCormack, who had first delivered payments to Pendergast from Street had been entrusted by the Boss with $22,500 for O'Malley. He met O'Malley at the Coronado, but O'Malley said he had no place to keep the money. He took $2000 and asked McCormack to keep the rest. McCormack put it in his own safe deposit box at Mississippi Valley Trust Co., and doled it out as O'Malley requested it, until by March 30, 1936, he had disbursed all of it.

In telling of McCormack's first transaction with Pendergast, Milligan said, as he said in Pendergast's case, that the Boss kept only $5000 of the first $50,000 payment from Street, and gave back $45,000 to McCormack, to be divided between McCormack and O'Malley. This, with the fact of O'Malley's acceptance of the money, made the two Pendergast's legal accomplices in the transaction. Having handed the $45,000 to McCormack, the District Attorney said, the Boss then took McCormack to the races at Riverside Park, in Platte County, seven miles from Pendergast's office.

$40,000 for O'Malley.

When the big $330,000 payment was made to Pendergast April 1, 1936, after the $10,000,000 impounded fund in Federal Court had been released by virtue of the compromise, McCormack was intrusted with $40,000 of it, to give to O'Malley. He had carried the money to Pendergast in a Gladstone bag, getting it from Street at Chicago.

McCormack, who also had been given $40,000 for himself by the Boss, put the money in his safe deposit box the next day, and a week later Mr. and Mrs. O'Malley arrived at Union Station. McCormack met them, and told O'Malley he had $40,000 from Pendergast for him. All three went to the bank while McCormack took an envelope containing the money from his safe deposit box, handing it to O'Malley at the Coronado.

The O'Malleys left for Kansas City that night. The next day, Milligan said, Mrs. O'Malley asked her niece, Mrs. Adaline Cross, to rent a safe deposit box at Union National Bank, Kansas City. The niece did so. Mrs. O'Malley went with her to the bank and placed a large package in it. At intervals they would open it, and Mrs. O'Malley would extract currency from it. When the niece went away for the summer, she gave Mrs. O'Malley a power of attorney to open the box.

Subsequently the niece and her husband borrowed $7500 from the O'Malleys to buy a house at 7348 Wayne avenue here. The O'Malleys declined to give her a check, informing her they desired "to avoid record evidence," and wanted the transaction handled in currency.

As told exclusively in the Post-Dispatch, the $7500, all in $100 bills, was traced by agents of the Intelligence unit of the Treasury Department through serial numbers, and found to be part of the big payment to Pendergast. The funds were drawn from a Chicago bank which called for new currency from the Federal Reserve there to make the payment. Serial numbers were noted.

O'Malley having received $62,500, got no more. But he subsequently asked McCormack to get another $10,000 payment from Street for Pendergast, who was ill, representing that he needed the money to defray expenses of his long illness. McCormack got it and gave it to Pendergast Oct. 25, 1936, at Menorah Hospital. At or about the same time, McCormack received a $20,000 bonus, direct from Street, for his services. This made McCormack's total "take" $82,500.

Defense Attorney's Statement.

William G. Boatright, whose client had pleaded guilty, made no attempt to refute the Government's allegations. He asserted to the court that, had O'Malley been in Kansas City and not in Washington when the Government informed him his tax was under investigation, he would have made "an explanation."

The Government's notification to O'Malley was in the form of a letter from the Intelligence Unit dated April 3 last, informing him certain "adjustments" would be necessary in his tax and telling him if he desired to proffer an explanation, a conference would be arranged here April 4, 5 or 6.

"Advantageous Compromise."

Boatright, without saying where the letter was addressed, said it was not delivered, although sent by registered mail, special delivery. The Government's statement, however, quoted O'Malley as confiding to McCormack in the summer of 1938 that he was glad he had put his money in a place where it could not be found.

Four days after the date of the letter, on April 7, the whole scandal was made public by the indictment of Pendergast and of O'Malley.

Boatright pointed out that only the legal charge of income tax evasion could be considered in imposing sentence. He then digressed to discuss the insurance rate compromise settlement itself, saying it was wholly advantageous to the State and "that no one could point out it was advantageous to the companies." He said his client had denied to him that Pendergast ever saw a draft of the settlement before it was signed.

The money paid O'Malley, his lawyer asserted, was "a spontaneous act" on the part of Pendergast, and came unexpectedly to him. It did not affect his stand on the settlement, Boatright said.

"Mr. O'Malley emphatically contends that at no time did he fail to insist on what he should insist on as a public official," the attorney said. "The letters read by the Government show his insistence that the statement should be on a proper basis."

Boatright argued that the amount

JUDGE SAYS O'MALLEY 'BETRAYED MISSOURI FOR 30,000 PIECES OF SILVER'

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 27.

JUDGE MERRILL E. OTIS, in sentencing Robert Emmet O'Malley today, made the following comment:

"O'Malley, it appears, lived honorably for more than 60 years. He was honest in his transactions with his fellow men. Then he became an important officer of the State. In that capacity he settled with insurance companies a piece of litigation involving millions of dollars. He was bribed to make that settlement.

"For 30,000 pieces of silver he betrayed Missouri. The tax he attempted to evade was on the bribe money he received. But he has not been charged with the taking of a bribe. He could not be charged with that offense in this Federal Court. He has plead guilty to the charge of attempting to evade the tax, in amounts which are substantial.

"The punishment will be substantial. He has not pleaded guilty to bribe taking. The simple question is, should he be punished for the crime with which he is charged, and then punished, in the same judgment, for a crime which is not and could not be charged against him in this court, but which may and should be charged against him in another court? It is a simple question. The only answer possible is an emphatic, 'no'."

O'MALLEY BRIBE CONSIDERED BY CIRCUIT ATTORNEY

Information Given in Court in Kansas City Names St. Louis as Place for Prosecution.

Circuit Attorney Franklin Miller has under consideration the information given by United States District Attorney Maurice M. Milligan to the Court at Kansas City yesterday that St. Louis was the place of payment of the $62,500 bribe accepted by former State Insurance Superintendent R. Emmet O'Malley for his approval of the notorious $10,000,000 fire insurance rate compromise.

This information, given to the Court before O'Malley was sentenced to a year and a day in prison for income tax evasion, put the venue, or place for any bribery prosecution in connection with payment of the $62,500, in St. Louis.

"The statement in the Post-Dispatch is the first public intimation I have seen that any part of the fire insurance rate compromise money was passed in St. Louis," Miller said yesterday when a Post-Dispatch reporter called his attention to the published statement of Milligan. "The matter is under consideration by my office and whatever action is justified will be taken."

In sentencing O'Malley, Judge Merrill E. Otis commented that although the former insurance superintendent could not be charged with bribery in his court such a charge might and should be made against him in another court.

Two May Be Prosecuted.

On Milligan's statement O'Malley is subject to prosecution for accepting a bribe as a State officer and McCormack, go-between in the payments of the corruption fund, for giving a bribe. The penalty is imprisonment of two to seven years.

It was pointed out by lawyers, however, that the State might not be able to prosecute both O'Malley and McCormack successfully as it would be necessary to use one as a witness against the other.

Prosecution for bribery may be instituted by grand jury indictment or by an information filed by a prosecuting officer. The new grand jury has been summoned for June 5.

Limitations Statute.

Such prosecution would not be barred by the statute of limitations until five years after commission of the alleged act of bribery. Milligan's statement said the $62,500 was paid here between May 23, 1935, and April 9, 1936.

On May 23, 1935, Milligan related, McCormack met O'Malley at the Coronado hotel and said he had brought $22,500 to him from T. J. Pendergast. This was a part, turned back by Boss Pendergast to McCormack, of the $440,000 Pendergast received for putting over the compromise.

O'Malley, however, asked for only $2000 at that time, explaining he had no place to keep the rest, Milligan continued, quoting McCormack as having said he had paid the remainder by March 30, 1936. These subsequent payments, it was stated, usually were in amounts of $1000 or $2000.

Records Check.

Examination of records of the hotel and of the local bank in which McCormack had a safe deposit box, Milligan stated, showed that O'Malley was registered at the hotel on nine dates on which McCormack obtained entry to his safe deposit box, the last date being March 30, 1936.

Then came the big payoff of the $40,000, the Government charges. On April 9, 1936, Milligan related, McCormack met O'Malley and the superintendent's wife at Union Station and told O'Malley he had $40,000 for him from Pendergast.

O'Malley asked for immediate payment, all three went to the bank where McCormack had the safety box and McCormack took out an envelope containing $40,000 which he turned over to O'Malley later that day after the O'Malleys had registered at the Coronado, Milligan said.

Against Fancy Name for Baldness.

WATERBURY, Conn., May 27 (AP).—Baldness is baldness and there is no need to calle it as medical men do, by the fancy name of alopecia seborrhoica, says John Rodenmeyer of Bethel, 82-year-old founder of the Baldhead Club of America, Inc. "Baldness is no ailment and it is not to be called names," says Rodenmeyer in an announcement of the club's annual meeting nevt month at North Canaan, "and if doctors don't stop it we'll quit patronizing them."

Judge Otis Replies to Critics Of Boss Pendergast Penalty in Imposing Sentence on O'Malley

Term Was One of the Heaviest for Income Tax Evasion, the Only Issue Involved, He Declares.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 27.—United States District Judge Merrill E. Otis took cognizance of widespread criticism of the sentence he imposed on Boss Tom Pendergast for evasion of income tax on money he received for bringing about the notorious fire insurance rate compromise when R. Emmet O'Malley, Pendergast's political creature who was Insurance Superintendent at the time, pleaded guilty of a similar charge today and threw himself on the Court's mercy.

After referring to the sentence of Pendergast, who received a 15-month prison term and a $10,000 fine but was placed on probation for five years as to a three-year term which was another part of the sentence, Judge Otis dramatically referred to O'Malley upon whom he imposed a year-and-a-day sentence and a $5000 fine. Pendergast received $315,000 in the insurance payoff; O'Malley, $62,500.

"Bribed," Judge Says.

"He was bribed to make that settlement," Judge Otis said of the former Insurance Superintendent.

Thus, as he had done when sentencing the Kansas City political boss, Judge Otis emphasized that unlawful acts and corruption which came to light as the result of the Government's investigation should have no bearing on the case since the charge to be considered by the Court was solely income tax evasion.

The Court read a letter he had received from Assistant United States Attorney-General James W. Morris in answer to an inquiry regarding typical sentences for income tax evasion. Morris said that during a period of three and a half years, the average punishment on pleas of guilty was about three months' imprisonment and a $1500 fine. In one instance the penalty had been a five-year prison sentence and a $10,000 fine. However, Morris said that he and several Treasury officials with whom he had discussed the Pendergast sentence were "entirely satisfied" with it.

Both Pendergast and O'Malley will be eligible for parole after serving one-third of their terms.

Text of Court's Statement.

The text of Judge Otis' statement follows:

"I must consider now anew the sentence which was imposed by me on Thomas J. Pendergast to know to what extent it should guide me as a precedent in the case of Emmet O'Malley, who has pleaded guilty to a similar offense. Due consideration for the criticism that sentence has received from good men requires its re-examination.

"Pendergast sentence exactly in line.

"1. When I imposed that sentence I knew that it was exactly in line with sentences I had imposed in criminal cases in which there were pleas of guilty during the 14 years I have served as a Federal Judge. If it was out of line in any way whatever, it was out of line on the side of severity, not leniency.

"There has been some public reference to the sentences imposed by me in the vote fraud cases, where there were pleas of guilty or nolo contendere. I have reviewed the sentences in those cases. Eighteen vote fraud cases fell to me. There were in those cases 16 pleas of guilty. There was one sentence of a year and a day in the penitentiary, 11 jail sentences ranging from one month to seven months, and four probations. Eighty-one entered pleas of nolo contendere. Not one of them was required to serve a day in jail. These were offenses for which the maximum possible imprisonment was 10 years, just twice that authorized for attempted tax evasion.

Comparison of Sentences.

"There has been some public reference to the sentences imposed by me in the vote fraud cases, where there were pleas of guilty or nolo contendere. I have reviewed the sentences in those cases. Eighteen vote fraud cases fell to me. There were in those cases 16 pleas of guilty. There was one sentence of a year and a day in the penitentiary, 11 jail sentences ranging from one month to seven months, and four probations. Eighty-one entered pleas of nolo contendere. Not one of them was required to serve a day in jail. These were offenses for which the maximum possible imprisonment was 10 years, just twice that authorized for attempted tax evasion.

"There has been some public reference to the sentences I have imposed in Dyer Act cases. There the maximum punishment possible is five years' imprisonment. I have sentenced scores, perhaps hundreds, of these offenders. When there is a plea of guilty and no record of criminal convictions, my sentence almost invariably has been imprisonment for one and one-half years or less.

"The sentences I have imposed in connection with every other type of crime might be studied. It would then be found that the Pendergast sentence was in line with all other sentences where there were pleas of guilty and no records of previous criminal convictions.

"One of heaviest sentences ever imposed.

"2. I have reason to believe that the Pendergast sentence was one of the heaviest that ever has been imposed in the United States in a case charging an attempt to evade an income tax in which there was a plea of guilty.

Reply to Critics.

"3. Some who have criticised the Pendergast sentence have not carefully studied it; the first part of the sentence was imprisonment in the penitentiary for one year and three months. The second part of the sentence was a fine of $10,000, above and beyond all civil penalties. The third part of the sentence was three years' imprisonment in the penitentiary (additional to the one year and three months), with probation for five years. The thinking man will know that while a penitentiary sentence, no part of which is to be served unless probation is revoked, is little more than a stern warning, a suspended penitentiary sentence of three years, with probation for five years, following a penitentiary sentence of a year and three months which actually must be served in a felon's cell, is much more than twice a sentence of one year and three months, all to be served.

Badge of "Convict."

"Why is that true? Because the first year (in the first week) in the penitentiary more than offsets any succeeding two years or five years. It is in the first year, the first week, the first day after the iron gates have clanged shut, that the badge of 'convict' is fastened upon the prisoner. When the prisoner steps out of actual confinement and begins to serve, during five additional years, a suspended penitentiary sentence, he is still a 'convict.' Pendergast was sentenced to wear the badge of 'convict' for one year and three months behind penitentiary walls, in the seclusion of a prison, and then to wear it for five years longer before the eyes of his fellow men.

"And there are those who really think that such a sentence, imposed on an old and a sick man, in all probability a sentence to actual punishment for the remainder of his life, was not severe enough for the crime of attempting to evade the payment of a tax, attempting to evade the payment of a debt. He should have been broken under the wheel: At the very least he should have been sentenced to what for him necessarily would have been life imprisonment. Well, perhaps I am altogether wrong, but I do not agree with these good men.

"The Capone sentence.

"4. There are those who speak of the Capone case. Is it possible that an intelligent man will compare that case with the Pendergast case? Capone fought the Government through trial court, Court of Appeals, and the Supreme Court. With all of that, his sentence was three years on each of three counts and he was required to pay one $10,000 fine. Reducing that sentence by eliminating one period of three years to make the case parallel with the case of Pendergast, in which there were only two counts, the sentence was six years plus a $10,000 fine. Pendergast pleaded guilty. He was not a former convict. He was an old and sick man. He has been dealt swift punishment, not punishmne tlong delayed.

Principles.

"Considering principles.

"5. At least 10 days before the Pendergast plea was entered it was intimated to me and to the United States Attorney that it would be entered. For 10 days I gave the most careful and painstaking thought to what principles should determine the sentence, reserving final determination of the sentence until I had heard statements in open court from both sides. I stated what those principles were at the time of sentence. I shall not repeat that statement now.

Sentence for Particular Offense.

"I gave especially careful consideration to the nature of the offense charged. The attempt to evade the payment of a tax is not a crime malum in se (bad in itself or inherently bad), as is murder, rape prohibition (bad because prohibited or bad merely because it is against the law). Ordinarily the only penalty for the offense is a civil penalty. In 99 out of 100 cases where it is established beyond any doubt that a citizen has attempted to evade the full payment of his income tax, the Government has accepted the tax plus the civil penalty. And that is as it should be. But the Government of the United States does not compromise for money what is truly and inherently a crime.

"Apparently there was one of the applicable principles upon which I did not sufficiently enlarge on Monday. I said then that if one is charged with attempting to evade a tax and pleads guilty to that charge he should not be punished for a score of other crimes with which he is not charged, as to which the law conclusively presumes his innocence. I thought the principle so obviously was sound that it needed no enlargement.

Principles on Which He Acted.

"Certainly it is within the discretion of the Judge to make the sentence small or great in accordance with the mitigating or aggravating circumstances of the crime. But the circumstances which may affect the sentence must be circumstances connected with the crime. For example, if an attempt to evade the tax succeeds previous attempts, admitted or proved, or other previous crimes admitted or proved, that is an aggravating circumstance that should affect the punishment.

"Again, if the attempt to evade the tax involves substantial amounts, that is an aggravating circumstance which should affect the punishment. But it is absurd to say that the source from which a citizen receives income, however bad, or the purpose for which he receives it, however evil, is an aggravating circumstance of an attempt by him to avoid payment of an income tax. The two things have no connection whatsoever.

"These principles seem to me now as they seemed on Monday to be true and sound. Perhaps I should have ignored them in the Pendergast case alone. Perhaps I should have ignored in that one case precedents and principles and the commands of reason. Perhaps I should have yielded to passion and hatred and revenge.

"30,000 Pieces of Silver."

"5. O'Malley, it appears, lived honorably for more than 60 years. He was honest in his transactions with his fellow men. Then he became an important officer of the State. In that capacity he settled with insurance companies a piece of litigation involving millions of dollars.

"He was bribed to make that settlement. For 30,000 pieces of silver he betrayed Missouri. The tax he attempted to evade was on the bribe money he received. But he has not been charged with the taking of a bribe. He could not be charged with that offense in this Federal Court. He has plead guilty to the charge of attempting to evade the tax, in amounts which are substantial. The punishment will be substantial.

"He has not plead guilty to bribe taking. The simple question is, should he be punished for the crime with which he is charged, and then punished, in the same judgment, for a crime which is not and could not be charged against him in this court, but which may and should be charged against him in another court? It is a simple question. The only answer possible is an emphatic 'no.'"

Average Penalties.

Judge Otis read a telegram from the Department of Justice regarding typical penalties assessed against income tax evaders in recent years.

The telegram, signed by James W. Morris, Assistant United States Attorney-General, stated:

"United States Attorney Milligan has referred to me your letter requesting information regarding sentences imposed upon pleas of guilty in tax cases where there was no previous criminal record.

"Hurried examination of our files shows that over the period of three and one-half years ending June 30, 1937, the average sentence upon plea in tax cases was approximately three months and a $1500 fine, irrespective of the previous record of the defendant.

"In cases somewhat comparable to Pendergast's, most severe sentences upon pleas of guilty in recent years, where there was no previous criminal record, were imposed in the cases of Claude M. Worley, Indianapolis Chief of Police, five years and a $10,000 fine; Julius Zweig, printer, two years and a $5000 fine, and Edward M. Smith, California business man, 18 months and a $25,000 fine.

"In recent years sentences more severe than in the Pendergast case were imposed upon pleas of guilty in 12 or 15 cases, but the majority had previous criminal records. All things considered, the Pendergast sentence is quite in line with comparable cases.

"I have discussed the Pendergast sentence with several Treasury officials and all are entirely satisfied with the sentence. With this I agree."

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 27.—While the concluding chapter of the Pendergast-O'Malley case was being written in the court of United States District Judge Otis, the grand jury which indicted the two politicians was pushing doggedly ahead with its investigation and voting a perjury indictment against a collector for the Kansas City gambling syndicate who was a witness before the jury.

The new indictment, against Stephen Oliver, was returned before District Judge Albert L. Reeves, 45 minutes after O'Malley's sentence had been pronounced.

Judge Reeves, when informed that the jury was recessing until June 6, said: "You have performed a very fine service, one which is very important to your country."

The indictment against Oliver sets fourth that, when asked whether he had collected "protection" money from various Kansas City gamblers, he falsely replied that he had not. The fact was, it is charged, that four gambling house proprietors each paid him for the syndicate, $200 a month from February, 1938, until last January.

Oliver was questioned Thursday in the inquiry into the Kansas City rackets with particular attention to the activities of Charles V. Carollo, overlord of gambling houses. Carollo was indicted yesterday, for the second time, on a charge of testifying falsely at a hearing on his application for naturalization.

by still others. They will have to receive permission from the court composed of Judges Kimbrough Stone, Albert L. Reeves and Merrill E. Otis, before the petition can be filed formally.

Another attack on the compromise is pending before United States District Judge John Caskie Collet at Kansas City. This was filed in January by attorneys for a group of policyholders, who yesterday asked leave of Judge Collet to amend their original allegations to include the additional charge of bribery.

SENATE APPROVES FIVE-JUDGE COURT FOR RAILROADS

MEASURE MUST BE PASSED BY HOUSE

Upper Legislative Body Has Acted on All but One of Administration Plans to Aid Carriers.

WASHINGTON, May 27 (AP).—The Senate cleared its decks today of another piece of major railroad relief legislation, approving and sending to the House a bill to set up a special five-judge Federal Court to expedite the handling of bankruptcy and receivership cases.

The measure was passed on a voice vote that left the opposition unrecorded, but a group led by Senator Clark (Dem.), Missouri, fought against passage until the last.

The Missourian, contending that establishing the new court might have "disastrous and disgraceful results," told his colleagues that Thomas D. Corcoran, youthful Presidential adviser, would select the judges. The measure provides for their appointment by the President.

The Senate's action left only one of a series of administration-sponsored railroad bills still on its calendar. It is a house-approved measure which would permit carriers in temporary financial difficulties to obtain voluntary agreements from stockholders for postponement of maturity dates on obligations.

Amendments Defeated.

The Senate previously had passed a bill consolidating regulatory control of all transportation, except aerial, under the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Before approving the court bill the Senate voted down an amendment proposed by Clark which would have stripped the new tribunal of its judicial status and a proposal by Senator McCarran (Dem.) Nevada, to send the measure to the Judiciary Committee for study.

Clark's remark that Corcoran would choose the judges came when Senator Adams (Dem.) Colorado, observed that President Roosevelt had "ignored" the section of the country west of the Mississipp River in making high judicial appointments.

"Does the Senator from Colorado doubt that any of the five men t be selected by Mr. Thomas D. Corcoran would have all wisdom?" Clark asked.

The Missourian argued that a five-man court, sitting in Washington, could not possibly be as familiar with local conditions as Federal judges operating in their own districts.

"Concentration of Power."

Adams said he was opposed to the "tremendous concentration of pow er" in the new tribunal.

Senator Walsh (Dem.) Massachu setts, said rail bankruptcy case should be left in the hands of Federal district judges, but urged that these judges be required to mak public their reasons for appoin ment of any receivers and publici all fees paid.

Proponents of the bill for the most part remained silent, conten ing themselves with letting the o position have its say. Senator Au tin (Rep.) Vermont, came to th general defense of the bill, how ever, describing it as necessary rail bankruptcies and receiversh were to be expedited.

Besides setting up the new cou the measure would revise the g eral procedure of rail bankrupt and receivership cases. The Int state Commerce Commission wou be required to certify to the n court certain standards of capit ization and forecasts of earnings.

Grand Jury Recesses to June 6 After True Bill Accusing Stephen Oliver of Perjury.

Judge Reeves, when informed that the jury was recessing until June 6, said: "You have performed a very fine service, one which is very important to your country."

The indictment against Oliver sets fourth that, when asked whether he had collected "protection" money from various Kansas City gamblers, he falsely replied that he had not. The fact was, it is charged, that four gambling house proprietors each paid him, for the syndicate, $200 a month from February, 1938, until last January.

Oliver was questioned Thursday in the inquiry into the Kansas City rackets with particular attention to the activities of Charles V. Carollo, overlord of gambling houses. Carollo was indicted yesterday, for the second time, on a charge of testifying falsely at a hearing on his application for naturalization.

by still others. They will have to receive permission from the court composed of Judges Kimbrough Stone, Albert L. Reeves and Merrill E. Otis, before the petition can be filed formally.

Another attack on the compromise is pending before United States District Judge John Caskie Collet at Kansas City. This was filed in January by attorneys for a group of policyholders, who yesterday asked leave of Judge Collet to amend their original allegations to include the additional charge of bribery.

SENATE APPROVES FIVE-JUDGE COURT FOR RAILROADS

MEASURE MUST BE PASSED BY HOUSE

Upper Legislative Body Has Acted on All but One of Administration Plans to Aid Carriers.

WASHINGTON, May 27 (AP).—The Senate cleared its decks today of another piece of major railroad relief legislation, approving and sending to the House a bill to set up a special five-judge Federal Court to expedite the handling of bankruptcy and receivership cases.

The measure was passed on a voice vote that left the opposition unrecorded, but a group led by Senator Clark (Dem.), Missouri, fought against passage until the last.

The Missourian, contending that establishing the new court might have "disastrous and disgraceful results," told his colleagues that Thomas D. Corcoran, youthful Presidential adviser, would select the judges. The measure provides for their appointment by the President.

The Senate's action left only one of a series of administration-sponsored railroad bills still on its calendar. It is a house-approved measure which would permit carriers in temporary financial difficulties to obtain voluntary agreements from stockholders for postponement of maturity dates on obligations.

Amendments Defeated.

The Senate previously had passed a bill consolidating regulatory control of all transportation, except aerial, under the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Before approving the court bill the Senate voted down an amendment proposed by Clark which would have stripped the new tribunal of its judicial status and a proposal by Senator McCarran (Dem.) Nevada, to send the measure to the Judiciary Committee for study.

Clark's remark that Corcoran would choose the judges came when Senator Adams (Dem.) Colorado, observed that President Roosevelt had "ignored" the section of the country west of the Mississippi River in making high judicial appointments.

"Does the Sentaor from Colorado doubt that any of the five men to be selected by Mr. Thomas D. Corcoran would have all wisdom?" Clark asked.

The Missourian argued that a five-man court, sitting in Washington, could not possibly be as familiar with local conditions as Federal judges operating in their own districts.

Adams said he was opposed to the "tremendous concentration of power" in the new tribunal.

Senator Walsh (Dem.) Massachusetts, said rail bankruptcy cases should be left in the hands of Federal district judges, but urged that these judges be required to make public their reasons for appointment of any receivers and publicize all fees paid.

Proponents of the bill for the most part remained silent, contenting themselves with letting the opposition have its say. Senator Austin (Rep.) Vermont, came to the general defense of the bill, however, describing it as necessary if rail bankruptcies and receiverships were to be expedited.

Besides setting up the new court, the measure would revise the general procedure of rail bankruptcy and receivership cases. The Interstate Commerce Commission would be required to certify to the new court certain standards of capitalization and forecasts of earnings.

YOUTH IN $2 ROBBERY GETS TWO-YEAR TERM

Harold Watson Sentenced for Part in Carondelet Post-office Theft.

Harold Watson, 22 years old, was sentenced to two years in the penitentiary yesterday when he pleaded guilty before United States District Judge George H. Moore of having participated with three other youths last March in the robbery of the Carondelet branch postoffice in which $2.63 was taken.

The other three robbers were arrested recently in Illinois and sentenced to prison there on other charges.

Harold J. Tate, 34, was sentenced to two and one-half years in the penitentiary on his plea of guilty to charges of forgery and theft from the mails. He admitted having stolen about 30 letters which contained checks from West End apartment mail boxes, forging indorsement on the checks and cashing them.

Other sentences meted out yesterday by Judge Moore, all on pleas of guilty, are as follows:

John Borawski, 21, two years for the theft of a case of women's shoes from an interstate shipment.

Theodore Brazell, 25, and Frank Scovill, 25, two and one-half years each, for the theft of an automobile which they stole in St. Louis and drove to Des Moines, Ia., where they sold it.

James Anthaino, Negro, of New York City, a year and a day for the theft of an automobile which he drove from New York to St. Louis.

Glad Dennis, Negro, six months in jail for the theft of a $23.25 WPA pay-check on which he forged the indorsement and cashed.

INFANTILE PARALYSIS VICTIM BATHES IN LOURDES BASIN

Fred B. Snite Jr., Chicago, in Water Half Hour While Pilgrims Outside Chant Prayers.

LOURDES, France, May 27 (AP).—Fred B. Snite Jr. bathed today at the Grotto of Lourdes, to which he had made a 5000-mile pilgrimage in his "iron lung." Behind the curtains of the three-gabled bathhouse to which the waters of the Grotto are piped, the 29-year-old Chicago infantile paralysis victim was lifted from the respiratory cylinder and placed in a seven-by-three-foot basin. He remained in the cold water almost half an hour, less than half the time he can breathe without artificial aid.

Snite decided suddenly just after noon to bathe in the waters from the Grotto where the Roman Catholic world believes the Virgin Mary revealed herself in 1858 to Bernadette Soubirous, a peasant girl.

While pilgrims outside chanted special prayers to the Virgin and St. Bernadette of the Grotto in French, the same service was repeated in English inside the baths.

DIONNE QUINTUPLETS 5 YEARS OLD TODAY; TO HAVE BIG CAKE

Family, Nurses, Dr. Dafoe to Attend Party in Nursery.

CALLANDER, Ont., May 27 (Canadian Press).—The Dionne Quintuplets, back from their Toronto meeting with King George and Queen Elizabeth last Monday will celebrate their fifth birthday tomorrow with a big white cake with five candles—one each for the sisters to blow out.

They will be hostesses in their nursery home to a family party including their father, mother and seven brothers and sisters as well as the nursery staff and their physician, Allan Roy Dafoe.

Presents have arrived from many parts of the world.

Since their first trip away from home, the 220-mile journey to Toronto, Emile has been teasing for another train ride, and Marie is under the delusion that a bridge their train crossed before entering Toronto was the "London Bridge" she's heard so much about at playtime.

ROOSEVELT, IN OLD CLOTHES, LOOKS OVER FAMILY ESTATE

Sees Justice Pecora but Indicates There'll Be Little News From Hyde Park This Week End.

HYDE PARK, N. Y., May 27 (AP).—President Roosevelt, wearing some old clothes, began a quiet week end today, looking over his family estate, which will be opened in two weeks for King George and Queen Elizabeth's visit.

Word was passed along that there would be no public announcements and little news from Hyde Park but the President did receive Ferdinand Pecora, New York Supreme Court Justice, in the afternoon. While the call was described as "social," Justice Pecora carried a brief case.

The President came from Washington this morning by special train. Before driving to his country home, he chatted with the Rev. Frank R. Wilson, pastor of St. James Episcopal Church.

C. J. SNYDER REDEEMS BOAT

Pays $500 in Back U. S. Income Tax to Regain Craft.

A 30-foot, cabin-cruiser motorboat belonging to C. J. Snyder, former general manager of the St. Louis Star-Times, seized recently by internal revenue officers to satisfy a delinquent Federal income tax bill, was released yesterday on payment of the bill, about $500, by Snyder.

The boat, said to be worth about $5000, was to have been offered for sale by auction Monday at a boatyard on North Wharf street.

BROKER CONFESSES THEFT OF $60,000

H. C. Elfast, Expelled From New York Exchange, Surrenders to Attorney-General.

NEW YORK, May 27 (AP).—Henry C. Elfast, expelled from the New York Stock Exchange, confessed today that he had misappropriated more than $60,000 of customers' money and had used the funds to purchase his membership in the exchange last year, according to Assistant State Attorney-General Ambrose V. McCall.

Elfast, sought since his expulsion from the exchange last Wednesday, voluntarily appeared in the office of Attorney-General John J. Bennett, who had previously announced more than $80,000 alleged shortages in customers' accounts in the now-dissolved stock exchange firm of Elfast, Frisk & Co.

Subsequently Elfast went to a Brooklyn address to pick up his personal records. Later he was to be taken to the office of District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey for further questioning.

After Elfast's expulsion, when detectives were unable to find him or the books of his firm, Bennett subpenaed Howland C. Davis, vice-president of the exchange, to determine why the exchange had not promptly notified officials after their auditors discovered $16,000 alleged shortages in an investigation begun last March.

Davis, through counsel, promised Bennett and Dewey that the exchange would hereafter strive to co-operate with law enforcement authorities in similar cases.

ONE CLIPPER ENDS ROUND TRIP TO EUROPE, SECOND TAKES OFF

Yankee Back in Flying Time of 72 Hours, Including Detour to Avoid Bad Weather.

NEW YORK, May 27 (AP).—Scarcely had the 41½-ton Yankee Clipper come to rest at Port Washington today, completing the first regularly scheduled round trip mail flight to Europe, than her sister ship, the Atlantic Clipper, took off on the second flight at 3:26 p. m.

Coming in six hours late as the result of a 300-mile detour via Bermuda to avoid bad weather in mid-Atlantic, Capt. Arthur E. La Porte of the Yankee Clipper said his entire 11,000-mile journey to and from Europe had been uneventful. Flying time totaled 72 hours, he said, and elapsed time one week. Time from Marseilles, France, to Port Washington was 35 hours.

Capt. Harold E. Gray of the Atlantic Clipper conferred briefly with La Porte before lifting his own big vessel from the waters of Manhasset Bay. He had aboard a crew of 12 and a Pan-American Airways employe, Carl N. Dewey, who will take charge of the company airport at Lisbon, Portgual.

"Our landing at Bermuda this morning was entirely routine," said La Porte, "as it was provided for in the flight operations manual. I had enough fuel to have easily come into New York but that would have cut into our normal reserve, and I did not want to do that."

Indicative of the speeds which trans-Atlantic passengers may expect when regular flights start about July 1 was La Porte's report that eastbound he averaged 164 miles per hour and 144 westbound.

COURSE 'RIVER' HAS TAKEN SINCE BOSS DEFIED GOVERNOR

Year Has Piled Up Wreckage, With Pendergast and O'Malley on Way to Prison.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 27 (AP).—In the spring of 1938, Boss Tom Pendergast won another Kansas City election. Enthusiastic over it, he blasted at his Democratic intra-party foe, Gov. Lloyd C. Stark, the warning:

"I now say let the river take its course."

Since then here is what has happened:

Stark's forces whipped Pendergast's hands down over a Supreme Court post the following fall.

Three Pendergast-backed county officials have been indicted on charges ranging from neglect of duty to misappropriating county funds.

A bill is on the verge of being enacted giving Stark control of the politically potent police department.

Pendergast-backed H. F. McElroy has resigned under fire as city manager.

Approximately 1000 Pendergast employes have been cut off the city payrolls.

Lucrative contracts with firms friendly to Pendergast have been canceled.

Pendergast and R. Emmet O'Malley, former State Insurance Superintendent, have been ordered to Leavenworth Prison Monday for terms of more than a year for evading income taxes.

The Bridlespur Hunt Club's annual horse show is to be held on the club's grounds in Huntleigh today, beginning at 9 a. m. The program is to continue until 4:45 p. m.

A special feature is to be the Gay Nineties class, scheduled for 2:40 p. m., in which entrants will wear costumes and habits similar to those of the last decade of the nineteenth century.

CHILD LEFT AT HOME KILLS BROTHER, SELF

Dying Girl, 10, Tells Nurse She Warned Mother She'd Shoot Brother, 4.

BARBOURVILLE, Ky., May 27 (AP).—The bullet-marked bodies of 10-year-old Elsie Higgins and her brother, Joe, 4, were returned by an undertaker tonight to their parents' four-room mountain farm home.

Coroner Clarence Mitchell returned a verdict of murder and suicide, saying Elsie shot her brother, then killed herself.

In a Barbourville hospital, before she died last night, Elsie rallied from her wounds, Sheriff R. C. Partin said, and told nurses:

"I told mother if she went to town and didn't take me with her I'd kill the other kids and burn down the house."

"Elsie often told us that," the Sheriff quoted the girl's mother, Mrs. Will Higgins, as saying, "but we never took her seriously."

She said Elsie objected to being left to care for the other children—David, 8, Will Jr., 3, and Joe.

Sheriff Partin reconstructed the tragedy this way:

Elsie renewed her threats when her mother told her she was coming to Barbourville yesterday. After Mrs. Higgins left, she seized a revolver and fired one shot at Joe, while he lay on a bed. She shot him again and then fired two shots into her body.

David said he witnessed the shooting and fled, seeking aid. The fourth child was not at home.

Neighbors say the girl was of normal mentality and records of a nearby country school, where she was in the fourth grade, showed she made average marks.

Her father lives most of each week in a coal-mining camp, 50 miles away.

Double funeral services will be tomorrow.

TWO HURT WHEN STRUCK BY AUTOS IN RAINSTORM

Man, 73, Suffers Skull Injury, Woman a Brain Concussion in Traffic Accidents.

Two persons were injured when struck by automobiles during a heavy rainstorm late yesterday.

Herman Friedewald, a druggist, 819 Market street, suffered a skull injury and fractured leg when struck at Fourteenth and Market streets. The driver said he was Edward Wondolowski, 616 North Sixth street, East St. Louis. Friedewald, 73 years old, is in City Hospital.

Miss Ruth Hamilton, a clerk, 4616 Lindell boulevard, suffered a brain concussion when struck by an automobile shoved forward by the impact of a collision at Delmar boulevard and Seventh street. William C. Fader of Jennings, driver of the second car, told police his car skidded on wet pavement into the automobile of Virgil Foster, 3451 Indiana avenue, who had stopped to let Miss Hamilton pass. She is 29 years old. She was taken to Jewish Hospital.

WILLIAM KIEL

ST. LOUIS VICTIM OF SQUALUS DIVORCED BUT A SHORT TIME

His Mother, Mrs. Louis Schulte, Expected to Draw U. S. Compensation If He Did Not Rewed.

Frank H. Schulte, 33-year-old St. Louisan, reported among those thought killed in the disaster to the United States submarine Squalus, off the coast of New Hampshire last Tuesday, was granted a divorce by Circuit Judge John W. Joynt last Dec. 19 from Mrs. Elizabeth Schulte. They were married Dec. 21, 1934, at Cristobal, Canal Zone, and separated March 7, 1937, according to his petition, in which he alleged that she abandoned him.

She did not resist the suit. Schulte's attorney, Daniel P. Reardon, said he did not know the present whereabouts of Mrs. Schulte. If Schulte has not remarried, his mother, Mrs. Louise Schulte, 4238 Wyoming street, a widow, will be entitled to any Government compensation accruing because of his death, Reardon said. Schulte was a machinist, first class, on the Squalus.

MILWAUKEE 'STORM TROOPERS' PARADE FOR FRITZ KUHN

Bund Leader, Indicted in New York on Forgery and Larceny Charges, Attends Protest Meeting.

MILWAUKEE, May 27 (AP).—Uniformed "storm troopers" and children paraded within an auditorium here tonight when Fritz Kuhn, national leader of the German-American Volksbund, arrived to address the Milwaukee Bund.

About 40 men in black trousers, gray shirts and black ties, and 40 children marched down the aisles and took front seats. The boys wore khaki shirts and black breeches, the girls gingham dresses.

A large portrait of George Washington was on the stage, flanked by bunting and two American flags. The troopers carried four American flags and four barren flag poles. The auditorium prohibits display of Bund flags.

Kuhn was released on bond in New York yesterday after pleading not guilty to indictments charging forgery and larceny of Bund funds. George Froboese, Midwest Bund leader, announced that tonight's meeting was "to show these fellows down East that they can't get away with murder."

BOY TREATED FOR COLD DIES OF LOCKJAW

William Kiel, 8, Whose Parents Considered Foot Wound Just a Scratch, Succumbs.

William, 8-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul J. Kiel of Monier place, Glendale, died yesterday at Missouri Baptist Hospital of tetanus which resulted after he stepped on a nail in the back yard of his home May 17.

The boy's father said the wound looked like a small scratch and was not considered serious. Last Tuesday evening, six days after the incident, William went to a movie and when he returned he complained of a stiff neck. The next morning his father took him to a physician's office, where he was treated for a cold.

"We all thought it was just a cold from sleeping without covers," the father said. "The scratch was just a dot. A few hours later, however, the boy became seriously ill and was taken to the hospital."

The boy, youngest child of Mr. and Mrs. Kiel, was a third-grade pupil at St. Mary Magdalen School, Brentwood. His father is a plumber. Besides his parents, two sisters and a brother survive.

The funeral will be Tuesday morning at 8 o'clock from the Schnur undertaking establishment, 3125 Lafayette avenue, to St. Mary Magdalen Church, 8753 Manchester road. Burial will be in SS. Peter and Paul Cemetery.

Doctors Remove Missile but Are Unable to say Whether Patient Will Lose Sight.

A steel pellet, which rebounded after it hit a target and lodged in the right eyeball of Walter A. Rambach Jr., 16 years old, was removed by physicians yesterday at Deaconess Hospital.

The boy was shooting with a BB gun Friday at an improvised target placed on the garage door in the rear of his home, 3429 Halliday avenue, when he was injured. Physicians at the hospital said they were unable yet to determine whether the sight of the eye would be lost.

Milligan Tells Court That O'Malley Made First Proposal of Bribe To Settle With Insurance Firms

U. S. Prosecutor Details Payments Made to Former State Official by A. L. McCormack in St. Louis.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 27.—R. Emmet O'Malley made inquiry as to whether the fire insurance companies would pay for arrangement of a compromise on their Missouri rates four months before he signed the settlement as State Superintendent of Insurance, the Court was told today after he pleaded guilty of evasion of Federal income taxes on the $62,500 bribe he got for the deal.

United States Attorney Maurice M. Milligan, in outlining the facts of O'Malley's guilt at length, said this inquiry was made by O'Malley of Alphonse L. McCormack of St. Louis, then president of the Missouri Insurance Agents' Association, at the Coronado Hotel, St. Louis, Jan. 13, 1935.

McCormack, the prosecutor continued, carried the question to the late Charles R. Street of Chicago, insurance executive, who became the payoff man for the stock fire insurance concerns. Settlement would have to be made through Boss Thomas J. Pendergast of Kansas City, McCormack was told by O'Malley, and a meeting of Pendergast and Street would be helpful, the prosecutor continued.

The compromise agreement was signed by O'Malley here, May 18, 1935, only after he personally took a copy to Pendergast for approval at headquarters of the Boss, the Jackson County Democratic Club, 1908 Main street, Milligan declared.

Bribe Payments in St. Louis.

A $22,500 first instalment of the bribe was offered O'Malley by McCormack at the Coronado Hotel, St. Louis, May 23, 1935, but O'Malley, protesting that he had no place to keep the currency, took only $2000 then and called for the rest at St. Louis, in lots of $1000 or $2000, between June 26, 1935, and March 30, 1936, Milligan related. The final payment of $40,000, cash, was handed O'Malley by McCormack at the Coronado April 9, 1936, he added. Venue for possible State prosecution of O'Malley for accepting a bribe and McCormack for giving it was placed in St. Louis by these disclosures.

In accepting the $40,000, O'Malley remarked that he would place it in his niece's name, and the next day O'Malley's wife requested her niece, Mrs. Adaline Ayres Cross, to rent a safe-deposit box in her own name for Mrs. O'Malley's use, Milligan said. Nearly every month thereafter, until last January, and sometimes oftener, he went on, Mrs. Cross, who almost always was accompanied by her aunt, took currency from the box. In the summer of 1937, the Government counsel pointed out, Mrs. O'Malley obtained power of attorney and entered the box at will in her niece's absence.

After Pendergast had obtained $305,000 of the payoff money for himself, it was O'Malley who induced McCormack to get an additional $10,000 for the Boss from Street, to pay expenses of Pendergast's serious illness, in October, 1937, Milligan disclosed.

Repeats Chain of Evidence.

Milligan's 45-minute statement opened with a repetition of the chain of facts about preliminary phases of the Government's investigation, which was first presented when Pendergast pleaded guilty of income tax evasion last Monday. Milligan continued:

"The events preceding this so-called compromise agreement, and the means by which it was brought about, are as follows: On Sunday, Jan. 13, 1935, Robert Emmet O'Malley, the Superintendent of Insurance, went to St. Louis and registered at the Coronado Hotel, Rooms 925 and 926. In one of those rooms, he met and conferred with A. L. McCormack, a St. Louis insurance man, who at the time w s president of the Missouri Insurance Agents' Association, and friend of Thomas J. Pendergast and Charles R. Street.

"During this conference, while the defendant and McCormack were discussing the Missouri fire insurance rate litigation, the defendant asked McCormack if he thought the fire insurance companies would like to settle the rate cases. McCormack answered that he thought the companies would.

In one of those rooms, he met and conferred with A. L. McCormack, a St. Louis insurance man, who at the time was president of the Missouri Insurance Agents' Association, and friend of Thomas J. Pendergast and Charles R. Street.

"During this conference, while the defendant and McCormack were discussing the Missouri fire insurance rate litigation, the defendant asked McCormack if he thought the fire insurance companies would like to settle the rate cases. McCormack answered that he thought the companies would.

McCormack Sees Street.

"The defendant then asked McCormack whether the companies would be willing to pay anybody for helping them out on such a settlement. McCormack replied that, while he could not answer for the companies, Charles R. Street was in Chicago and that he would be glad to place any suggestions or proposals before him. The defendant then stated that any settlement would have to be arranged through T. J. Pendergast and that a meeting between Street and Pendergast might help a lot in settling the rate cases.

"McCormack agreed to see Street and to tell him of the conversation. The defendant left Coronado Hotel, Jan. 14, 1935, and on Jan. 15, 1935, the following day, McCormack went to Chicago to see Street.

"At Chicago, he informed Street of the defendant's inquiry of him as to whether the fire insurance companies would be willing to pay someone for helping to secure a settlement of the fire insurance rate litigation and told him also that the defendant had said that any settlement would have to be arranged through T. J. Pendergast and that a meeting between Pendergast and Street might help a lot in settling the rate cases. Street told McCormack that he would be delighted to have the long-drawn out litigation settled and that he would be more than glad to see Pendergast and to discuss with him the possibility and way of securing such a settlement.

Another St. Louis Meeting.

"At this conference, there was no discussion of what amount of money would be necessary to secure such a result. On the same day, McCormack returned to St. Louis and three days afterward on Jan. 18, 1935, the defendant again registered at the Coronado Hotel, taking the same rooms, 925 and 926, and remaining there until Jan. 21, 1935.

"During the course of this visit, the defendant and McCormack again discussed the fire insurance rate litigation and McCormack told the defendant of the enthusiasm that Street had manifested at the thought of making a settlement of the litigation and of Street's willingness to have a conference with Pendergast at Chicago. The defendant promised McCormack to get in touch with Pendergast immediately and to advise him of Street's desire for a conference with him in Chicago, and suggested to McCormack that he see Street and have Street set a date."

Meeting in Chicago.

Then followed a recital of the meeting of Pendergast, McCormack and Street at the Palmer House in Chicago on Jan. 23, 1935, which was given in detail in the statement against Pendergast last Monday and published in the Post-Dispatch that day. The District Attorney also repeated his story of the payment May 9, 1935, by McCormack to Pendergast of $50,000, and then departed from the chronological account to reveal the typewritten letters McCormack admitted writing to Street, although he did not sign them. Milligan said the letters were found by intelligence unit agents last July 9, among the personal effects of Street, then deceased.

Milligan told of the conference of May 14, 1935, at the Muehlebach Hotel in Kansas City among O'Malley, McCormack and representatives of the insurance companies, when plans for the compromise were drafted. Then the District Attorney took up again the narrative of O'Malley's activities, as follows:

"On May 18, 1935, four days after the conference at the Muehlebach Hotel at Kansas City on May 14, 1935, the tentative plans for the settlement were finally drafted into a written agreement which was signed by the defendant as Superintendent of Insurance, and Street, as representative of the fire insurance companies, but only after the defendant had first personally delivered a copy of the agreement to Pendergast at his office at the Jackson County Democratic Club, 1908 Main street, Kansas City, Mo., for his approval. Pendergast approved it.

"A few days later, May 21, 1935, McCormack went to Chicago. This time he did not stop to register at a hotel, but proceeded directly to Street's office. There he met Street, who gave him an additional $50,000 in currency and directed him to deliver it to Pendergast at Kansas City, Mo. As early as possible, he came to Kansas City by train, and upon arriving here, went immediately to Pendergast's office at 1908 Main street, and delivered the $50,000 in currency to him in accordance with the instructions of Street and in keeping with the agreement. Of this $50,000 Pendergast took for himself this time $5000.

$22,500 for O'Malley.

"This he placed in his private office safe. The remaining $45,000 he immediately returned to McCormack, directing him to deliver $22,500 to the defendant and telling him he could keep $22,500 for himself. McCormack and Pendergast then attended the races at Riverside Park, and that night McCormack went to St. Louis on the midnight train, carrying with him the $22,500 which Pendergast had told him he might keep for himself and the $22,500 which he had been instructed to deliver to the defendant.

"This last $50,000 was a part of the $100.500 shown by the partnership books of the law firm of Hicks & Folonie to have passed out of Street's hands and through the partnership account and back into his hands on May 9, 1935, as previously stated. Now there remained of the original amount which went through the partnership account only $500. Street kept this for himself.

How O'Malley Was Paid.

"Two days previously on May 20, 1935, the defendant had gone to St. Louis and registered at the Coronado Hotel, Rooms 1025-1026. Actually he remained there until May 24, 1935. But on May 23, 1935, and before his departure, McCormack met the defendant at the Coronado Hotel, and informed him that he had $22,500 which he had brought him from Pendergast. The defendant said that he had no place to put the money and requested McCormack to give him then only $2000 of it and to keep the rest for him and give it to him as he would need it.

"Subsequently according to McCormack, the defendant came to St. Louis at various times and secured amounts of this money, ordinarily $1000 or $2000. McCormack had placed the money in his own safety deposit box at the Mississippi Valley Trust Co., and, of course, it was necessary when the defendant asked him for money to go to that box to secure it.

"An examination of the records of the Coronado Hotel, and an examination of McCormack's safety deposit box entry records at the Mississippi Valley Trust Co., show that the defendant was in St. Louis registered at the Coronado Hotel and that McCormack entered his safety deposit box on the following dates: June 26, July 31, Sept. 23, Sept. 25, Oct. 10, Nov. 27, 1935, and Jan. 20, Feb. 18 and March 30, 1936; McCormack stated that he knew positively that he had disbursed the entire sum of $22,500 to the defendant in this manner by March 30, 1936.

Court Accepts Compromise.

"Subsequently, the so-called compromise and agreement executed by Street and the defendant, after its submission to Pendergast for his approval, was presented to this court, three Judges sitting, as a legitimate and untainted agreement, and this Court took it under advisement. Afterwards, on Feb. 19, 1936, the Court entered its order that the premiums impounded by the Court be distributed by the custodian in accordance with the provisions of the written agreement, namely, 20 per cent payable at once to the policy holders, 50 per cent payable at once to the fire insurance companies and 30 per cent payable into a trust fund of which Charles R. Street and Robert J. Folonie were the trustees.

"Out of this trust fund, the trustees were ordered first to pay the expenses of the litigation, and then to pay the balance to the fire insurance companies. After the payment of expenses, there remained in this trust fund a sum equal to 16 per cent of the total impounded premiums. Each fire insurance company was therefore entitled to receive from Charles R. Street and Robert J. Folonie, as trustees, a payment or payments amounting to 16 per cent of its own impounded premiums. Each company did receive a payment representing 11 per cent of its impounded premiums. But with the 11 per cent checks to the first insurance companies went a memorandum from Street directing them to issue their checks to him as their agent in an amount representing 5 per cent of their total impounded premium. This was done by each company. The total amount paid to Street by these checks by the fire insurance companies was $330,000."

$330,000 in One Payment.

Milligan told again of McCormack's visit to Street in Chicago on April 1, 1936, on which Street gave him $330,000 in currency with instructions to deliver it to Pendergast at Kansas City. He did deliver the money, to Pendergast's home, that evening, receiving from the boss $80,000, with further orders to give half to O'Malley.

"On April 2, 1936, at St. Louis," Milligan related, "McCormack, after arriving that morning from Kansas City, went to his safety deposit box at the Mississippi Val-

Now Clear Why Boss Asked Stark to Reappoint O'Malley

THE recent disclosures in the notorious $10,000,000 Pendergast-O'Malley fire insurance rate compromise of 1935 show clearly why the one big thing Boss Tom Pendergast wanted early in 1937, just before expiration of the four-year term of Insurance Superintendent R. Emmet O'Malley, was O'Malley's reappointment by Gov. Lloyd C. Stark.

On July 26, 1937, just after expiration of O'Malley's term, the Governor, returning from a vacation in Alaska, told Pendergast in Colorado Springs he would let O'Malley stay in office one year on condition the superintendent's official acts met with his approval.

Less than three months later O'Malley refused to sign a motion, prepared at Stark's instance, for withdrawal of the Insurance Department from the compromise as it affected $1,750,000 in premiums impounded in State court. This fund was in litigation in the State Supreme Court. The compromise, as affecting the $10,000,000 impounded in Federal Court, already had been approved by a three-Judge Federal Court. Then, on Oct. 19, several days after O'Malley's refusal, the Governor summarily removed him from office through the simple expedient of announcing appointment of his successor. By this action the Governor definitely severed all relations with Boss Pendergast.

Although Gov. Stark was obviously suspicious of the compromise, he did not know then that Pendergast had got $315,000 and O'Malley $62,500 of the $440,000 corruption fund paid by the late Charles R. Street of Chicago, representing insurance companies, to put over the compromise.

Seven days later on April 9, 1936, the defendant telegraphed McCormack that he and his wife would arrive in St. Louis about 3 p. m. that day. McCormack went to the Union Station to meet them, and, upon their arrival, he told the defendant that he had $40,000 for him from Pendergast. The defendant inquired of him whether he could deliver him the money that day, inasmuch as he intended leaving St. Louis that night.

"McCormack said that he could do so if the defendant would go with him to his safety deposit box at the Mississippi Valley Trust Co. at once and before the bank closed. McCormack and the defendant and his wife then drove to the Mississippi Valley Trust Co., where McCormack entered his safety deposit box at 3:33 p. m. and extracted one of the envelopes containing $40,000 from it, and put it in his pocket.

"Then he and the defendant and his wife drove to the Coronado Hotel, arriving there at about 4:05 p. m. There the defendant and his wife registered, taking rooms 825 and 826. McCormack accompanied them to their rooms. During the course of his visit, McCormack handed the defendant the envelope containing the $40,000. According to the records of the Coronado Hotel, the defendant and his wife checked out of their rooms that night.

Put Money in Niece's Name.

"During the conversation between McCormack and the defendant in the hotel room, the defendant stated that he was going to place this money in his niece's name.

"By this time, $430,000 of the agreed price of $750,000 had been delivered to Pendergast and of that sum Pendergast had retained $305,000 for himself and delivered $125,000 to McCormack for equal division between himself and the defendant.

"On the next day, April 10, 1936, at Kansas City, Mo., Mrs. O'Malley requested her niece, Mrs. Adaline Cross, to rent in her name, for Mrs. O'Malley's use, a safe deposit box at the Union National Bank, Ninth and Walnut streets, Kansas City, Mo., and Mrs. Cross agreed to do so. Accompanied by Mrs. O'Malley, she went to the bank and there rented for Mrs. O'Malley's use, safe deposit box No. 6177, in the name: "Mrs. Adaline Ayres Cross," and Mrs. O'Malley then placed a large package in it. As is well known, all banks, including this one, keep an exact daily record of all entries by renters into safe deposit boxes, and such record shows the date and the exact time of the day when a box is entered.

Monthly Withdrawals.

"The records of the Union National Bank disclose that Mrs Cross entered the box thereafter between April 10, 1936, and the month of January, 1939, almost every month, and oftentimes more than once a month, and, according to Mrs. Cross, on almost every occasion she was accompanied by Mrs. O'Malley.

"On such occasions, Mrs. O'Malley would remove the large package from the box, lay it on one o the desks there, extract currency from it, place the currency in one of the bank envelopes provided by the bank at the desk and then re turn the large package to the box On June 14, 1937, Mrs. Cross tol Mrs. O'Malley she intended to b absent from Kansas City durin the summer. The defendant asked McCormack if he would be able to obtain $10,000 from Street for Pendergast. McCormack advised the defendant that he would confer with Street and see if it would be possible to obtain this $10,000.

"On Oct. 21, 1936, McCormack went to Chicago and registered at the Palmer House. He visited Street and informed him of the defendant's conversation with him regarding the illness of Pendergast and the latter's need for $10,000. Street advised McCormack that he would endeavor to obtain this money. McCormack stayed in Chicago until the night of Oct. 23, 1936, at which time Street informed him he remained unable to make any payment. McCormack then returned to St. Louis.

"On the following day, Feb. 9, 1938, Mrs. O'Malley at the O'Malley residence, delivered to Mrs. Cross, $500 in $100 bills, which was paid by Mr. and Mrs. Cross as a down payment on the house. On Feb. 21, 1938, after the final purchase papers had been drawn, and the balance of the $7500 was then needed, Mrs. Cross again went to the O'Malley residence and Mrs. O'Malley there delivered to her $7000 in $100 bills, which she took to her home and delivered to her husband, J. C. Cross.

"Previously, the real estate agent from whom the house was being purchased had directed Mr. and Mrs. Cross that they should be prepared to present him with a certified check or bank draft for $7000 at the time the purchase became final. On advising Mr. and Mrs. O'Malley of his desire, Mrs. Cross was informed by them that they desired to avoid record evidence and wanted the transaction handled in currency. This was done.

"On the following day, however, Oct. 24, 1936, Street transmitted $10.000 by bank credit to McCormack at St. Louis. McCormack collected the $10,000 at the bank, reduced it to currency, and proceeded to Kansas City, Mo., on the midnight train. Arriving there the following morning, McCormack went from the Union Station by taxicab directly to Menorah Hospital where Pendergast was recovering from an illness. At the hospital he went to Pendergast's room and delivered the $10,000 in currency to him in accordance with instructions of Street and in keeping with the agreement."

Niece Borrowed $7500.

"During the rental period of this box Mrs. Cross informed Mr. and Mrs. O'Malley that her husband, J. C. Cross and she desired to borrow $7500 for use in the purchase of a house at 7348 Wayne, Kansas City, Mo. Mr. and Mrs. O'Malley told Mr. and Mrs. Cross to proceed with the preliminary agreements for the purchase of the house and that they would let them have the money. Mr. and Mrs. Cross proceeded to make these arrangements.

"Shortly afterwards, Mr. and Mrs. Cross told Mr. and Mrs. O'Malley that they then need $500 of the $7500 for a down payment and Mr. and Mrs. O'Malley agreed with them that Mrs. Cross should go with Mrs. O'Malley to the safe deposit box and get the money.

"Accordingly, on Feb. 8, 1938, Mrs. Cross, accompanied by Mrs. O'Malley, entered the safe deposit box at 12:30 p. m. Mrs. O'Malley removed the large envelope from the box, placed it on the desk, removed a large amount of currency from it, placed it in a bank envelope, and replaced the large envelope in the safe deposit box.

"A total of $440,000 was thus paid by Street to McCormack for delivery by him to Pendergast as a part payment of the $750,000 agreed upon by Pendergast and Street as the price to be paid Pendergast for procuring the defendant to settle the first insurance rate litigation. Subsequently, and before any other payment could be collected, Street died and the remaining $310,000 balance of the original agreed price of $750,000 was never paid. Of course, the defendant did not report to the Government that he had received these payments from Pendergast for making the settlement, or offer to pay income taxes on them.

"Sometime during the months of August or September, 1938, while McCormack's income tax liability was under investigation, McCormack, in a conversation with O'Malley at St. Louis, explained to the defendant that he himself was being investigated by agents, especially with respect to this insurance settlement. The defendant stated he was glad he himself had placed his money in a place where it could not be found."

Milligan then summarized the charges of tax evasion contained in the indictment, adding that investigation had not shown any other O'Malley income on which tax was due.

"These Are the Facts."

"These are the facts," Milligan told Judge Otis, "they serve adequately, we think, to convey to your honor the picture of this defendant and of his offenses. Of course, we stand ready to answer any question that the Court may desire to put, and, at our request, agents of the Intelligence Unit, Bureau of Internal Revenue, are here, present in court to give the Court, if the Court desires, information concerning their investigations and the evidence upon which we have based this statement of facts.

"For the information of the Court, may we say that the defendant has consistently failed to lend to the investigation any character of assistance.

"It is the custom in criminal cases for us to present to the Court, along with the facts of guilt, any extenuating circumstances which may exist in the case. There is only one circumstance which we consider to be in any measure extenuating. The defendant has entered a plea of guilty, and his admission of guilt is to a certain degree an extenuating circumstance for it does obviate the need for a trial and saves the Government a large expense, but this admission of guilt did not come until the investigation of the defendant's case, conducted at an expense to the United States vastly greater than the expense of a trial would be, must have made it apparent to him that further resistance by denying his guilt and standing trial could only result in the establishment of his guilt by overwhelming proof—and a verdict of guilty by a jury.

"In keeping with the practice of this Court, we do not attempt to suggest what sentence should be imposed upon this defendant for his crimes. As is well known to all, the assessment of punishment in this Court is the Court's sole prerogative, and so it should be. Nevertheless, we feel it to be our duty before closing this statement of the facts to make the observation to the Court that the defendant, by palming off on this court a fraudulent and corrupt settlement of the fire insurance rate litigation, has sought to make a mockery of its processes, and is guilty of a most flagrant contempt."

MORGENTHAU FOR "RECOVERY" TAXES, BALANCED BUDGET

been made on this point, and exclaimed: "Unfortunately, I am only human."

Morgenthau offered figures to show that of the increase in public debt since 1933, including estimates for 1939 and 1940, unemployment relief represents more than half, or $16,231,000,000. He said that almost 60 per cent of the total tax revenues of the country are collected by state and local governments.

Congressman Jenkins (Rep.), Ohio, asked whether President Roosevelt had approved the statement just read by the Secretary. Morgenthau replied in the affirmative.

Jenkins retorted that he hoped some day the Secretary would assert himself, and give the committee the benefit of his independent judgment.

As defects and iniquities in the tax structure which may hinder business expansion and investment, the Secretary mentioned tax exempt securities, as drawing away savings which would otherwise enter private business; the failure of the income tax laws to provide for carrying over business losses to be deducted from future profits; and the "erratic operation" of the capital stock and excess profits taxes, with a result that such taxes are at times "inordinately high."

Study should be given, Morgenthau said, to the questions as to whether $2000 is not too low a figure for the excess of corporate capital losses over capital gains which may be deducted from ordinary income.

Several Democratic members applauded his suggestion that the House Ways and Means and Appropriations committees, and the Senate Finance and Appropriations Committees, should meet as a joint committee on fiscal policy, to consider over-all aspects of revenue and expenditure problems.

Continuing the heckling of the Secretary by Republican members, Representative Knutsen of Minnesota referred to President Roosevelt's speech at the Convention of Retailers and asked whether Morgenthau regarded "internal debt" as an asset or liability.

"There seems to be an impression," said Knutsen, "that debt is debt only when it is owed to foreigners. I wonder whether a bank could operate on that basis."

When the Secretary hesitated, McCormack went to his rescue by stating that internal debt may be either an asset or a liability.

Congressman Reed (Rep.), New York, protested that Morgenthau's proposals "only scratched the surface," and regretted the administration had not seen fit to come before the committee "with a definite and thorough-going program of fiscal policies," beginning with an admission that its recovery measures had "utterly failed." The Secretary made no reply.

In the matter of Federal-state tax conflicts, Morgenthau suggested that Congress set up a temporary national commission to study and report on the various aspects of inter-governmental policies. He proposed the commission be composed of men of ability representing the public at large.

Not only Government salaries but also Government securities should cease to be tax-exempt, the Secretary urged, and alternative rate plans under the Social Security Act, for the next three years should be considered.

Returning to the attack, Congressman Jenkins asked whether repeated oversubscriptions of Government bond issues, at the lowest interest rates known to history, did not show that investors have no safe place to go with private investments.

"Exactly," replied Morgenthau.

If recovery arrives, Jenkins insisted, and private industry begins a demand on savings, will there not be a stampede among investors to rid themselves of low-income Government securities?

"I have long since given up trying to account for the vagaries of investors," answered the Secretary. "During 1937 and 1938 the banks sold $1,500,000,000 of Government bonds, chiefly to insurance companies. During the last few months the large New York banks have suddenly decided they wanted Federal bonds in large quantities. Why I don't know, in either case."

VETERANS PARADE, SERVICE ON PLAZA, ON MEMORIAL DAY

Graves in Many Cemeteries Will Be Decorated—Some Veterans' Posts Will Act Today.

A morning service at the Soldiers' Memorial and a downtown parade by veterans' organizations will be the principal public observances of Memorial day in St. Louis Tuesday.

All public and business offices, public and parochial schools, and all exchanges except the livestock exchange will, as usual, be closed. There will be no delivery of mail and the Sunday schedule will obtain as to collections. Only the main postoffice will be open. The Public Library and all its branches will also be closed.

Graves in many cemeteries will, as is customary, be decorated. Some veterans' posts will have services this afternoon at the graves of Civil, Spanish, and World War dead.

For vacationists and especially fishermen the day will gain significance because it marks the opening of a game-fishing season in Missouri. At 12:01 a. m. there will be open season on large and small mouth black bass, rainbow trout, crappie, rock bass, black and green perch, and jack salmon.

In its annual warning to holiday picnickers the St. Louis Safety Council said that automobiles should be checked for mechanical defects, that persons on outings should not overdo themselves either in exercising or drinking, and that campfires should be carefully watched.

Services Today and Tonight.

The services today include a ceremony at Friedens Cemetery, 8900 North Broadway, at which members of Navy Post No. 294 of the American Legion will burn their old and tattered flag and raise a new one on the flag pole.

At 8 o'clock tonight there will be a memorial service at Hyde Park Congregational Church, Blair and Bremen avenues, under the auspices of the Federated Patriotic Societies of St. Louis.

The Walnut Park Post No. 165 of the American Legion will hold services today as follows: At the Walnut Park Memorial Plaque at 9 a. m., Lake Charles Cemetery at 10 a. m., Oak Grove Cemetery at 10:45 a. m., and Mount Lebanon Cemetery at 11:30 a. m.

The service at the Soldiers' Memorial on the Memorial Plaza on Tuesday will start at 10 a. m., with Mayor Bernard F. Dickmann and Branch Rickey, vice-president of the Cardinal baseball team, as the principal speakers. The invocation will be read by Rabbi Julian Miller of B'nai El Temple and the benediction by the Rev. Alphonse Dunow, pastor of Advent Lutheran Church. Wreaths will be placed around the cenotaph by veterans' groups.

Several of these veterans' groups, aided by various units of the Missouri National Guard, will take part in the parade, which will start at 12:15 p. m. at Twefth and Pine streets, a block east of the Memorial. The parade will go south on Twelfth to Chestnut, west on Chestnut to Fifteenth, south to Market, east to Broadway and south to Walnut, where it will disband.

Groups in the parade, in the order of marching, will be as follows: 138th Infantry, Battery A, automobiles bearing the few remaining members of the G. A. R. and the Gold Star Mothers, United Spanish War Veterans, American Legion posts, Jewish War Veterans, 110th Motor Supply, British War Veterans, Italian War Veterans, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and cars with disabled war veterans.

Some of the paraders will go by automobile to Jefferson Barracks where a service will be held in the National Cemetery at 2 p. m. The principal speaker will be Albert Schweitzer, St. Louis attorney.

Gardenways Dedication.

A ceremony on Tuesday which will have nothing to do with any war but which, it is planned, will become an annual event, will be the dedication of the highway beautification project on U. S. Highway 66 between St. Louis and Gray's Summit. Begun five years ago under the sponsorship of the Henry Shaw Gardenways Association, the work has brought about the beautification of the right-of-way along the road.

A plaque will be unveiled at the limestone cliff which rises about 100 feet above the highway at Pacific. Speeches will be made by Dr. George T. Moore, director of Shaw's Garden; Paul Brown, assistant regional director of the Civilian Conservation Corps, which did most of the work, and State Senator Raleigh McCormick of St. Louis County.

A parade of floats will start at Shaw's Garden in St. Louis and be augmented as it passes through Kirkwood, Webster Groves, Valley Park, Eureka and Allenton.

A community memorial service will be held at 10:45 a. m. Tuesday at Heman Park in University City. It is to be preceded by a parade, starting at 10 a. m. at Delmar boulevard and Midland avenue. Principal speakers will be Mayor Matt Fogerty and David Millar, former Mayor.

Ceramics Exhibition.

An exhibition of ceramics by Evelyn Norton will open tomorrow at the St. Louis Art Center, 394A North Euclid avenue. They will be on view until June 10. The galleries are open from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m.

Hull Submits Neutrality Act Revision Proposal to Congress

world of nations cannot be denied; and the substance of the legislation adopted in this country inevitably influences not only this country, but also other countries.

"The problem for us is not whether we shall help any foreign country or any group of foreign countries. Nor is it that of passing judgment upon or interfering in other people's controversies. Rather, it is that of so conducting our affairs and our relations with other peoples, both before and after the outbreak of war elsewhere, that we shall be more, and not less, secure; so that we shall not become parties to controversies; and so that our attitude and actions will encourage other people to avoid, rather than to become engaged in controversy.

"Because of troubled conditions with which we are all familiar, the Congress rightly is now considering the situation which might obtain were a state of war to develop between other nations. In such case the first concern of the United States is its own safety as well as the desire and intent, which all of us resolutely follow, to remain at peace.

War and Rights of Neutrals.

"In the event of a foreign war, we would be immediately faced with the problem of maintaining our neutrality.

"When a war begins, that body of rules for the regulation of international relations which applies in time of peace becomes impaired. Under international law, the belligerent states then acquire certain rights which do not appertain to states at peace; and at the same time states which remain at peace become affected by a body of rules under which they have the rights and obligations of neutrals.

"In considering whether legislative restrictions upon our freedom of action can advantageously be maintained or adopted to insure against our being drawn into war, we should, in my opinion, avoid the error of assuming that provisions which are at the same time rigid and of universal application, will serve our interests satisfactorily in every situation which may arise. The course of world affairs is unpredictable. What we should try to do for the purpose of keeping this country out of war is to enact measures adapted to the safeguarding of our interests in all situations of which we can conceive and at the same time imposing a minimum of abnormal and unnecessary burdens upon our nationals and a minimum of disruption of our peaceful economic life.

Difficulty of Embargo.

"I believe it is important that the legislation which may be enacted should conform, so far as possible, to traditional concepts of international law adhered to by this Government. International law requires that the domestic measures adopted by a neutral shall be impartially applied to the contending parties in conflict. It does not require that a neutral nation shall embargo any articles destined for belligerents.

"If we go in for embargoes on exports, for the purpose of keeping ourselves out of war, the logical thing to do would be to make our embargo all-inclusive. Modern warfare is no longer warfare between armed forces only: It is warfare between nations in every phase of their national life. Lists of contraband are no longer limited to arms and ammunition and closely related commodities. They include not only those items which contribute toward making warfare possible, but almost every item useful in the life of the enemy nation.

"A nation at war is no less anxious to keep cotton or petroleum, or, indeed, any useful product, from reaching an enemy nation than it is to keep guns and airplanes from reaching the enemy's armed forces. I doubt whether we can help ourselves to keep out of war by an attempt on our part to distinguish between categories of exports. Yet a complete embargo upon all exports would obviously be ruinous to our economic life. It therefore seems clear that we should have no general and automatic embargo inflexibly and rigidly imposed on any class or group of exports.

"Our conclusion that embargo on export of arms is undesirable is not new, and experience has confirmed our belief.

Recalls President's Statement.

"On Aug. 31, 1935, on the occasion of his signing the Neutrality Act of 1935, the President made the following statement:

" 'The latter section (providing for an embargo of export of arms) terminates at the end of February, 1936. This section requires further and more complete consideration between now and that date. Here again the objective is wholly good. It is the policy of this Government to avoid being drawn into was between other nations, but it is a fact that no Congress and no executive can foresee all possible future situations. History is filled with unforseeable situations that call for some flexibility of action. It is conceivable that situations may arise in which the wholly inflexible provisions of Section 1 of this act might have exactly the opposite effect from that which was intended. In other words, the inflexible provisions might drag us into war instead of keeping us out. The policy of the Government is definitely committed to the maintenance of peace and the avoidance of any entanglements which would lead us into conflict. At the same time it is the policy of the Government by every peaceful means and without entanglement to co-operate with other similarly minded governments to promote peace.

Former Statement.

"On Nov. 6, 1935, I made the following statement with respect to neutrality legislation:

" 'Any discussion of the avoidance of war, or of the observance of neutrality in the event of war, would be wholly incomplete if too much stress were laid on the part played in the one or the other by the shipment, or the embargoing of the shipment, of arms, ammunition and implements of war. . . . To assume that by placing an embargo on arms we are making ourselves secure from dangers of conflict with belligerent countries is to close our eyes to manifold dangers in other directions. . . . We cannot assume that when provision has been made to stop the shipment of arms, which as absolute contraband have always been regarded as subject to seizure by a belligerent, we may complacently sit back with the feeling that we are secure from all dangers.'

"Our involvement in controversies is more likely to arise from destruction of American lives. In this regard we can effectively diminish our risks by keeping our nationals and ships out of areas in which there is special danger. The rights of our nationals under international law may probably be restricted by our own legislation along certain lines for the purpose of avoiding incidents which might involve us in a conflict. In indicating certain restrictions upon the exercise of our rights as a neutral I do not wish to be considered as advocating the abandonment of these, or, indeed, of any, neutral rights, but there is reasonable ground for restricting at this time the exercise of these rights.

"For the reasons heretofore stated, it is my firm conviction that the arms embargo provision of the existing law should be eliminated. I furthermore believe that the most effective legislative contribution at this time toward keeping this country out of war, if war occurs, would be made by enacting or re-enacting provisions on lines as follows:

"To prohibit American ships, irrespective of what they may be carrying, from entering combat areas;

"To restrict travel by American citizens in combat areas;

"To provide that the export of goods destined for belligerents shall be preceded by transfer of title to the foreign purchaser;

"To continue the existing legislation respecting loans and credits to nations at war;

"To regulate the solicitation and collection in this country of funds for belligerents;

"To continue the National Munitions Control Board and the system of arms export and import licenses.

Provisions on the suggested lines would, I think, help to keep this country out of war and facilitate our adherence to a position of neutrality. They would make easier our twofold task of keeping this country at peace and avoiding imposition of unnecessary and abnormal burdens upon our citizens.

"Sincerely yours,
"CORDELL HULL."

TRAIN TO MARK ANNIVERSARY

The fourth anniversary of the Milwaukee Road's streamlined train between Chicago-Milwaukee and St. Paul-Minneapolis, the "Hiawatha," will be observed on Monday, May 29. During this time the train has carried more than 1,000,000 passengers on a daily average of 800. Recent acquisition of a fleet of high-powered locomotives permits operation of as many as 14 cars in one train on a schedule that provides for a 410-mile run in 390 minutes, including seven station stops en route. Each unit consists of a tap room car, day coaches, a dining car, parlor cars, and observation-lounge car. The brightly hued streamline locomotives are said to be capable of a speed of more than two miles per minute.

NORWAY IS LAND OF MIDNIGHT SUN

Ancient Wooden Dragon Churches May Still Be Seen.

Oslo, Stockholm and Copenhagen, capital cities of the North will be highlights of 10 summer tours offered by the Norwegian American line June 3 to Aug. 22. Designed to offer travelers a comprehensive view of Scandinavian countries, their similarities and contrasts, the tours range from 25 to 54 days.

The shortest tour offers a day in the old Hanseatic port of Bergen and a trip across Norway by railroad across snow-capped mountains to fertile valleys. Along its most scenic portion there are more than 170 tunnels and in many places the line follows the course of rivers and mountain streams.

At Copenhagen travelers may see the Kronberg Castle which was the scene of Shakespeare's "Hamlet." From there the steamer calls at the Lofoten Islands, at Tromso and thence to the North Cape where, from the middle of May until August the sun does not set. The July tour will call at Trondheim, the old Viking capital of Norway, during the celebration of the Eve of St. Olav, patron saint of Norway who is buried in the cathedral there. A visit to Lillehammer where Norwegian folk dances in costume are held throughout the summer, a trip to a Lapp encampment and the island of Gotland near Stockholm are also included.

Ancient Wooden Churches.

China is not the only country in which dragons are used as a decorative motif. The old "stavkirker" or wooden churches, built centuries ago when Christianity was young, and forming one of few links between modern Norway and the Viking past, still show dragon heads on gable ends. For centuries the dragon was one of the favorite emblems of pagan Norway, especially as a figurehead for the prows of her Viking ships. The men who built the ships and decorated them with dragon heads also built the nation's first churches. The church structure allowing them more exercise of imagination, Vikinng carpenters not only put dragons on the gables but also carved those emblems into the columns, the capitals and even the door frames of the buildings.

About 20 stavkirker may still be seen in Norway. Those who study the churches will find in them the same building principles used in the famous 1000-year-old Viking ships preserved in Oslo. The word "stav" itself was an early one for "mast;" planks in the churches were locked together as they were on Viking vessels, and "knees" were used to strengthen the structures.

Norway's largest stav church, the Hitterdal, has windows, but those were added in the nineteenth century, a very late afterthought indeed. The buildings originally had no natural lighting at all, the priests and the choir depending on candles and the church goers kneeling in the darkness.

Fantoft Church, one of the most famous stavkirker, is only about six miles from Bergen. Fantoft once stood at the end of the Sognefjord but was brought to its present location in 1848. The best preserved stav church is the Borgund, near Laerdal in the fjord district. Two of the most accessible are the Gol and the Garmo churches, both now museum pieces. The Gol today is a great feature of the Norsk Museum at Oslo, while the Garmo Church is a highlight of the famous Sandvig Collections at Lillehammer.

LINE HAS SEVEN SHIPS UNDER CONSTRUCTION

The American President Line has under construction at Newport News seven combination passenger and freight vessels, according to an announcement made recently by former Senator William Gibbs McAdoo, chairman of the board. These ships will be 492 feet long with a sea speed of 16½ knots and will have room for one hundred passengers. Each stateroom will be completely fire-proofed and equipped with private bath. There will be public rooms off the promenade deck and a verandah cafe opening aft to a swimming pool.

The round-the-world cruising time will be cut from 112 to 92 days making possible fortnightly calls and longer time ashore at ports of call. Refrigeration storage for freight will be almost double that of the present vessels.

Plans are under way for three vessels to be used in West Coast and Oriental trade which are said to be the largest ever turned out in American yards. These will have an overall length of 740 feet and a 34,000 ton displacement. Passenger accommodations will be for 1000.

TRAVEL SERVICE AWARDS TRIPS TO WORLD'S FAIR

The 49,999th, 50,000th and 50,001st persons to use the service since its inception in 1926 were Dr. W. H. ROOSEVELT SIGNS LAW TO BAR OVERLOADING OF VESSELS

It Reduces Limit to Those of 150 Tons and Exempts Certain Lake Carriers.

WASHINGTON, May 27 (AP).—President Roosevelt has signed legislation prohibiting overloading of American vessels of 150 tons or more which are engaged in foreign trade.

The new act broadened a previous 1929 loadline law which was limited to vessels of 250-tons or more. A loadline is the line about a ship, marked or imaginary, which would be submerged by overloading.

Maritime officials said reduction of the tonnage limit conformed with the international loadline agreement reached at London of 1930.

Another change in the present safety act permits the Secretary of Commerce to remit or mitigate fines of up to $500 for violations.

Exempted from the act are Great Lakes shipping and vessels being towed which carry neither cargo nor passengers, such as dredges and floating construction equipment.

Clayton Drug Store Burglary.

Burglars robbed the Glaser Drug Store at Hanley and Wydown roads, Clayton, of $70 in cash and $201 in merchandise early yesterday. The proprietor reported to police the robbers apparently had entered by breaking the transom over the front door.

King and Queen in the Rockies

King Climbs Mountain; Takes Photo of Bear Cub

Royal Party Drops Formalities at Banff, Dines on Trout, Cauliflower and Cantaloupe.

BANFF, Alberta, May 27 (AP).—King George and Queen Elizabeth spent part of their day of relaxation and "resting" at this Canadian Rockies resort today by scaling the last stretches of Tunnel Mountain after taking automobiles part of the way.

Sixteen members of their entourage accompanied them up the 2000-feet, pine-covered rise nestling among the giant peaks of Banff National Park.

Later the King and Queen drove up Norquay Mountain, and on the way back to their hotel the King took pictures of a mule deer, a bear cub and grouse.

The Alberta Government threw open all streams of the Province to the King for fishing. Members of his staff brought in 30 trout but the King didn't wet a fly.

For the outdoors the King put on an open-neck shirt and a turned-down gray hat with a checked gray suit.

Queen Elizabeth wore a tan sports costume—pumpkin yellow, the stylists call it; a flowing yellow scarf, a sports felt hat of the same color, with a Scottish cockade, sturdy walking shoes of dove gray suede and gray stockings.

Freed from the banqueting halls, this was the meal put before them after their mountain climbing:

Broiled lake trout, mixed grill, green beans, new peas, cauliflower, potatoes, spring salad, chilled cantaloupe, coffee.

All members of the party chatted animatedly and laughed. There was a complete lack of formality.

The tour toward the Pacific Coast will be resumed tomorrow morning.

DINNER FOR KING TO BE 'PLEASANT, IF OFFICIAL'

Envoy Says George and Elizabeth Will Leave Garden Fete When They Please.

WASHINGTON, May 27 (AP).—The British Ambassador, Sir Ronald Lindsay, today assured those who will attend the dinner party for King George and Queen Elizabeth at the Embassy June 9 that, while it will be "pretty much an official dinner," it will be "none the less pleasant."

He received reporters in his oak-paneled, book-lined study.

The dinner is the second of two parties the Ambassador and Lady Lindsay will give for Their Majesties during their two-day visit here. The first will be a garden party June 8.

He said the guest list of the garden party would not be made public, but that for the dinner would.

Someone wanted to know how long the King and Queen would be present at the party, to which about 1300 invitations have been issued.

"The official schedule says when they will arrive, and I suppose they will go away when they've had enough of it," said Sir Ronald. "That's what you'd expect anybody to do, isn't it?"

"Will the King and Queen have to have passports in this country?" the Ambassador was asked.

"I guess I should say no," he replied.

The Ambassador indicated that both the King and Queen had already experienced the pleasure of eating hot dogs, which may be served at the picnic which President and Mrs. Roosevelt will give for them at Hyde Park after their visit here. "But I think," he said, "it will be the first time they will have eaten the things under that name."

"What name have they eaten them under in other circumstances?" someone inquired.

"Oh," said Sir Ronald, "a rose by any other name would taste as sweet."

About 200 persons have applied for admission to the review of British ex-service men in the Embassy garden which Their Majesties will hold on the morning of June 9, the Ambassador said. Several hundred other British subjects will attend.

Discussing a report that many persons wanted to send gifts to the visitors, Sir Ronald said they could not "accept gifts from private persons with whom they are not on terms of personal friendship."

CHRISTIAN BROTHERS COLLEGE PRESENTS MILITARY CIRCUS

Cadets Pass in Review Before Honorary Colonel, a St. Mark's High School Girl.

Cadets of Christian Brothers College marched, pitched tents and played military games at their fourth annual military circus yesterday at Walsh Stadium.

Following a band concert, honorary cadet officers received caps and capes, after which the entire corps passed in regimental review. The honorary Colonel was Miss Marjorie Hambrough of St. Mark's High School.

Military calisthenics and rifle exercises designed to develop physique were demonstrated. The Grenadiers and Lancers, units specializing in exhibition drills, gave a combination drill, all without command. More orthodox regulation drill movements by Company E of the cadet corps followed.

Next came tent pitching and group games. Outstanding cadets received awards for excellence in various departments of the school. Company C of the Cadet Corps then formed as a war-strength platoon which demonstrated how to ward off an air attack. A dress parade of the entire corps closed the day's activities.

LIQUOR LEVIES IN STATE $6,275,000 LAST YEAR

$5,198,000 of This Amount to Missouri Department of Control.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—The liquor industry enriched State and local treasuries in Missouri to a total of $6,275,436.07 during 1938, according to figures released today by the Distilled Spirits Institute.

In license fees and excise taxes, the Missouri Department of Liquor Control profited in the gross sum of $5,198,815.52. Cost of operations and salaries reduced the figure to $4,999,024.38. Leaders in net state collections were New York, $45,502,645; Pennsylvania, $34,371,738; Ohio, $28,346,999; Illinois, $23,150,925; California, $20,992,332, and Michigan, $19,201,827.

These statistics do not include Federal Internal Revenue taxes and import duties, which in 1938 totaled $599,490,258.68. Since the repeal of the prohibition amendment, in 1933, it is declared that up to the end of last year the alcoholic beverage industry yielded Federal, state and local revenues totaling $4,258,765,589.

From brewers, distillers, vintners, wholesalers and retailers, the Missouri Department of Liquor Control collected license fees of $1,030,559.87. As to excise taxes, spirits led with $3,013,272.14, and beer was second, with $1,088,799.53. Wines were a distant third, with $66,183.98. The 2 per cent sales tax is estimated to have added $225,000.

Local collections totaled $1,051,411.69. More than half of this, or $602,389.63, was gathered in St. Louis and went into the city treasury. Under Missouri laws, State license fees and excise taxes go to the State Treasury, the State sales taxes to ordinary revenues, and county and municipal license fees to county and city treasuries. Proceeds from seizures and confiscations go into county treasuries for the benefit of school funds.

Total taxes on alcoholic beverages during 1938 represented $7.25 for each of the 130,000,000 men, women and children in the United States. Federal revenues from this source have been as follows: 1933 (from repeal until Dec. 31), $29,704,194; 1934, $593,566,164; 1935, $734,937,878; 1936, $932,145,167; 1937, $1,021,135,100, and 1938, $947,277,086.

Only five states among those permitting the sale of all forms of alcoholic beverages failed during 1938 to collect at least $1,000,000 in taxes. These were Nevada, $376,006; Delaware, $554,519; Wyoming, $843,457; New Mexico, $847,288, and Idaho, $963,275.

BRITISH-FRENCH OFFER DELIVERED TO STALIN

Identical Notes, Contents Undisclosed, Presented After Talk With Premier.

MOSCOW, May 27 (AP).—Representatives of Britain and France today delivered to Soviet Russia what was understood to be an offer to resume the close British-French-Russian co-operation of 1914.

Their identical messages were delivered to Joseph Stalin through Vyacheslav Molotov, Russian Premier and Commissar of Foreign Affairs, but their contents were not disclosed.

British Ambassador Sir William Seeds and French Charge D'Affaires Payart conferred an hour with Molotov in the Kremlin.

The conversation of British and French envoys in the Kremlin was short and said to have been cordial.

News of the British-French proposal, another step toward the entry of Russia into the British-French line-up after weeks of negotiations, spread slowly in Moscow.

The reaction of official Soviet quarters to the reported terms was silence and most foreign observers hesitated to predict what Stalin's answer would be. British circles here, however, were optimistic.

Soviet newspapers did not mention the negotiations. Pravda, Communist party organ, however, said in editorializing on the new 41 billion roubles (nominally $7,700,000,000) defense budget that it was an "investment in the cause of general peace because the stronger our army is, the greater is the chance that peace will not be violated."

USED McCORMACK SAFETY DEPOSIT BOX TO KEEP CASH

of tax evaded was not "considerable" and that there was no showing O'Malley was a "persistent" tax evader. Judge Otis, in pronouncing sentence on Pendergast, had stated that these were important questions to be considered in fixing the punishment in such a case.

"Emmet O'Malley was guilty of loyalty to a friend," his attorney said, "that is where all this trouble stems and roots."

Boatright described O'Malley as a man who was known not to "have his hand out," or to be engaged in "skulduggery." He said his client had asked him to assure the court of "the deep penitence he feels."

"Faithful Husband."

"He has been an unusually faithfully devoted husband and father and now grandfather, and the realization that he has broken the hearts of those who love him the most is a more bitter punishment than the punishment the court will impose."

O'Malley's other defense attorneys, James P. Aylward, National Democratic Committeeman and chairman of the State Democratic Committee; Jerome Walsh, Harry L. Jacobs, I. J. Ringolsky and Terence M. O'Brien, did not address the court.

Judge Otis read at the outset of the hearing a telegram from the Department of Justice, to the effect that his sentence of Pendergast, 15 months and $10,000 fine, was in conformity with comparable cases. After hearing Milligan, Judge Otis delivered an address defining his position, and his concept of punishment.

Sentence was then pronounced.

O'Malley did not comment. Accompanied by his attorneys, he moved slowly down the corridor, almost deserted in comparison with the scene when spectators packed the courtroom and corridors when Pendergast placed himself at the mercy of the Government. The two were young men together, down in the old First Ward, in the business of politics most of their lives. Now they have reached the end of the political road.

Persons leaving the building encountered a lone figure, loitering on a lower floor. He was Guy B. Park, Governor by grace of Pendergast from 1933 to 1937, who appointed O'Malley, and whose administration is likely to be remembered chiefly for the insurance compromise scandal. He had not attended the O'Malley hearing, and did not know of the sentence until someone told him. He had no comment to make.

TEXT OF LETTERS THAT McCORMACK SENT TO STREET

pecially the defendant to settle the fire insurance rate litigation."

This part of the second letter to Street, written May 17, 1935, was quoted as relevant:

"In talking with Gen. Barker today on the telephone, he informed me that O'Malley still is insisting upon two fool ideas being included in this settlement—one was on the question of having somebody in the rating bureau and the other is having an arbitration committee appointed to handle disputes on this type. Both of these ideas, in my opinion, are silly and I will if necessary, use influence in the proper place to disabuse O'Malley's mind of these ideas."

"Explaining the statements in this letter, McCormack, among other things, said that he had in mind Pendergast's influence when he stated that, if necessary, he would 'use influence in the proper place to disabuse O'Malley's mind of these ideas'," the District Attorney told the Court.

The Governor referred to in McCormack's letter was Guy B. Park, then in office through Boss Pendergast's influence.

HOW REPORTER GOT SQUALUS NEWS BEAT

Used Lobster Boat to Get to Scene at Night and Learn 26 Were Dead.

BOSTON, May 27 (AP).—Details of the news scoop by E. Harry Crockett of Boston, an Associated Press staff man, in reporting that 26 men had died aboard the sunken submarine Squalus were revealed today.

Crockett told his story on returning to the Boston bureau of the Associated Press after four days and nights on the job. Before dawn the night after the Squalus sank, Crockett put out from Portsmouth in a 30-foot open lobster boat against high seas. With him were three staff men from the Boston Globe, Transcript and Post, all members of the Associated Press.

At daylight the 15-mile journey over open ocean was completed. Drawing as close as the high seas would allow to one of the key boats in the rescue fleet, Crockett used a megaphone to call a question to a responsible officer:

"How many are dead down below?"

The call came back that messages tapped out on the hull of the sunken submarine reported 26 men had been trapped in the flooded after compartments and probably were dead. A few minutes later one of the four newspaper men boarded the rescue craft and verified the shouted information.

The reporters sped back to Portsmouth. The seas were so high that Crockett was thrown from his place and his right hand slashed to the bone on a big lobsterman's hook. All four were so seasick they could hardly come ashore at the navy yard.

Crockett raced to a private telephone set up by the Associated Press at the navy yard. Only after giving full details to the Boston bureau would he consent to visit a hospital.

Convicted of Two Bank Holdups.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., May 27 (AP).—A United States District Court jury that deliberated 10 minutes today convicted Harold Martin Brest of twice robbing a Volant (Pa.) bank in 1936. Another Federal jury had convicted him of kidnaping and automobile theft charges. Sentence was deferred pending a motion for a new trial.

STORY OF THE SQUALUS IN EVERYDAY MAGAZINE

A COMPLETE, detailed, dramatic story of the sinking of the Squalus and rescue of part of the crew appears on the front page of the Post-Dispatch Everyday Magazine today. It was written by Commander Edward Ellsberg, U. S. N. R., salvager of the S-51 and author of "On the Bottom" and other books.

was to have been married this afternoon to Sherman Shirley of Little Rock, Ark., a torpedoman on the Squalus. She bore no ill-will to Lloyd B. Maness of Greensboro, N. C., who was to have been the best man and who saved the other 32 men by slamming shut a door on the 26 as water rose in the ship.

"What he did was perfectly right," said Miss Desautel. "I hold nothing against him and expect him to come to see me when it is all over."

DEDICATION TODAY OF OPERA'S PERGOLAS

Three Stars to Sing at Ceremonies in Forest Park; Mayor to Speak.

The new pergolas along the front and sides of the Municipal Theater in Forest Park and which considerably improve the looks of St. Louis' al fresco playhouse will be dedicated at a ceremony in front of the theater at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

Mayor Bernard F. Dickmann will lay the cornerstone of the new main entrance to the theater. He will speak briefly, as will former Mayor Henry W. Kiel, president of the Municipal Theater Association.

Three of the stars of "Rose Marie," which opens the twenty-first Municipal Opera season on Friday night, will sing, assisted by the opera chorus and orchestra. They are Nancy McCord, a favorite of Municipal Opera audiences, and Lansing Hatfield and Arthur Kent.

Built of Indiana limestone and concrete, the new pergolas replace wooden structures which were erected when the theater was built. Higher and broader, they will provide reasonably adequate shelter for a capacity crowd of 10,000 in the event of rain.

They were designed by Kenneth Wischmeyer Jr., and Joseph D. Murphy, who won a competition for the remodeling of the entire plant with the exception of the actual theater. New dressing rooms, rehearsal stages, and refreshment stands will be added in future years.

The special bus service which operates on summer evenings direct to the theater will be in force today for the dedication ceremony.

Protest on Anti-Fireworks Bill.

A protest against a bill to prevent the sale of fireworks except in licensed displays, pending before the East St. Louis City Council, was received by city officials yesterday in a letter from the Grocers' and Butchers' Association of East St. Louis.

Darrell Smith to Speak Today.

Darrell Smith of Washington, D. C., national representative of Labor's Non-Partisan League, will speak this afternoon before the St. Louis branch of the league at 1:30 o'clock at 1722 Washington avenue.

Through these advertisements we are trying to find one person in the United States aluminum doesn't benefit

HOW MANY READERS OF THIS ADVERTISEMENT SHARE DAN'S VIEWS ON ALUMINUM?

DAN: I never bought a pound of aluminum in my life, so far as I know, so how could it do me any good?

US: Our apologies, Dan. We have been so busy making aluminum cheap enough for your pocketbook, that we haven't taken time off to thank you for being such a good customer.

DAN: Me, a customer? Since when?

US: When you bought those pliers and the other tools you're so proud of. The steelmaker used aluminum, right in his mix, to make that good steel good.

DAN: How about some aluminum I can really see?

US: Look at your portable tools, Dan. Their maker bought aluminum for you, to make them light, for you.

. . . or take your smoking pipe apart . . . that's an aluminum fitting . . .

. . . or look in your refrigerator at home. The ice cube trays are made of aluminum so the water will freeze faster . . .

. . . and we could go on like this, all day.

DAN: Never mind now. Let me ask you a stumper. Name just one place where aluminum cuts down my living expenses.

US: The cooking utensils in your kitchen save you fuel every meal, because aluminum is such a good conductor of heat.

DAN: Why don't you tell these interesting things about aluminum to everybody in the country?

US: We are trying, through these advertisements, to help everyone understand how aluminum benefits their everyday jobs, their cost of living. We believe that every man, woman, and child in the United States is benefited by aluminum.

Do you know an exception? If you do, we should like to hear from you. Aluminum Company of America, 1928 Gulf Building, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.

TIGERS POUND KENNEDY AND TROTTER, BEAT BROWNS, 12 TO 5

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

DETROIT, May 27.—The Browns dropped one game of the scheduled two with the Tigers here today, 12 to 5. Both clubs yielded the second to a torrential rainstorm that burst suddenly as Detroit was coming to bat in the fourth inning. At the end of the third the Tigers led, 4-2, but the Browns had scored one in their fourth and Howard Mills had replaced George Gill, the starting pitcher, when the rain came.

Although it was first announced that a doubleheader would be played tomorrow, the teams will meet in only one game, with Buck Newsom and Bob Harris, two of the players involved in the recent 10-player deal, due to pitch.

Vernon Kennedy and Bill Trotter took turns for the Browns in the opener today and delved in vain against Detroit's sequential hitting. The Tigers picked up 18 hits for 28 bases, eleven coming off Kennedy's service. Trotter granted seven, of which two were Charlie Gehringer's triple in the sixth and homer in the eighth. Gehringer sent over five runs out of his four hits in five times at bat.

Bridges Wades Through.

Tommy Bridges, top performer of the Tiger pitching troupe, was just wild enough to be good and wild enough to appear bad. He was behind the batter repeatedly in every inning except the sixth and seventh, when only six faced him. Five Browns went to first on passes, he hit another, and made a wild pitch. Against his spells of wildness he gave only five hits up to the eighth.

Bridges, with so much aid from the batsmen and support from them afield, bounced over the dangerous dips and did not detour too often. For example, he passed Harlond Clift and hit Billy Sullivan to open the Browns' fourth but John Berardino hit into a double play and Don Heffner's best was a grounder to Gehringer.

In the third Kennedy singled to start and Rupert Thompson walked. Melvin Mazzera was safe on his sacrifice bunt when Bridges threw late to third to catch Kennedy. With the bases loaded, no one out, George McQuinn flied to Roy Bell deep in left and Bell's brilliant throw home caught Kennedy at the plate. Ralph Kress then cut off Myril Hoag's blast and threw the runner out at first.

With so much assistance on hand and getting the runs to work on Bridges, who was tapped for eight hits in all, managed to stagger through although the count was "three and two" on two out of every three batters over the route.

Big Fifth Inning.

A batting oddity appeared in the home runs of Thompson and Sullivan in the first and second, respectively. Thompson and Sullivan both hit into the right field pavilion, upper deck. Sullivan's landed a few feet to the right of Thompson's. The two blows gave the Browns successive homers in successive innings or two runs for two hits.

Going into the third, the Browns led, 2-0, on the Thompson-Sullivan efforts. In their half, the Tigers collected there runs on four hits, one of which was Henry Greenberg's long double. A double play barred further damage.

Before a crowd of 7500 in Triborough Stadium, and under perfect weather conditions, the Trojans piled up 71½ points, highest in the meet's history, to win the team title for the second straight year and the ninth time since 1925.

Winning five individual events, sharing in two others and adding the mile relay championship as a crowning touch, the Trojans spread-eagled the field so badly that Pittsburgh, in second place, had only 26 points and none of the others got beyond 20.

Eastern Stalwart.

But while the Pacific Coast Conference champions were making good so handsomely on their awesome reputation, Long John Woodruff of Pittsburgh did all that could be expected of a lone Easterner standing up against this 20-man Western invasion.

In his final I. C. 4-A appearance, Woodruff won the 440-yard and 880-yard titles for the third straight year and made this finale the best of the three.

Forced to show fight to retain his quarter-mile honors in a four-man blanket finish which saw him equal the meet record of 47 seconds flat for the third time, he ran a front race in the half-mile an hour and 20 minutes later and set up a new I. C. 4-A mark of 1 minute 51.2 seconds.

Betters Own Mark.

U. S. C.'s team score bettered its own mark of 62¾ points established in 1932 at Berkeley, Cal. Woodruff's 880, in which he won by 10 yards over Curtis Giddings of New York U., who subsequently was disqualified for fouling on the turn, lopped seven-tenths of a second off Ben Eastman's seven-year-old standard.

In addition to Woodruff's performances, three new records were made and one meet record was equalled, all by U. S. C.'s representatives. Lou Zamperini, who ran the 5000 meters on the 1936 U. S. Olympic team brought the one-mile time down to 4:11.2 in his first I. C. 4-A appearance.

Red-head Earl Vickery, who flew over the 220-yard low hurdles in 23.1 in yesterday's eliminations for a new record, hauled that down to 22.8 in final.

And Bob Peoples' javelin throw of 223 feet 11¾ inches, which led the qualifiers yesterday, stood up as the best performance of the two days. U. S. C.'s Jim Humphrey tied the rceord of 14.4 seconds in winning the 120-yard high hurdles.

440 Most Thrilling Race.

The Trojans also placed one-two in the discus, with Phil Gaspar and Art Wrotnowski; tied for first, with Loring Day, and took third with Irving Howe, in the pole vault; and put two men, Clarke Mallery and Jack Wilson, in a three-way tie for first place in the high jump.

The 440 was the most thrilling race of the day. Erwin Miller of U. S. C., coming out of second position at the start, led down the chute with Woodruff at his shoulder and Don Watts of California third. They held that order as

What Has Become of —

THE Negro Jockey? Today you seldom see a dusky rider on any major racetrack. Where at one time they almost predominated, today the riding field is completely dominated by the white boys.

Only one Negro jockey rode at New Orleans last winter (C. Pulley).

Half a dozen are riding on New York, Maryland and New England tracks, but they do not try other sections of the country any more. The best Negro riding today is E. O. Johnson (1939 through April—100 mounts, 16 victories). (Last year he had 103 mounts, 19 victories.)

There are still numerous Negro exercise boys at all tracks—five or six at Fairmount, according to Eugene Schwartz, Fairmount clocker.

Many Negro jockeys had the leg up on the winners of famous stakes in history. Isaac Murphy, one of the great Negro riders of an earlier generation, shares with Earle Sande the honor of having won three Kentucky Derbies.

The last Negro rider to win a Kentucky Derby was Winkfield, who rode Alan-a-dale to victory in 1902, a feat he had equaled the year before on His Eminence.

One reason for the fadeout of Negro jockeys is: Fewer Negro trainers than in the old days. Negro trainers used Negro boys. White trainers now are "trying to bring out boys," as the racing people say. They mean trying to develop riders for the money they get out of selling their contracts. A Negro boy isn't worth as much as a white boy, on the hoof.

Whatever the cause, it is a fact that although we find Negroes taking an ever increasing importance in many sports, as jockeys they are practically obsolete today.

Coming Fast.

IN TRACK AND FIELD games however the Negro athlete is fast cutting into the monopoly once enjoyed by the Caucasian race.

Negroes were responsible for more than half the victories won by the American Olympic team at Berlin, gaining six firsts unaided and helping to win a relay.

Last week another Negro served notice on the world that he will have to be given a place on the

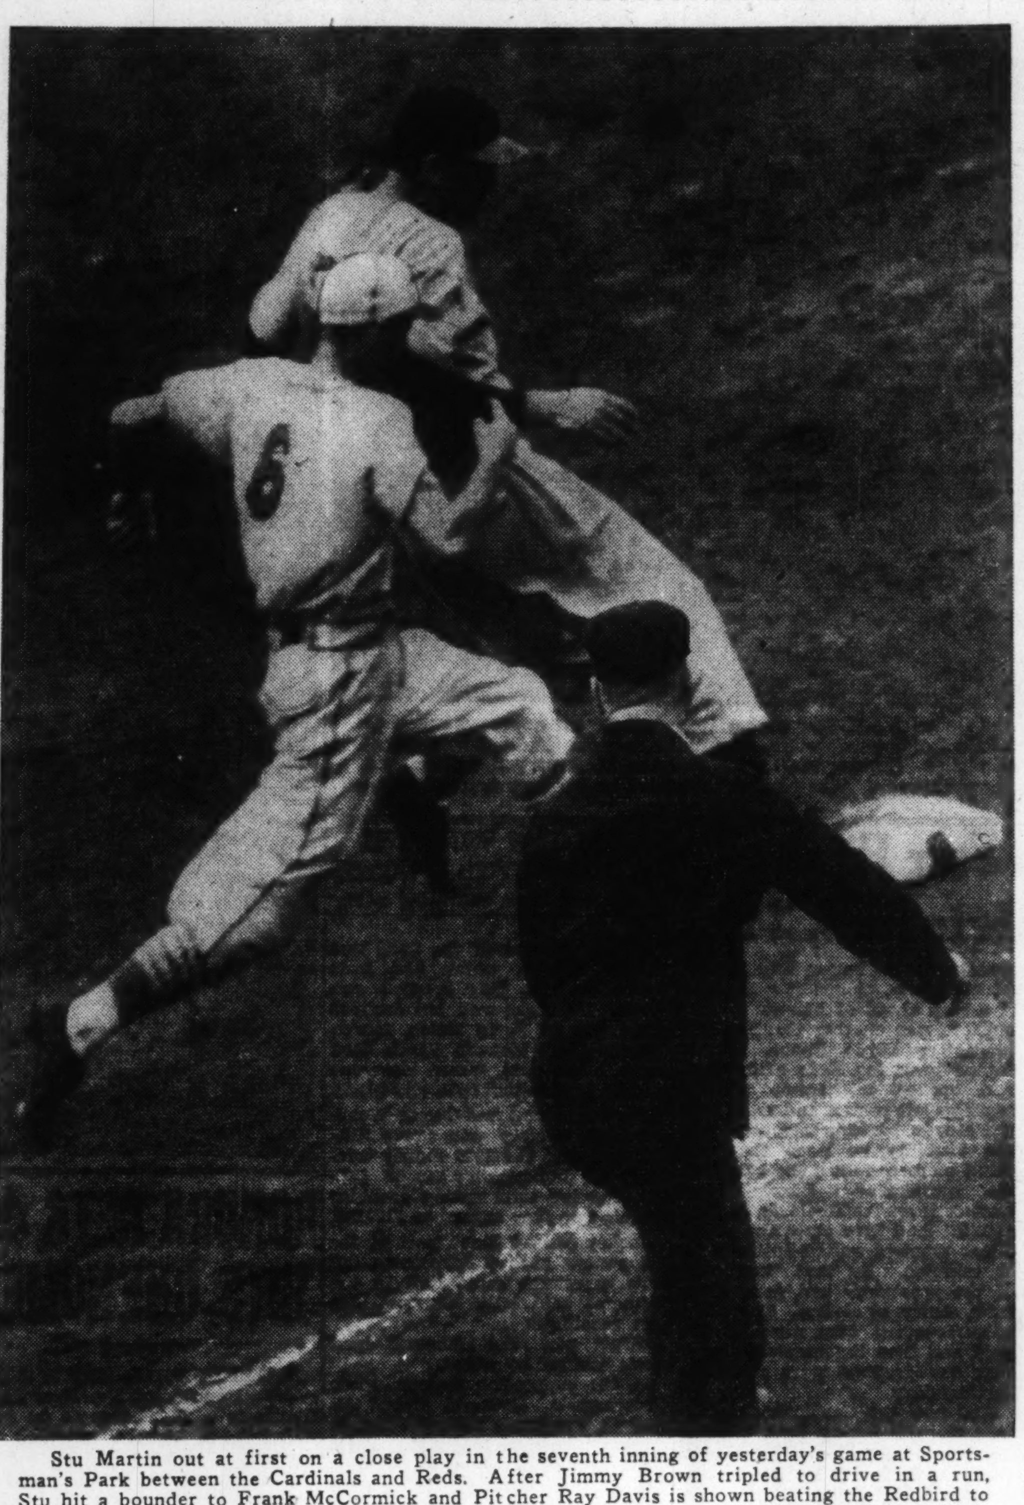
Stu Lost the Race



Stu Martin out at first on a close play in the seventh inning of yesterday's game at Sportsman's Park between the Cardinals and Reds. After Jimmy Brown tripled to drive in a run, Stu hit a bounder to Frank McCormick and Pitcher Ray Davis is shown beating the Redbird to the bag after taking the first sacker's throw. It was the third out of the inning. The umpire is George Magerkurth.

"WITHERS" WON BY JOHNSTOWN BY 10 LENGTHS

NEW YORK, May 27 (AP).—Johnstown came galloping back to the top of the three-year-old parade today.

Given a lightning fast track, Jamestown's big boy, winner of the Kentucky Derby and then the major disappointment of the Preakness, waltzed home with the time-honored Withers mile by 10 lengths before a crowd of 17,000 at Belmont Park in record-equalling time.

From start to finish there was nothing but William Woodward's Whirlwind. He broke on top, was three lengths in front at the half mile and galloped on to the finish in 1 minute, 35 4-5 seconds, tieing the stake record Man O' War set in 1920. On the way to the wire, he clicked off six furlongs in 1:10, which equals Belmont's track record, although his clocking for this distance was not official.

Backed way down in the odds, the long-striding bay and his entry mate, Mrs. H. C. Phipps' Gilded Knight, returned the meager sum of $1 for each $8 bet on them to win this 64-year-old stake for three-year-olds. The entry was "out and out" for place and show.

With Johnstown making a show of the field of five—smallest in 12 years—after the first three furlongs, the biggest fight was for the place. Mrs. Payne Whitney's Hash, with his owner making an appearance at Belmont for the first time this season, came on in the stretch to take the No. 2 spot by a head from W. E. Boeing's Por-

"HEART OF AMERICA" GOLF TOURNAMENT IS WON BY A. BOMBECK

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 27 (AP).—Ayres Bombeck won his first major golf championship today by defeating his fellow Kansas Citian, Danny Byrne, in the finals of the tenth annual Heart of America tournament, 2 up.

Bombeck was runner-up last year to G. W. Duvall Jr., of Kansas City. Bombeck eliminated Duvall, the defending champion, in a third round match yesterday, 3 and 2.

FOUR DRIVERS QUALIFY FOR 500-MILE RACE

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 27 (AP).—Qualification of four more drivers today for the Memorial day 500-mile motor speedway race brought the number of starters to 27 and made it seem virtually certain a full field of 33 speedsters would start in the annual classic. The only likely threat is the possibility of a steady rain that might wash out the remaining qualifying trials.

A check at the garages showed approximately a dozen speedsters ready to fight it out for the remaining six places. If more than 33 cars qualify the ones making the slowest qualifying speed will be eliminated.

Russell Snowberger of Detroit, Tony Gulotta of Kansas City, Tony Willman of Milwaukee, and Kelly Petillo of Los Angeles, were today's qualifiers. Petillo's speed was 123.660 miles an hour; Snowberger's, 123.199 miles an hour; Willman's, 122.771 and Gulotta's, 121.749.

The final trials will be held tomorrow from 10:30 a. m. until 5 p. m. Experts believed it would take at least 120 miles to get in the race. Thus far every car that has qualified has exceeded that speed.

Jimmy Snyder, the former Chicago milkman, has the pole position in the front row. His qualifying speed a week ago was 130.138 miles an hour.

BRADLEY TECH WINS ILLINOIS COLLEGE GOLF TOURNAMENT

GALESBURG, Ill., May 27 (AP).—Bradley Tech of Peoria won the Illinois College Conference golf meet today with a team score of 655, 15 strokes ahead of the Illinois Wesleyan team with 670.

Knox, the defending champion, was fourth with 689. Illinois College had 675 and Augustana 719.

The Bradley team included Jim Kellstedt, 78-80—159; Art Szold, 83-79—162; Bob Leu, 72-74—166; Bill Mitchell, 83-86—169.

The matches were played at Soangetaha Country Club.

John Brokaw of Illinois Wesleyan was the medalist of the 36-hole match, played yesterday and today. His score was 75-75—150.

By J. Roy Stockton

Lee Grissom, Ray Davis and Lloyd Moore held a fighting Cardinal team to four hits at Sportsman's Park yesterday afternoon and the Reds of Deacon Will McKechnie strengthened their grip on first place in the spirited National League race by defeating the Redbirds a second time, 3 to 2.

It was a tense, thrilling struggle and a cheering Ladies' day crowd of 15,657, including 6022 cash customers, was kept on edge for eight innings and then sent home disconsolate and rather well-soaked to the skin.

Just as the Reds went to bat in the ninth inning, clouds that had been threatening through much of the afternoon turned loose a drenching rain, which, blown by a wind of nearly cyclonic proportions, penetrated to every nook and cranny of the grandstand and bleachers, so the spectators, as they straggled homeward, were as bedraggled as they were sad.

Two Important Breaks.

Using the box score as a yardstick, which shows that the Reds made ten hits to the four gathered by the Cardinals, the Reds would seem to have had much the better of the curtailed contest. But despite that advantage in attacking power, the enemy from Cincinnati needed two important breaks which paved the way to two runs, which eventually made the difference between defeat and victory.

Thanks to a double-barreled two-base attack in the first inning, with Jimmy Brown and Pepper Martin hitting the doubles, the Cardinals took an early lead and for four innings Morton Cooper, freshly recovered from an attack of pleurisy, protected his one-run margin.

In the fourth Cooper had to rise to great heights to stop an enemy thrust. Ernie Lombardi opened that inning with a double to left and Craft bounced a single over Gutteridge's head. Jimmy Brown backed up Gutteridge and stopped the ball and held Lombardi on second, but had no chance for a play at first. Thus the Reds had men on first and second with nobody out and the lone run on the scoreboard looked very small.

Cooper, however, pitched out of the jam. He struck out Gamble, retired Billy Myers on a pop fly to Mize and then fanned Grissom to end the inning.

Goodman Comes Through.

In the fifth, however, luck began to break against the young righthander, 1938 strikeout king of the Texas League. He started trouble by walking the ubiquitous Werber and when Frey bunted, Cooper fielded the ball quickly and then slipped and before he could regain his feet Frey had turned the bunt into a safety. Cooper was so fast with his high hard one that Goodman missed two attempts to sacrifice and then as luck would have it, shot a single to center, which scored Werber with the tying run.

The Reds then quickly used another break to take the lead. Craft opened the fifth with a double to right and Gamble bunted safely,

RED BIRD NOTES

CURT DAVIS and Bob Bowman probably will be the Cardinals' starting pitchers in this afternoon's doubleheader with the Reds. Paul Derringer and Johnny Vander Meer are due for Cincinnati.

Davis has won six and lost two while Bowman has won two and lost one. Derringer's record is five victories and one defeat, while Vander Meer has won three in succession after suffering one defeat.

The second game with the Reds attracted the largest Ladies' day crowd of the season, a gathering of 15,657, including 6022 paid, 6129 women, 2860 boys and 646 girls.

The Pittsburgh Pirates call tomorrow for three games, including a Memorial day doubleheader, after which the Cardinals depart on their second Eastern trip.

The Reds are doing so well in Cincinnati they will play morning and afternoon games Tuesday to take care of the demand for tickets.

Lew Riggs batted for Grissom in the sixth inning, making his first appearance in a game this season.

Dr. Milton Smith defeated Walter Wittenberg, 15-4, 15-11, to win the Class A singles handball championship of the Missouri Athletic Association, recently.

ALL-STARS MEET SCOTTISH SOCCER TEAM IN GAME TODAY

VISITORS RATED AS BEST ELEVEN TO VISIT U. S.

Scots Have Scored 17 Goals Against Two in Three Contests Played on Present Tour.

The football game old fans have been waiting many years to see becomes a live, moving, thrilling reality this afternoon when Scotland's greatest players oppose a team of stars representing St. Louis. No Scottish team has ever before played here.

St. Louis fans have seen a dozen foreign clubs in action. Sometimes the home-bred talent made an even match of it; too often the game left the fans disappointed. Chief reason for the worst games was a lack of training on the part of the St. Louis players. At least on that score, the team that represents this city today against Scotland is the best eleven ever placed in such a position. Promoter Phil Riley laid his plans for the match two months ago. He picked his players carefully, possibly overlooking a star or two, but always taking the man he thought would give the Scots a winning battle. The St. Louis players are well conditioned; the warm weather will work less harm with them than with the men from overseas.

Scotland is represented by a team said by Scottish officials and the secretary of Canada's Football Association to be the strongest that has ever been sent abroad from the home of soccer. In three games, at Montreal, New York and Detroit, the tourists have scored 17 goals against two.

Picked for Their Ability.

The club affiliations of the 17 players prove them to be top flight men. Rangers and Celtic, champion and runner-up in the Scottish League, placed a half dozen. Three come from the teams that played in the Scottish Cup final; two are sensational hits with English League clubs, and so it goes through the roster.

Observers traveling with the Scots (there are three Glasgow newspaper representatives reporting the tour) say that it is difficult to single out players who will shine above the others. It is a balanced team which moves the ball about smoothly, each man doing his bit but none monopolizing the show. Reports from Montreal, New York and Detroit, however, indicate that Jimmy Caskie, the 5 feet 3 inches outside left, is a football magician; that Alex McNab (Sandy), does all things so well and is so busy that he is never out of the picture; that Bill Lyon, the center halfback, is a master of strategy, so that it is a delight to watch the machine go to work from one of his smart passes. John Dawson, the goaltender, is looked upon in Scotland as a champion among champions.

Know All About Game.

The choice of field for the game assures a smooth, fast turf and plenty of room for spectators with unobstructed view. Public Schools Stadium is St. Louis' closest approach to an ideal soccer park.

Alec McNab, captain of the St. Louis team, reserved the right to name his starting lineup at game time. He had almost every position definitely settled but he was doubtful about inside left where he must choose between Frank Trimmel of Sparta and Buff Donelli of Pittsburgh. Every man in the St. Louis team has proved he can play good soccer. If the eleven falls into a smooth combination, the Scots should find the opposition strong enough to bring out the best that's in Scottish football.

Robert E. Murphy will start the game at 3 p. m.

in the fourth swelled the margin. In the fifth, during which Trotter relieved Kennedy, the Tigers blended two singles, Gehringer's double, a intentional pass to Greenberg, and Ralph Kress' sacrifice fly for the three runs that decided the issue.

Two hits and two passes brought the Browns one in the fifth. And only 10 batters faced Bridges in the next three sessions.

Heffner singled to open the ninth. Pinch-Hitter Spindel struck out. Thompson was again passed, Mazzera forcing him at second. Mazzera raced to second unmolested, and McQuinn scored Heffner and Mazzera with another single to center.

The teams drew a paid attendance of 17,345, a small turnout for a Saturday afternoon in Detroit.

Scots Who Make Goals and One Who Scotches 'em

Cardinals, Held to Four Hits, Lose Again to Reds, 3 to 2

moving Craft to third. Despite that fine start the inning might have been scoreless, for Cooper struck out Myers and after Riggs, batting for Grissom, walked, Werber hit into a double play. However, while pitching to Myers, Cooper uncorked a wild pitch and Craft raced over the plate to break the 1-1 tie.

Linus Frey, a product of the St. Louis Municipal diamonds, produced the third Cincinnati run when he hit to the pavilion roof in the seventh inning for his fourth home run of the season and the thirty-third for the Reds in the 33 games thus far.

The Cardinals came back with their second run in their half of the seventh and missed tallying the tying run by the margin of an umpire's nod on as close a decision as you could see. Slaughter opened the inning with a walk and after Padgett, for Owen, flied out and King for Cooper, forced Slaughter, Jimmy Brown hit the right foul line pole for a triple, scoring King. Stuart Martin followed with a hot bounder that drew McCormick away from first base and there was an exciting race as Ray Davis, speeding to the bag to take McCormick's throw, nicked it a fraction of a step ahead of Martin.

There was another thrilling half inning as Clyde Shoun bravely turned back the Reds after Craft had opened the frame with a triple to left center, and then, with the clouds banking overhead and the visibility so poor that you colud scarcely follow the ball from the grandstand, Lloyd Moore mowed down the Redbirds in their eighth. And then came the storm.

The umpires waited dutifully for 40 minutes. By that time most of the spectators had gone home for a change of clothes. There was a perfunctory inspection of the field and then the umpires agreed that the grounds were unfit for further play.

And now the Cardinals face the necessity of taking both remaining games of the series, a doubleheader this afternoon, if they are to regain first place.

JOHNSTOWN WINS THE 'WITHERS' BY 10 LENGTHS

ter's Mite.

Disappointment of the race was Gilded Knight, which had been figured to give "Big John" a run for it. He broke well, but dropped right out of it to finish fourth. George D. Widener's Birch Rod came home just where everyone said he would—last by a city block.

For Johnstown and Owner Woodward, the victory was worth $15,750, bringing the 1939 money winnings for Jamestown's son of $87,625, and his total racing earnings for his two-year career to $119,045.

Jockey Jimmy Stout, part of the 119 pounds aboard Johnstown (all colts carry the same load in the Withers) said later his "pet was just coasting."

"We'll win the Belmont next week easily," he added.

In the supporting feature, Alvin Untermyer's Cockerel nipped Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Now What in a photo finish to win the sixty-third running of the Juvenile Stakes, five furlongs. The son of Transmute came on in the closing strides to record his third victory in seven outings and take down the winner's purse of $4775. His money winnings now total $10,600. B. F. Whitaker's Gannet, winner of his last four outs, finished third.

WRAY'S COLUMN

1940 Olympic teams. He is Bill Watson, Michigan University senior, who won firsts in three Big Ten championship events for the third time in his collegiate career. He broke a record of long standing in one of them, the discus, and besides this he won the broad jump with better than 25 feet, and the shotput with 52 feet 6⅝ inches.

They just can't keep a man of that caliber off the United States team, which may this year, even more than in the days of Jesse Owens, depend on the Negro for many of its championships.

He Might Do It.

LAWSON ROBERTSON, Olympic team coach, not long ago deplored the fact that it is too late for Negro John Woodruff to turn his attention to the mile run, after having devoted most of his attention during recent years to the shorter runs.

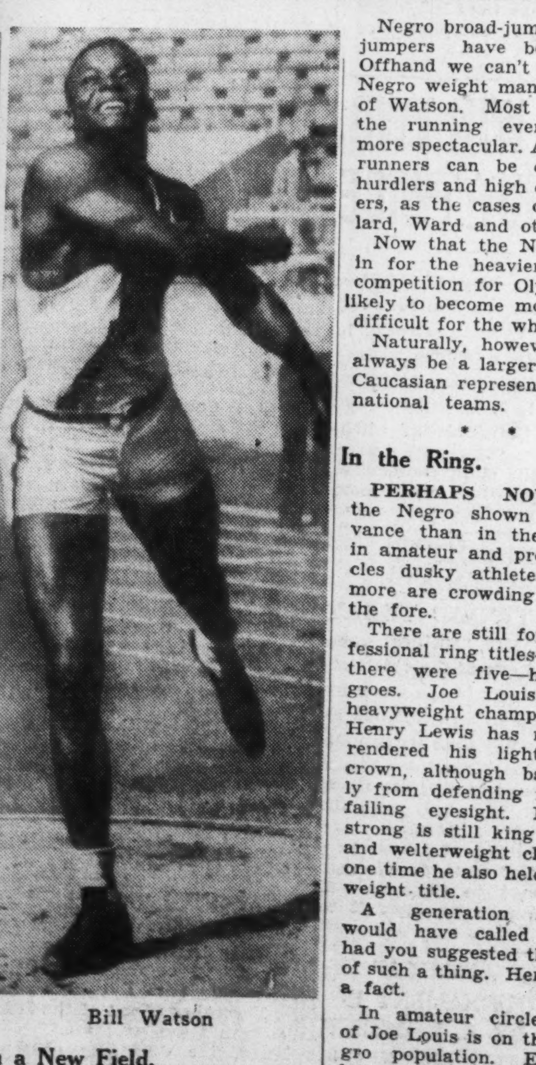
But only a few days ago, Woodruff, representing Pittsburgh University in a dual meet with Indiana, entered and won the mile event, time 4:12.8. That practically equals the time of Norman Taber, made many years ago and which stood for a long time as the world's best amateur effort. Taber's mark was made under paced conditions.

It is entirely probable that Woodruff could even better his Indiana mark. He won the half mile event the same day in time several seconds slower than his best performance.

This writer still believes that Woodruff, if he specialized at the mile, might give the Woodersons and the Cunninghams a tough contest, in a year or two.

Chances are they'll not let him try that, being content to let him continue to run the distances at which he first made his reputation, the half mile and 800 meter races. He's wonderful there.

It's too bad some arrangement to bring together Woodruff and Syd Wooderson, British world record-holder, at this distance during the Englishman's coming visit to the United States.



Bill Watson

In a New Field.

THE SUCCESS OF WATSON, sufficient to earn him the captaincy of the Michigan University track team, points to a new expansion of Negro athletic activities. Heretofore most of the dusky athletes have confined their attention to running and jumping. Watson is probably the first conspicuous success at the shotput and discus.

Negro broad-jumpers and high-jumpers have been numerous. Offhand we can't recall a single Negro weight man of the caliber of Watson. Most of them enter the running events, as being more spectacular. Almost all good runners can be developed into hurdlers and high or broad jumpers, as the cases of Owens, Pollard, Ward and others point out.

Now that the Negro has gone in for the heavier field events, competition for Olympic places is likely to become more and more difficult for the white candidates.

Naturally, however, there will always be a larger proportion of Caucasian representatives on our national teams.

PERHAPS NOWHERE has the Negro shown greater advance than in the ring. Both in amateur and professional circles dusky athletes more and more are crowding their way to the fore.

There are still four world professional ring titles—at one time there were five—held by Negroes. Joe Louis holds the heavyweight championship. John Henry Lewis has not yet surrendered his light-heavyweight crown, although barred recently from defending it because of failing eyesight. Henry Armstrong is still king of the light and welterweight classes and at one time he also held the featherweight title.

A generation ago anyone would have called the keeper, had you suggested the possibility of such a thing. Here it is today, a fact.

In amateur circles, the spell of Joe Louis is on the entire Negro population. Every Negro boy with the physique, the time and a coach to help him train for the big amateur boxing events goes in for them. They train hard and faithfully—much more so than their Caucasian rivals.

As a result of the Golden Gloves tourney here, 12 out of 16 finals were won by Negro boxers.

THREE GOLFERS TO PLAYOFF IN METROPOLITAN

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., May 27 (AP).—Three days of high-pressure golf in the Metropolitan Open weren't enough to determine a winner so there'll be an additional 18 holes played tomorrow.

That was assured late this afternoon when Paul Runyan, the P. G. A. title holder; Henry Picard, from Hershey, Pa., who holds the Augusta Masters' title, and Victor Ghezzi, North-South champion from Deal, N. J., all came through with identical scores of 283.

They spreadeagled the field by two strokes, and will have to start from scratch tomorrow afternoon on an 18-hole playoff. It's the first time the Metropolitan Open has wound up in a three-way deadlock since Walter Hagen, Long Jim Barnes and Charlie Hoffmer tied in 1916. "The Haig" won the playoff.

So the three will play off tomorrow for the $750 first prize and 60 point toward the Vardon Trophy, the standing which makes up to a large extent the personnel of the Ryder Cup team.

INTER-PARK SOFTBALL GAME AT MAPLEWOOD

The Independent Mayrose softball team of the Sisler South Side Park, and the Union Bricks of the Maplewood Park, two of the strongest men's aggregations in the city, will meet in the first major interpark softball exhibition of the season, at the Maplewood Park, tonight. The game is scheduled for 9 o'clock.

In the girls' opener, the Grandma Cakes will oppose the Cleo Colas. In a previous contest this season the teams played a 10-inning, 1 to 1 tie.

The Unions, with six victories in as many starts, will start their ace hurler Leslie Less, while Elmer Dauer, speed ball specialist, will probably start for Independent. The South Side club got off to a poor start this season, dropping their first two games, but returned to winning form with three victories in the last three starts.

SEWELL HOLDS CUBS, PIRATES TAKE THIRD

CHICAGO, May 27 (AP).—Truett (Rip) Sewell held the Chicago Cubs to five hits today as the Pittsburgh Pirates defeated the National League champions again, 9 to 1, giving the invaders two one-sided victories in succession.

The defeat, the third straight for the Cubs, slid them into fourth place and put Pittsburgh third in the standings.

NOTRE DAME PITCHER HOLDS IOWA TO ONE HIT, WINS, 1-0

IOWA CITY, Ia., May 27 (AP).—A double by Jim George, Iowa's leading hitter, ruined a no-hit, no-run game for Rex Ellis, Notre Dame pitcher, here today as the Irish won, 1 to 0.

The defeat snapped Iowa's winning streak at 11 straight. The Hawks defeated Notre Dame, 8 to 4, yesterday. Ellis fanned seven Hawkeye batters and walked six.

PRINCE

GROHS' MOUNT, SKY WIND, IS BEATEN BY HEAD

Leading Jockey of Meeting Scores 34th Victory Aboard Nim in Fifth Race.

By Dent McSkimming

After a succession of heartbreaking reverses, Prince Argo, the defeated favorite in three previous starts at Fairmount, proved himself not alone a fast race horse, but one of the gamest colts of the year as he recovered a lost lead and outlasted Sky Wind and Jay D. Bane to win the big race of yesterday's program. A crowd of 12,000 was thrilled to the screaming point as three horses raced heads apart through the quarter-mile long home stretch.

Despite his previous disappointments, Prince Argo went to the post heavily played at odds-on. Sky Wind, victor in a similar field two weeks ago, was second choice, largely because Otto Grohs, brilliant apprentice rider, was up, and Khar Fair was third choice.

Prince Argo snatched the lead, chased down the back stretch by Transview and Jay D. Bane. They caught him at the stretch turn and Grohs had Sky Wind actually in the lead by half a length with an eighth of a mile to go. Then it was that Jockey Bobby Morris found he had an exceptional horse under him. Running in the center of a trio, with least racing room of all, Prince Argo responded to Morris' urging, bore down for the last heavy effort and literally wore the other two out. He was winner by a head over Sky Wind and the third horse, Jay D. Bane, was only beaten half a length.

The track was heavy as the program opened and was drying out so that Prince Argo stepped the six furlongs in 1:14 over a slow track, a very fine performance.

As the horses were parading to the post for the seventh race, a rainstorm, pushed along on a high wind, swept the track.

17-Minute Post Delay.

The opening race started as a duel between Alma Mae, the favorite, and Brilliant Stone, second choice. They ran off and hid from the others going down the back stretch, but in the last quarter Brilliant Stone pulled away to win by three lengths.

A post delay of 17 minutes, caused by the contrary actions of the oldster, Butch, the 3 to 1 favorite, marred the second race. The bad actor had a lot of early speed and looked a winner until Civil War, a 13-to-1 shot, caught him in the last stride. Comet o'Jack, another wild one at the barrier, finished third, beaten half a length.

Able Abe snatched an early lead over 11 rivals in the third and finished a length and a half in front of Ito, the Mrs. E. M. Flaherty trained horse that came from fa back. Doctor Tim was third.

The daily double refund on Civil War and Able Abe was $167.4 for $2.

PRINCE ARGO, ODDS-ON CHOICE, FINALLY WINS AT FAIRMOUNT

Hank Scores Again.

THOUGH Ernie Roderick, strong and bold,
Came forth like Roderick Dhu of old,
He failed to muddle through;
For 'Ammering 'Enry quickly found—
No later than the second round—
That Roderick wouldn't do.

Hank said his hands were sore and bruised,
And, therefore, he should be excused
From knocking Roderick out.
But, in the mind of any chap,
That 'Ammering 'Enry won the scrap,
There wasn't any doubt.

The Britons took a shine to Hank—
Upon their champs they like to bank,
But thought it wouldn't pay.
The crowd was small but quite select,
As one would naturally expect

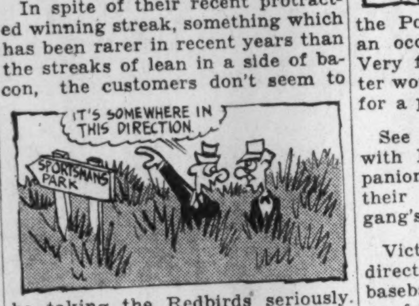
What Goes on Here?

In spite of their recent protracted winning streak, something which has been rarer in recent years than the streaks of lean in a side of bacon, the customers don't seem to be taking the Redbirds seriously. At any rate, instead of beating a path to Sportsman's Park, the hardy pioneer has to cut his way through the weeds and underbrush with a sickle.



IT'S SOMEWHERE IN THIS DIRECTION
SPORTSMAN'S PARK

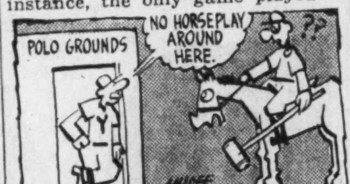
Even "Red," the jolly Janus of the pass gate, is hard pressed to keep awake between customers, and the merry tinkle of a quarter dropping into the cashbox makes him jump like a startled fawn.

It wasn't that way when the old Gashouse Gang was emitting fumes that had the opposition gasping for breath and sending for the pulmotor.

How Come?

True, some of the big gate attractions are not with us any longer, but normally a winning team should offset the loss of a few individual stars. It must be something in the air.

There are a number of things connected with sport as played in the United States that would tend to confuse the British mind. For instance, the only game played at the Polo Grounds is baseball and an occasional game of football. Very few outside the social register would know where to go to look for a polo game.



See where T. Dewey caught up with Fritz Kuhn and three companions seemingly trying to make their getaway. Heil! Heil! the gang's all here.

Victor Saville, an English movie director, seeing his first game of baseball in Hollywood, commented as follows: "The nearest I can figure is that the pitcher is allowed four mistakes, but a batter can make only three."

By consulting any ballplayer he would glean the further information that the umpire can make as many mistakes as he pleases.

BAER RULES AS CHOICE TO WIN FROM LOU NOVA

FERNDALE, N. Y., May 27. (AP).

APPARENTLY nettled by criticism of his recent boxing form in training, Max Baer snapped out of his lethargy today to flash the best performance he has shown in the last week.

The former heavyweight champion, prepping for his 15-round bout against Lou Nova at the Yankee Stadium Thursday night, was alert and sharp in his boxing and punched hard and fast with both hands. He sparred one lively round with Elza Thompson, staggered Sandy McDonald several times in their two rounds and finished with a spirited session against Charley Ketchuck.

NEW YORK, May 27 (AP).—Madcap Maxie Baer, who used to be a playboy, and serious Lou Nova, who never was, neared the end of their training grind today, but even at this late date their fight Thursday night still looked as close as ham and eggs.

These two family men from California are due to tangle 15 rounds or less in Yankee Stadium, for the right to take on the winner of the June 28 Joe Louis-Tony Galento get-together in September.

Up to now, Madcap Maxie has been installed as a slight favorite to take the young ex-college clouter. You can get $5 for $1 if you think the former heavyweight king will kayo the blond blaster, or he's favored at something like 2 to 3 to win the decision.

But Maxie has looked so woeful in training, has been belted around so consistently by sparmates, while Lou has shown such improvement, that there are any number of short-enders. Then, too, Maxie is about as unpredictable as the weather when he climbs into the ring.

Undoubtedly there will be plenty of empty seats when they climb into the ring. Promoter Mike Jacobs probably will count about $100,000 in the till by the time the waltz starts.

In addition to their mutual ambition to collect some $50,000 or so for a September title brawl, these two fellows have a lot in common right now. Each has shouted that he's out to produce.

Glenn Cunningham Wins.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, May 27 (AP).—Glenn Cunningham, Kansas' great distance runner, won the Intermountain A. A. U. mile today in the comparatively slow time of 4 minutes, 21.2 seconds. Cunningham ran away from the best milers Utah and Idaho colleges and universities could produce, leading the second place Ed Hart, Utah Rhodes scholar-elect, to the tape by 30 yards. Hart was given a three seconds start.

LEWIS MUST PASS TEST OR FORFEIT TITLE

WASHINGTON, May 27 (AP).—The National Boxing Association today ordered John Henry Lewis to submit to a medical examination and told him that if he failed to pass it the association would declare his lightheavyweight title vacant.

Earlier this year Michigan Boxing authorities refused Lewis permission to enter a bout at Detroit on the ground that the sight of one eye was damaged. Lewis then went to England for a bout and encountered a similar refusal there.

Charles F. Reynolds, president of the N. B. A., sent the order to Gus Greenlee, manager of Lewis, after a meeting of the executive board. He said that a physical examination by three Pittsburgh doctors selected by Commissioner Havey Boyle of Pennsylvania would be satisfactory to the association.

"In making this decision," Reynolds said, "we are trying to be fair to boxing as a sport, to the public that supports it, to John Henry Lewis in the interests of his own health and to the leading contenders for his title."

Should Lewis fail to pass the examination, the association said, it would recognize as a world's championship contest a bout between Melio Bettina, Beacon, N. Y., and any of the following: Gus Lesnevich, Cliffside, N. J.; Dave Clark of Detroit; Don Richards of Australia; Billy Conn of Pittsburgh.

Manager at 26.

BROWNS-TIGERS GAME PICKETS DISPERSED

16 Arrests Made in Detroit as Briggs Auto Strikers Mass at Baseball Stadium.

DETROIT, May 27 (AP).—The CIO United Automobile Workers, whose strike at the Briggs Manufacturing Company plants has made approximately 70,000 workers idle, were repulsed in an attempt to march in picket formation at Briggs Baseball Stadium today, a detail of mounted police dispersing them and arresting 16 persons.

There were several skirmishes between 60 policemen and the pickets, whose numbers they estimated at 3000, but no one was injured as the mounted patrolmen drove the demonstrators out of Trumbull avenue, clearing the entrances to the stadium. Four women and 12 men were arrested.

The disturbance had subsided well before game time, and 15,000 or more fans were in the park when the first game of a doubleheader between the Tigers and the St. Louis Browns began.

Walter O. Briggs, owner of the Tigers and chairman of the strikebound automobile body manufacturing company which bears his name, witnessed some of the skirmishing.

The Briggs strike, called by the UAW faction allied with the Congress of Industrial Organizations, began last Monday following the breakdown of negotiations over renewal of a contract.

James F. Dewey, Federal Labor Department conciliator, will resume conferences with union and company representatives Monday.

AUGUST H. NIEDERLUECKE.

A. H. NIEDERLUECKE, EX-ALDERMAN, DIES

Politician and Oil Salesman, Who Retired After 1933 Landslide, Succumbs at 71.

August H. Niederluecke, for 16 years Alderman from the Nineteenth Ward, died yesterday of a cerebral hemorrhage at the St. Louis Altenheim, 5408 South Broadway, to which he and his wife had retired in 1937 after the 1933 Democratic landslide had forced him from public office and his income as an oil salesman had dwindled with his political prestige.

Niederluecke, who was 71 years old, served four terms on the Board of Aldermen. He was elected for the first time in 1917. Once a man of 255 pounds, he was a well-known figure in City Hall. With his aldermanic income of $150 a month, sizeable commissions on the sale of oil to a department store, a dairy and other large consumers, and speculations in the stock market, he accumulated a fortune of more than $100,000.

The crash of 1929 virtually wiped out his market gains, and when he was defeated for re-election in 1933, his important customers drifted away. It was something that was to be expected, he told a Post-Dispatch reporter. Big business people liked to patronize an Alderman, he said, even if he did nothing to gain their trade.

He took his reverses philosophically, moving from the Nineteenth Ward to a modest apartment at 4731 Virginia avenue and then to the Altenheim.

Niederluecke was born in Westphalia, Germany, and came to St. Louis, where an uncle had a grocery store, when he was 20. He conducted a saloon and grocery 22 years, moving from Fourteenth and Carr streets to Elliott avenue and Gamble streets as neighborhoods changed, and finally closing up to go into the oil business.

Beside his wife, two sons survive. Funeral services will be tomorrow afternoon at the Altenheim. Burial will be in Oak Grove Cemetery.

Utility Officer Kills Himself.

PLATTE CITY, Mo., May 27 (AP).—Smith Clemings, 61 years old, manager of the Missouri Gas & Electric Co. here, shot himself to death today in the law offices of Jay Wilson, a friend, Wilson told officers. Associates said Clemings had been in ill health several years.

NATIONAL INCOME FOR 1939 TWO PCT. ABOVE LAST YEAR'S

$21,561,000,000 Total for Four Months, Commerce Department Says Is Estimate.

WASHINGTON, May 27 (AP).—The Commerce Department estimated today the national income in the first four months of 1939 totaled $21,561,000,000, a gain of 2 per cent over the figure for the corresponding period of last year.

A continuation of the same increase would result in a national income this year of $65,600,000,000, compared with $64,200,000,000 for 1938.

Included in national income are all payments to individuals—wages, salaries, dividends, interest, income from enterprise and relief payments.

The seasonally adjusted index of income payments dropped from 84.1 in March to 82.6 in April, but is now 3 per cent above the 1938 low of 80.4, recorded last May.

The decline in the index in April, the department said, reflected largely shutdown in bituminous coal production. Other depressing influences were a sharp drop in unemployment insurance benefits and a 5 per cent decline in direct and work relief payments.

Two large sections of the King's Household are the religious and medical divisions. The second numbers 24, including four physicians, four extra physicians, one sergeant-surgeon, and three surgeons, dentists and oculists. One member is a manipulative surgeon (bone-setter in baseball language). King Edward VIII was the first British sovereign to recognize that branch of the profession by a Household appointment.

Then there are miscellaneous officials of the Household such as the Royal Coroner, whose services are seldom needed. He would, however, preside at the inquest should anyone in the Royal establishment die an unnatural death or under such circumstances that a physician could not certify as to the cause. There is also a postmaster at Buckingham Palace and the head of the Household police.

'Board Chairman of Empire, Inc.,' George VI Works 16 Hours a Day Running World's Biggest Business

With Hand-Picked Staff of 250 He Keeps in Touch With Main Events of Britain's Far-Flung Territories.

By ARTHUR E. MANN
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, May 27.

HE is named and styled His Majesty Albert Frederick Arthur George, by the Grace of God, of Great Britain and Ireland and the British Dominions Beyond the Seas, King, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India. That is the man called the King of England. But boil those names and titles down into one business title and he may rightly be described as Chairman of the Board of Great Britain, the Dominions and the Empire, Inc.

It is the biggest business in the world; a concern covering 13,253,240 square miles, with a population of 494,870,104.

Of course, a large number of these officials are not on daily duty. Many function only on ceremonial occasions, some only when the King is in Scotland, at Windsor Castle or elsewhere outside London:

The second numbers 24, including four physicians, four extra physicians, one sergeant-surgeon, and three surgeons, dentists and oculists. Then there are miscellaneous officials of the Household such as the Royal Coroner, whose services are seldom needed. He would, however, preside at the inquest should anyone in the Royal establishment die an unnatural death or under such circumstances that a physician could not certify as to the cause. There is also a postmaster at Buckingham Palace and the head of the Household police.

Equerries-in-Waiting.

The most important officials, of those who are not attached to any office, are the four Equerries-in-Waiting. At least one attends the King whenever the latter leaves the palace. Their job, among others, is to carry the King's money on such occasion. When the late King George V was attending a public function one day, and asked his equerry for some small change, the latter discovered that he had forgotten his wallet and the King had to borrow a pound from a newspaper man who was trailing the Royal party.

One of these four equerries is his personal pilot, Wing Commander E. H. Fielden of the Royal Air Force, Captain of the King's Flight. The King's planes are registered in his name. The King has also 24 extra equerries, on whose services he calls as ceremony demands.

But the real work of the King's business is done in two offices in London about a quarter of a mile apart. One is the King's Secretariat at Buckingham Palace and the other the Lord Chamberlain's office in St. James's Palace.

The principal officials at Buckingham Palace are the Lord Chamberlain, head of the King's household, who is the Earl of Clarendon; the Lord Steward, the Duke of Buccleuch; the Master of the Horse, the Duke of Beaufort; the Keeper of the Privy Purse, Maj. Sir James Alexander; the Master of the Household; the Private Secretary, Major the Right Honorable Sir Alexander Hardinge; and three assistant private secretaries.

The Keeper of the Privy Purse is concerned entirely with the royal finances. Before any expenditure from royal funds can be made, except one of a purely private nature, the department or official concerned must obtain his authorization.

The Master of the Horse is titular head of the Royal Mews, but the real work of supervision is done by the Crown Equerry, Col. Sir Arthur Erskine, who has a house in the mews. The latter is general manager of all the King's horses, coaches, carriages and automobiles and controls a staff of about 100 chauffeurs, mechanics, cleaners, coachmen, grooms and saddlers.

The private secretary is probably closer to the King than any of the palace officials. He deals with big questions of policy and the relations between the King and the Prime Minister and Cabinet. One of his three assistants is usually detailed as press secretary and serves as contact man between the palace and the newspapers.

The King's Outguard.

One of the routine jobs of the secretariat is to work out in minute detail the plans for the King when he leaves London. Sometimes one of the secretaries goes ahead of the royal party to the place to be visited. The names of all those persons whom his host may wish to present to the King must be submitted for the latter's approval before the invitations can be sent out. Finally, the King's detectives, Scotland Yard and the local police have to work out arrangements for the King's protection.

George VI is a methodical monarch and tries to keep to a routine in his work in London. His day usually begins immediately after an early breakfast, when he reads his private and unofficial correspondence and glances at the newspapers. At 9:30 he confers with his secretaries in his study. They arrive with memoranda of the day's appointments and of questions to be discussed and with official mail and state papers which must be read and signed.

Then the King receives visitors—Governors of British territory who are home on leave, British diplomats from abroad, high officers of the fighting service and members of the Government. This occupies his time until lunch. Afterward he usually exercises, in the palace gardens if the weather is good, otherwise in the gymnasium.

From then until tea-time he reads documents which pour in a steady stream from the Foreign Office and other Government departments. After tea he frequently receives more visitors.

Private News Flash.

Every night between 8 and 8:30, when Parliament is in session, King George receives a telegram from the Vice-Chamberlain of the Household, who is always a member of the House of Commons and one of the Government whips. This gives him a summary of the day's proceedings in the House. It is a personal account written in the sender's own phraseology. The King likes a brief, pithy statement, as he gets the full official report the next morning in Hansard, the English equivalent of the Congressional Record.

Newspapers are much used in compiling information for the King on subjects and from angles which are not covered by official reports. Secretaries at the Palace read and bring to his attention whatever they think will interest him. The Foreign Office news department keeps track of all the important foreign newspapers and its gleanings are at his disposal, together with the reports from the British embassies and legations abroad on the news-

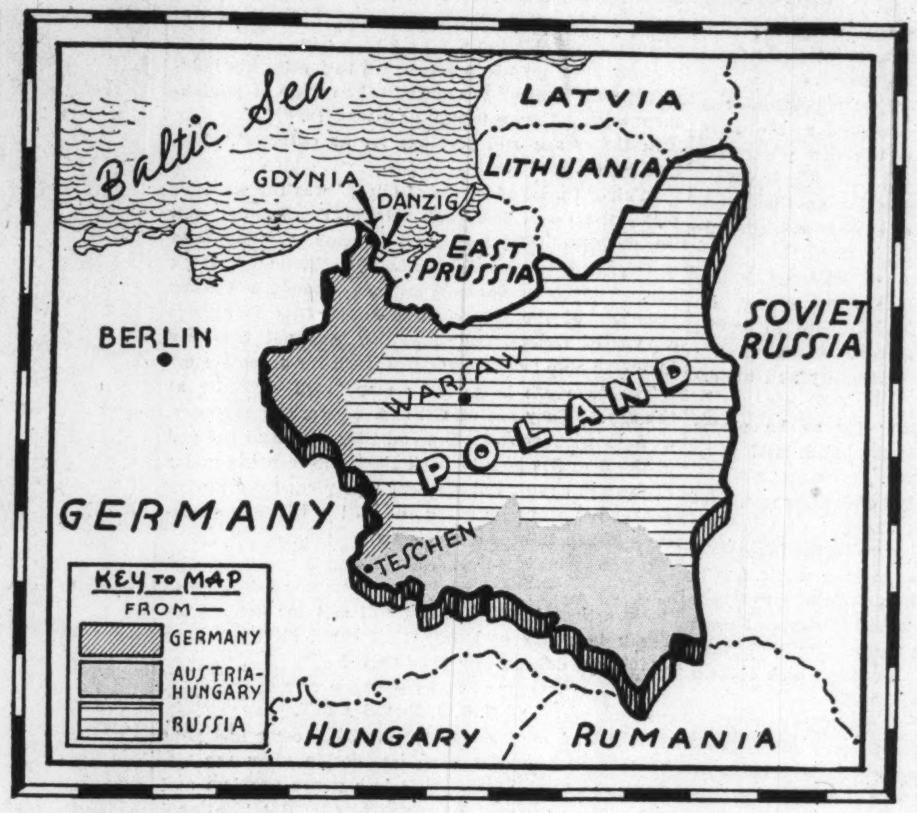
POLAND LIVES IN FEAR OF ANOTHER MUNICH

THRUST INTO ROLE LIKE CZECHS'

However, It Can Concentrate Fighting Force of 3,000,000 on One Border Against Nazi Strength of 8,000,000 That Must Defend Many Fronts.

Minorities of 11,500,000 Unabsorbed—Feudal Splendor Among Landed Aristocracy While in Some Areas Living Conditions Are Very Low.



By MARQUIS W. CHILDS
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 27.

THE unenviable role that Czecho-Slovakia played in Europe's crisis before the last crisis, has now been assigned to Poland. More powerful in many respects than the country that has now vanished from the map, Poland nevertheless lives in growing fear of another Munich which will mean if not dismemberment then at least serious losses.

As days merge into weeks the uncertainty and the tension increase. There are significant parallels to Munich. "Britain advises caution." "Poland reported standing firm." "Hitler said to be seeking negotiation." These are the headlines of the moment. For anyone who takes the trouble to look back at the newspaper files of last year they sound like slightly inaccurate echoes of that phase of Europe's perpetual crisis.

Poland is meanwhile seeking friends among the democracies. A delegation of important Poles headed by Antoni Roman, Minister of Industry and Commerce, has left Washington after conferences, luncheons and dinners with high administration officials. The prospects of a trade treaty were discussed and in numerous speeches and statements the Poles expressed their belief in the ideals of democracy and the future of Poland as a democratic state.

Poland, Like Czecho-Slovakia, Created by Versailles Treaty.

Actually, of course, Poland is far less of a democracy than Czecho-Slovakia. Important elements within Poland have sought to introduce the ways of western democracy but the country has remained to a large degree feudal, dominated by a few very rich aristocratic families. This is made clear in "Poland: Key to Europe," by Raymond Leslie Buell, until recently president of the Foreign Policy Association. While Buell's book—just published, the only study of present day Poland in English—is on the whole sympathetic, it is plain that the effort to unify the peoples of this Slavic empire has not succeeded.

Poland, like Czecho-Slovakia, was created by the Versailles Treaty. The Poles had a very powerful delegation at the Paris peace conference of 1919. Partly as a result of the pressure they were able to bring and partly because France wanted to put a strong barrier between Germany and Russia, the Poles acquired a huge territory. Their country was made almost as big as it had been before the great powers dismembered it in the eighteenth century.

Poland acquired a considerable part of Upper Silesia which had belonged to Germany, an area that included coal mines, iron ore, steel and nitrate works. This was assigned on the basis of a plebiscite held in the disputed area. Equally important, the Versailles peace makers gave Poland the controversial corridor to the Baltic in which the port of Gdynia has been built. And a large slice of the Ukraine went to Poland, too. In fact, leaving out the powers that fought the war, Poland got more at Versailles than any other country.

Won Race With Germany For Czech Strip by 17 Minutes.

In addition, the Poles managed to snip off a small piece of Czecho-Slovakia immediately after the Munich crisis. Polish and German armies raced each other to get the area lying around Teschen close to the Polish-Czech border. The Poles got there first—by 17 minutes the legend is—and took not only Teschen but 300 square miles including the town of Bogumin, said to be the most important railhead in Europe because of its strategic position on the railroad to Bagdad. Teschen and the territory around it, the Poles declare, was seized by the Czechs in 1919 when the Polish armies were fighting the Bolsheviks.

Along with all this territory acquired after 1919, the Poles also got a large number of minority peoples and with minorities in post-war Europe there are always potential dangers. In fact Hitler has based his whole strategy on the minority issue.

Although Poland is generally thought of as a state of 34,500,000 people, Buell points out, the Polish population is only about 23,000,000. The most important minorities are Germans, Ukrainians and Jews. There is also a considerable number of White Russians. For the most part, in recent years at any rate, the Polish Government has tried to suppress these minorities, stamping out any attempt to establish cultural differences. And as invariably happens, this has served chiefly to intensify racial passions and the separatist movement.

The Ukrainians' drive for independence is none the less ardent because it has been largely forced underground. Ukrainians living in the United States have helped to finance the movement. Recently there was opened in Washington the Ukrainian Bureau to propagandize for independence for this people, part of whom now live in Poland and part in Soviet Russia. It has been suggested that Nazi Germany is behind this independence movement and recent propaganda from the Ukrainian Bureau does not altogether disclaim the charge. After all, the Ukrainians point out, when the American colonies were seeking their independence, they did not hesitate to accept aid from the "absolutist government" of France. And authorities such as Buell predict that if Hitler ever does acquire the Ukraine, or part of it, he will not find a docile people ready to accept Nazi ideology.

Jews, Who Form One-Tenth Of Population, Chief Sufferers.

In spite of the German-Polish non-aggression treaty of 1934, the two countries have wrangled bitterly over their respective minorities during the last five years. There is a Polish minority in Germany just as there is a German minority in Poland and constant charges of oppression have come from both camps. While not all the Germans in Poland are enrolled in pro-Nazi organizations, the majority are for Hitler, according to Buell, and in no small part this may be attributed to the harsh policy followed by the Polish Government. Nazi influence has greatly increased since the union with Austria and the Munich accord.

The Jewish minority has suffered probably more than any other. There are about 3,300,000 Jews in Poland which is about 10 per cent of the population. This is a larger Jewish population than in any other country except the United States. In many respects the policy of the Polish Government toward the Jews resembles that of the Nazis, although Poland has never adopted any legislation ruling the Jews out of the national life.

Terrible pogroms occurred in 1919. Under the late Marshal Pilsudski, strong man of Poland, the position of the Jews somewhat improved. But since Pilsudski's death in 1935, anti-Semitism has greatly increased. One form that this takes is an economic boycott which has been approved by the courts, dignitaries of the Catholic Church, and the Government, Buell declares.

The Supreme Council of the Camp of National Unity, reflecting the attitude of many Government leaders, has declared in favor of compulsory emigration for Jews. Jewish students in Polish universities, even in a technical school endowed by a wealthy Jewish family, are compelled to occupy "ghetto benches." Numerous clauses restrict the number of Jews allowed to attend university and there is a strong movement to bar them entirely.

Besides the grave problems growing out of minority conflicts, the Poles are confronted by a major economic problem. Poland is primarily an agricultural country. More than 60 per cent of the population derive a living from the soil. With quota systems, impossibly high tariff walls and the thousands and one restraints of an era of intense nationalism, Poland now finds it increasingly difficult to send an agricultural surplus into world trade. And industrialization has not kept pace with a population growth greater than any country in Europe.

Living Standard in Rural Area Among Lowest in the World.

The result is dire proverty, a living standard, particularly in the rural areas, so low that it compares only with that of Japan or the remoter Balkans. Population is growing far more rapidly than either industrial or agricultural production which means a constantly lowered standard of living. Buell quotes Polish statistics to show that 93 per cent of the population had a monthly income of only $4.50. Seven per cent had an average income of $27 a month.

In certain areas the most extreme poverty exists. This is particularly true in the northeast, where life, especially in the bitter winters, is at an appallingly low level. The Government's budget is limited. About 3,000,000 children lack any educational facilities; at least 25,000 more teachers are needed. Official statistics put illiteracy at 23 per cent but many observers believe that more than half the peasants are unable to read and write.

In striking contrast is the almost feudal wealth of a small number of landed aristocrats. Buell records that 2,111,000 families live on farms of less than 15 acres. These small farms make up something like 15 per cent of the total area in farms. At the same time 19,000 owners hold farms totaling 43 per cent of the total farm area.

A landed aristocracy has always played a part in Polish history. Certain great families with huge holdings have from time to time asserted a sovereign independence. One of these is the family of Count Jerzy Potocki, Polish Ambassador to Washington. The Potocki name recurs again and again in Polish history. On their vast estates the Potocki family live today in feudal splendor. Interminable marble corridors are lined with footmen in powdered wigs. When the Potockis ride out into the countryside, accompanied by grooms and footmen, the peasants drop to their knees. Perhaps in no other country except Hungary has aristocratic privilege survived so completely.

Real Problem Is Still More Land for Peasants.

Persistent efforts have been made to relieve the agricultural situation but they have not been conspicuously successful. The real problem is still to obtain more land for the peasants. In Czecho-Slovakia the large estates were partitioned but this has been done on only a limited scale in Poland. More than two-thirds of the land subdivided in Poland has been disposed of by their original owner by private sale rather than by expropriation, Buell writes. And the tendency of the private owner is always to dispose of his inferior land. Despite all the efforts

Plebiscite Would Show British People 90 Pct. in Favor of Pact With Russia, Lloyd George Says

Had It Existed in September, He Thinks, Czecho-Slovakian, Spanish and Albanian Republics Would Still Be Alive.

By DAVID LLOYD GEORGE
Wartime Prime Minister of Great Britain.

LONDON, May 27.

AFTER months of inexplicable and inexcusable delay, it looks as if the triple alliance against aggression among Britain, France and Russia is going through at last. But the Prime Minister informs us that there are still some minor questions to settle. There is no hurry. Bonnet proclaims his "firm conviction" that the talks at Geneva would "rapidly succeed."

The use of the words "firm" and "rapidly" seem incongruous and ridiculous when one recalls the delays, the hesitations, and snubbings of Russia which have characterized British and French diplomacy. Had there been such an alliance in existence in September last, the Czecho-Slovakian republic, the Spanish republic, and Albanian monarchy would have been alive today, and aggression would have received a check from which it could not recover.

Diplomatic Hagglings.

If one were to regard these diplomatic hagglings merely from the point of view of the exigencies of the international situation, it would be impossible to find a rational explanation of the valuable time wasted in coming to any conclusion. It is only when one explores the position from the viewpoint of the internal politics of France and of Britain, that we can understand the motive that prompts the reluctance to come into direct and close association with the Soviet Republic.

In both Britain and France the extreme conservative elements are virtually in command of the Government today. The French newspapers are in control of the great manufacturers and the church, and although the voters return a democratic majority with a liberal program the constant pressure from day to day of the conservative press has worn down one government after another, and finally destroyed the solidarity of the new Democratic Front which had triumphed at the election. It is remarkable that while by-elections in France demonstrate that the majority of the electors still retain their faith in a democratic alliance, that of the ministers and deputies, who breathe the mephitic atmosphere created in Paris by the aggregation of powerful newspapers which are rootedly hostile to liberalizing ideas, has become less robust.

I was very much struck by this explanation of the French political situation during a recent stay in France for two or three months. In a country where the votes went one way, practically all the newspapers went the other, and their influence upon democratic readers who were forced to resort to them for the news of the day was depressing in the extreme.

Opposition Lacks Leader.

French democracy so far has thrown up no leader who has the skill and the strength to stand up to that powerful and pervasive combination of finance, accumulated wealth, the church, and society, which among them control most of the popular newspapers in France. The circulation of the purely democratic papers constitutes a negligible percentage of the whole.

To a certain extent that is also true of England. The Liberal and Socialist press has a very much larger circulation than their French colleagues. I doubt whether the corresponding papers in France would have a combined circulation in France of a million and a half. On the other hand, the British democratic organs could claim that they have between them at least five or six millions of readers. But in addition to these party organs, there are newspapers that display an independence of party bias and direction which seems to be lamentably absent in France. Nevertheless, the powerful vested interests which dominate administrations in both France and Britain view with horror the Russian experiments, especially the attitude of Soviet Russia toward private property and the rule of the proletariat.

British and French ideals of government, especially their attitude toward liberty of conscience and freedom of expression, are just as antagonistic to the Nazi and Fascist ideals and methods as they are to the principle of Bolshevism. However, there is an underground current of sympathy and admiration, not openly expressed, for the strong hand of authoritarianism, which — to use the old phrase—"keeps the working classes in their proper places" and "teaches them to do their duty in the state of life to which it has pleased God to call them."

That is why Mr. Chamberlain, who represents this phase of conservatism, had a pact of friendship with Mussolini almost as soon as he came into power, and has only been driven reluctantly to an alliance with Soviet Russia.

Hitler, but Not Stalin.

He flew three times to Germany to shake hands with Herr Hitler, but would shudder at the suggestion that at that time it would have been more useful for him to have a talk with M. Stalin. If you had proposed to him a visit to Moscow as well as to Munich, in his heart he would have felt that it was just like asking him to visit a leper settlement and shake hands with the chief of the stricken community. He has assured the House of Commons that no ideological differences have interfered with the making of an alliance with Russia, and no doubt he thinks he is telling the truth. Nevertheless, it is not strictly accurate.

Quite unconsciously the ideological chasm between him and the Soviets is responsible for his reluctance. Five minutes' conversation with any of his supporters, picked at random from any part of the country, would convince you that there lies the explanation of one of those disastrous failures of diplomatic action which have rendered precarious the peace of the world for a whole year.

There has, however, been a very rapid change among the more enlightened Conservatives during the last few days, or perhaps weeks, on the question of concluding a military alliance with Russia. Expression has been given to it in independent Conservative papers like the Telegraph and the Express, and in the House of Commons by distinguished statesmen like Mr. Eden and Mr. Winston Churchill. There can be no doubt now that if a plebiscite were taken of opinion in Britain, well over 90 per cent would vote unhesitatingly for the alliance.

Appeasement Fails.

What accounts for the change? One reason is the complete and acknowledged failure of the policy of appeasement. It was generally believed that the dictators would be mollified and propitiated by concessions such as the surrender of Czecho-Slovakia and the delivery of Spain to Fascism. Now it is realized that these morsels—or rather these hearty meals—have only stimulated the gargantuan appetite of these gross feeders.

France now sees them reaching towards the daintiest of the fruits in her great orchard in North Africa. Britain is also waking up to the fact that they traded on her complacency to bolt the sluicegates of the Mediterranean against her fleets and trading ships. Mr. Chamberlain got frightened when he heard the crunching of the bones and body of Czecho-Slovakia by the Nazi teeth.

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles; that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare, never be satisfied with merely printing news, always be drastically independent, never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Enemies of Democracy.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

HE failed to pay income taxes, so the Big Boss is to be jailed. But the great crime is unavenged.

Big Tom would not steal your purse. He would not rob the Kansas City Treasury. That is, he is not a "bandit." He would organize no Communist revolt, but he would make the community the prey of Communist and Fascist agitators. He would not denounce democracy, but his actions showed his contempt for democracy. Yet, no doubt, he would die for our country in face of foreign invaders.

He made a joke of the ballot, of democratic processes for which our forefathers died. He sought control of public office to insure high prices and guaranteed profits, and this to avoid the healthy sting of the American competitive system. By indirection he did steal from the people. He did play into the hands of the enemies of democracy. He gave them evidence that democracy is a failure.

And what of the agents of our fire insurance companies? They shook hands with corruption. They encouraged bossism. They were willing to make antidemocracy and un-Americanism profitable. Were they such Communists—private brand—that they could not make the fight for right and Americanism? Yet, in wartime, they might be heroes.

Members of the American Legion, and the writer is proudly one, and other veterans, should see that perhaps it is harder to live for democracy than to die for our country, 'mid shot and shell. Our finest (?) citizens, who are patriotic to the core in wartime, will corrupt Legislatures and public officers, will make campaign contributions, not for love of party, but for special privileges and monopoly profits, which is treachery to democracy.

Gov. Stark is worth observing. He has wiped out political boils, but has he touched the cause of boils? Will not the roots produce a new crop? They always have. We have had fine political clean-up artists before. We need an economic clean-up man. Can the Governor qualify?

LIBERTY.

Repudiates Senator Doran's Stand.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

WITH reference to Senator W. J. Doran's action against the Kansas City police bill, I wish to state that this action on the part of the Senator is not the wish or at the request of any one voter of the Thirteenth Ward Democratic Organization, with a registration of 31,000 voters, or the officers thereof.

This ward is a part of Doran's district, but his action in this matter should not reflect on the organization, its workers or voters.

Gov. Stark's request that this bill should be passed should be obeyed by the elected representatives of the people. Otherwise, patronage to the ward fails for the reason that indorsement for State jobs by such Senator or Representative becomes nil, because of opposition to the executive requests and demands on needed legislation.

J. A. LINDER,
Treasurer, Thirteenth Ward Democratic Organization.

Comment on the Bar Report.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THE report of the bar committee as to dispatch of business by the St. Louis Circuit Judges is most interesting, especially for what it does not contain.

The finding is that the report prepared by the Circuit Clerk and printed in the Post-Dispatch is correct; further findings are that certain Judges (not named) failed to devote a proper amount of time to performance of their duties, evaded without excuse trial of appeals from Justices of the Peace, and customarily refused to start trial in latter half of week of cases properly assignable to them.

It was further found that other Judges (not named) were competent, efficient and attentive to their duties. The result of the report is necessarily to smear all the Judges, unless some way can be found to separate the sheep from the goats.

The committee had each of the possible culprits separately before it, and investigated all outside sources of information, and was exceptionally qualified to render an intelligible report. It is realized that considerable courage was shown by the committee, composed of lawyers in active practice, in criticising sitting Judges before whom they may have to appear at any time on behalf of clients, but in simple justice to the innocent, the committee could not fairly make an obviously incomplete report.

The report refers to a wonderful system of trial procedure now in use in New York City, which deserves a most careful investigation with a view to its adoption here.

A Pro-Tariff Opinion.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

IN a recent letter column, N. D. A. asked who benefits from tariffs, and suggests that tariff is a monopoly builder for special privilege.

Recently, the daily papers had much to say about the beef our President, posing as a friend of the farmer, bought from Argentina. Paraphrasing the Lincoln steel-rail story so often told, it occurs that if the President had bought the beef here, we would have the money and we would have the beef. As it is, Argentina has the money and we have the beef. The same logic applies to pork coming from Poland, cutlery from Germany, socks from Japan and everything else now being shipped in.

WHAT CASEY FIGHTS FOR.

Senator Mike Casey of Kansas City fights on.

He is the last legislative obstacle to the passage of Gov. Stark's anti-crime police bill. He is the lone important official survivor of the Pendergast machine's Old Guard who hasn't disappeared by way of resignation, indictment, confession of guilt—as "the river of death goes flowing, flowing away in the darkness."

Casey fought to delay the committee's favorable report on the bill. He lost.

The next battlefield will be the floor of the Senate. If it were a fair, open fight, Casey wouldn't have the ghost of a chance. But Casey will resort to strategy. He will try to suffocate the bill by amendment. Any amendment, however negligible or innocent-looking, will turn the trick. It will send the bill back to the House. And since most of the House membership has gone home, it is doubtful, our correspondent says, whether a sufficient vote could be mustered to reject the amendment, or pass the amended bill.

One other device remains—that of the Senate's refusal to adopt the emergency clause. That is probably Casey's one best hope. Were the emergency clause removed, the bill would be subject to a referendum; its operation would be suspended if the politicians procured the required number of signatures; the remnant of Kansas City's gangsters would be given a lease on life—and, though the possibility is remote that the bill would be defeated at the polls, still that remote possibility is the one precarious straw that they can cling to.

It is, to be sure, a sorry reflection on the democratic process that one stubborn, hard-boiled, special-interest-serving machine politician like Mike Casey can defy the public sentiment of Missouri, shake his fist in the face of the State's decent citizenship and imperil the enactment of a measure to rescue Missouri's second city from a terrorism reeking with all the stenches of organized criminality and underworld vice.

What is Mike Casey fighting for as he prates and plots and schemes to defeat the police bill?

Casey is fighting for bossism.

Casey is fighting for that reign of lawlessness, panoplied with the plundering privileges of approved robbery in the name of gambling hells, for the degradation of commercialized vice, for the illicit traffic in soul-destroying drugs, for immunity of murderous thugs from the law, for the endless streams of graft pouring into the Big Shot's purse—for that vast, hideous system of spoils and iniquity which Kansas City has known as Pendergastism.

That is what Mike Casey of Kansas City is battling for. That is what Senator Joe Brogan of St. Louis stood up and was counted for when he voted with Casey to delay the committee's favorable report. That is what another St. Louis Senator, William J. Doran, declared himself for when he linked arms with Casey.

And in the group include L. N. Searcy of Eminence. It is Kansas City's job to do what it will with Mike Casey. It is St. Louis' job to take care of Joe Brogan and Doran. Eminence will dispose of its Searcy.

As the bill comes to the Senate floor, every Senator will be under the surveillance of his constituency. Every Senator that ties up with Casey will go down with Casey and the Pendergast machine—down and out.

TWO BEER DRINKERS FROM MOMBASA.

Director George Vierheller has purchased for the St. Louis Zoo two chimpanzees from Mombasa which, he believes, will be "naturals" for his troupe of performing monkeys. Wandering onto a stubby tramp freighter docked at New York, Vierheller found them having their daily 5 o'clock beers with the captain. Apparently, they became quite seagoing during the long trip from Mombasa. However, they need not think they can do their hitch at the St. Louis Zoo with three sheets in the wind. Not by the Great Horn Spoon! It was only last spring that local prohibitionists were up in arms because the three performing elephants were staging a scene from "Ten Nights in a Barroom" as part of their act. These simian sailors from sybaritic Mombasa will just have to switch to 6-cent soda or be put in irons and clapped in the booby hatch.

WHY WERE COVERED BRIDGES COVERED?

One of the burning topics around St. Louis in the early autumn of 1930 was the question, Why were covered bridges covered? A Post-Dispatch editorial touched off the debate, and a snowstorm of Letters from the People followed. Despite our readers' enthusiastic co-operation, the problem wasn't settled at that time. Now the controversy is raging again, this time in Ohio.

The WPA Road Planning Survey counted up and found 609 of the old-time spans surviving in that State, so naturally the question of their architectural function came up. Eight distinct theories were discovered, some plainly facetious (for instance, to serve as billboards for circus and patent medicine advertisements) and some plausible. Favorites in the latter category are: to lure skittish horses across water, and to protect the bridge floor from the weather.

The Buckeye State research, however, omits one other plausible explanation, supplied by several of our readers nine years ago, to the effect that cattle, sheep and hogs, on the way to market, couldn't be driven across open water, so the camouflage was provided. Livestock is more sophisticated today, and anyhow, trucks have made herding animals to market obsolete, so the covered bridge also is passe.

However, there's no occasion for bitter feuds to arise over this debate. Isn't it possible that several of the suggested reasons influenced the bridge-builders of the 1800s? Anyhow, it's a fascinating topic for these languid days when spring fever is beginning to get in its deadly ravages.

American medicine loses one of its foremost leaders in the death of Dr. Charles H. Mayo. He was a great surgeon, a remarkable diagnostician, an outstanding educator. He will be longest remembered by the non-professional public, however, for the rare social vision he possessed in common with his elder brother, Dr. William J. Mayo.

The world-renowned medical center at Rochester, Minn., originating from a small hospital founded by their father and expanded to vast dimensions by the two brothers, was one product of that social vision. Healing is made available there to rich and poor. Physicians and members of allied professions are trained. New efficiency has been brought to medical practice elsewhere by this example of complete diagnostic and therapeutic service in one clinic. The two brothers might have become immensely wealthy from their enterprise; instead, they drew moderate fixed salaries and used the remainder of the revenues to advance public health, for, they explained, "We are the custodians of the people's money."

"Dr. Charlie" had one great ambition: "To relieve all the physical suffering possible during my life." It was realized in abundance, and its continued fulfillment will be his monument.

O'MALLEY.

Robert Emmet O'Malley was a blatant, blustering, bulldozing crook.

He may have lived 60 honorable years, as the Court reports in a polished obiter dictum, but the minute he became State Superintendent of Insurance he started out on his scoundrelly career, with a gun in each hand, figuratively speaking. It was not as a high official of the State, commissioned to conserve the sacred property rights of life insurance policies, that O'Malley barged into the insurance offices of St. Louis. It was as a highwayman.

When he sold out to the stock fire insurance companies and gave his name to his act of treachery, he betrayed the State, he betrayed the policyholders, he crucified his official oath and he fixed his identity forever in Missouri's annals of perfidy.

He hid his stealings, he perjured himself in his false income tax return, and, like his patron and, perhaps, his evil genius, Pendergast, O'Malley goes to prison, nominally for a year and a day.

Judge Otis has again attempted to justify his judgment—this time by the statistical average of punishment assessed against similar offenders.

Statistics are cold porridge for an outraged, plundered people.

"Thirty thousand pieces of silver" was the wretch's price, the Court has said. Reiteration cannot dull the drama of that scriptural allusion, throbbing, as it does, with the ceaseless ache of Gethsemane's black hours. Accountants might take exception to the accuracy of the figures, but Judge Otis is always a man of letters, and Macaulay was not the only historian who "would sacrifice truth for an epigram."

The days are long where men "look wistfully at the sky." They are etched somewhere, one supposes, as days without end. Yet end they do. And the god of the machine may be back for Halloween eve under the palatial roof, and the serf who picked the State's pocket for him may drink the still detained procurator's health in brown October ale.

O tempora, O mores, O'Malley.

THE G. O. P. MISSES A BET.

"National Debt week," we fear, has come and gone without making any deep impression upon the citizenry. The Federal deficit is a grave problem and one that can hardly be overstressed. But "National Debt week" was created by the Republican National Committee as a means of political publicity and, as such, received little attention.

Indeed, the public cannot be expected to listen very attentively to Senators who make economy speeches by night and vote to boost subsidies by day.

The nation is not in any immediate danger of inflation. We are a rich country, and the present debt is not in itself alarming. What is disturbing is the seeming inability of the President and Congress to do the things needed to bring about recovery and make deficit spending unnecessary.

Unless these things are done, we eventually will run into inflation. If this is allowed to happen, the country will suffer an irreparable loss—a loss which will be measured less in a contraction of our wealth than in a distrust of democratic government.

Disorders traceable to inflation are largely responsible for the fall of France from the strongest nation in Europe to a second-rate Power, riding the coattails of Britain, and able to meet its internal problems only by setting up a temporary dictatorship. Democracy is for vigorous, self-reliant people, people who disdain to bankrupt their government by demanding of it subsidies beyond its ability to pay. Somehow, "National Debt week" failed to get this point across.

WORTHY OF THE HALL OF FAME.

It took 10 years of intellectual rowing to get Edgar Allan Poe into America's Hall of Fame, where his bust reposes as that of the only Southern poet. Now the Maryland Division of the United Daughters of the Confederacy has launched a determined drive to have Sidney Lanier elected to the Hall of Fame in 1940. There should be no difficulty in winning a niche for this original and talented poet of the South.

At 7, he cut a reed on the banks of the Ocmulgee near his home in Macon, Ga., and learned to play the flute as he listened to the birds. At 19, a tutor in Oglethorpe College, he joined the Macon volunteers when the guns of Fort Sumter disrupted his dreams of music and poetry. Companions said that around the camp fires and in the prison that broke his health, Lanier's flute was "an angel imprisoned to cheer and console us." After the war, in the "dark raven days of Reconstruction," Lanier worked as hotel clerk, teacher and lawyer, seeking health and fulfillment of his desire to follow a musical or literary career. He also played the flute in the Peabody orchestra of Baltimore, and two years before he died, at 39, he was appointed lecturer in English at Johns Hopkins. He wrote his poem, "Sunrise," full of the rapture of dawn, while a temperature of 104 degrees burned out his life.

In a meeting at the Baltimore Museum of Art, Dr. N. B. Fagin of Johns Hopkins declared that Lanier had painted as realistic a picture of Southern farming in his day as John Steinbeck, the novelist, has painted in his latest novel, "The Grapes of Wrath." If there is any doubt of that, one need only look at the world Lanier saw behind his cadences:

Young Trade is dead,
And swart Work sullen sits in the hillside fern
And folds his arms that find no bread to earn,
And bows his head.

Sidney Lanier, gallant gentleman of the Old South, might well rewrite those words today, were he alive. He was far more than a master of alliterative verse. The fame of his "Marshes of Glynn" has obscured the sympathy and understanding he showed for the downtrodden, the poverty-stricken, the victims of trade and price. This campaign to give him the recognition he merits at least will take the tarnish of time off the name of one of the South's inspired minstrels.

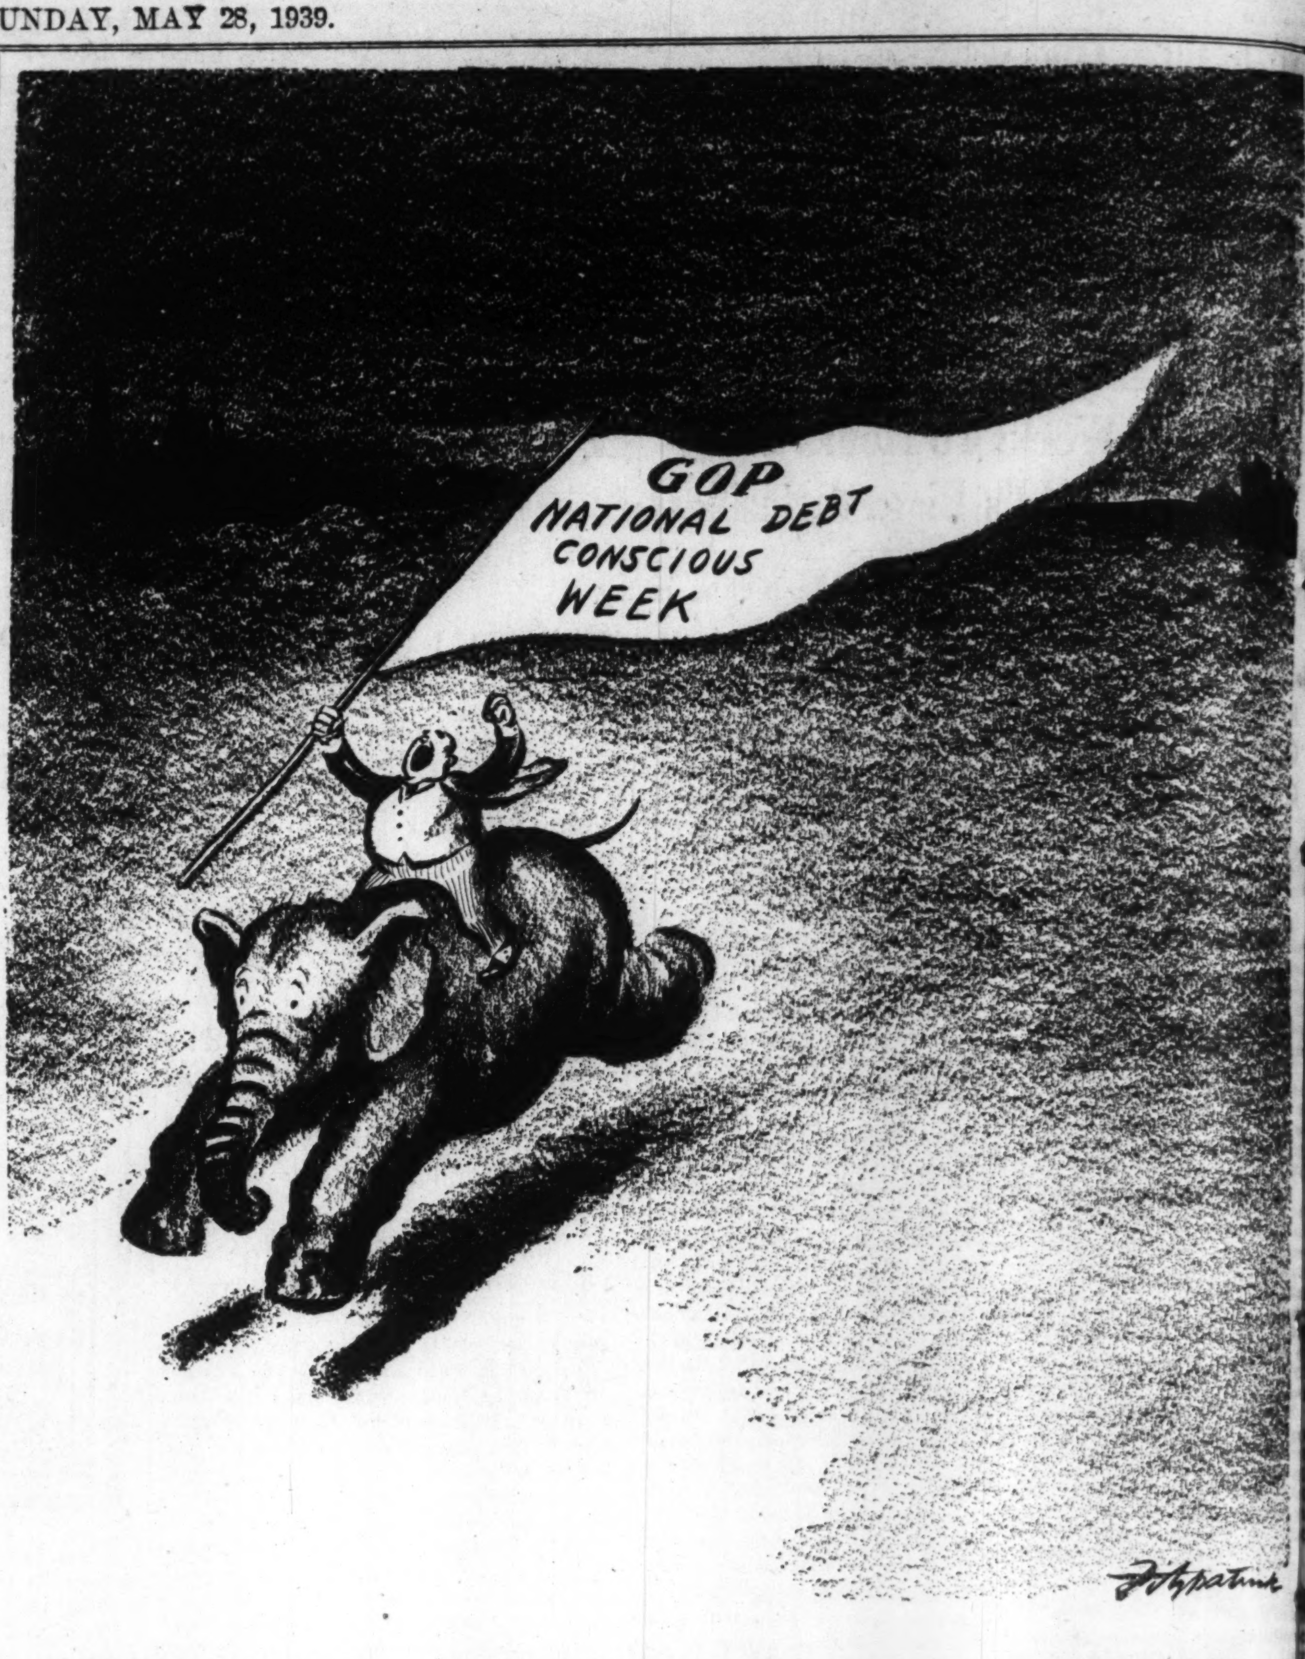
Reserve three berths on that "sinking ship" for Casey, Brogan and Doran.



THE FOLKS HAVEN'T BEEN SO AROUSED SINCE NATIONAL PRUNE WEEK.

More Blessed to Get!

The Mirror of Public Opinion

Democracy is imperiled by pressure groups seeking to benefit themselves at expense of the majority, says writer; lists tariffs, subsidies, preferential taxes and other restraints on competition as factors which lower nation's standard of living and throttle our economy.

Francis A. Harding in the American Scholar (Phi Beta Kappa Quarterly.)

A REAL peril to democracy lies in the abuse of the right of petition by thousands, literally thousands, of pressure groups, lobbies, organized minorities—call them what you will—representing every conceivable current of human thought, no matter how bizarre; infesting every town, every county seat, every state capital, in addition to Washington itself; and using every imaginable means from bribery to humbuggery to attain countless species of privilege as varied as the charms of Cleopatra.

Six hundred are listed in the Washington telephone directory alone, but these do not include those groups in other cities which send men to Washington "for the season" or which attain their aims elsewhere. The Manhattan directory lists over 1500, Chicago, 500.

A pressure group is an organization whose main purpose is to have something done for instead of by a small minority. A few individuals, believing they deserve some favor from the public, call together all the others who they believe should also qualify. They form the National Association of Something-or-Other, complete with president, anywhere from one to 10 vice-presidents, treasurer, salaried executive secretary, paid staff and members—life, associate, sustaining, active and just plain.

Of course, to read the "literature" of any pressure group is to conclude that the sum total of all human selfishness since Adam is embodied in its particular and current opponent. Rapacity, however, is not confined to any one economic or social segment of humanity.

The motive of the United Shoe Workers in demanding tariff protection against Czecho-Slovakian shoes is neither better nor worse than, but identical with, that of the National Boot and Shoe Association in making the same request. Though all pressure groups—farm, labor, educational, charitable, business, age, youth, veteran—though all bow to the "American standard of living," their every demand is aimed at making the lives of a minority easier at the expense of the American standard of living.

Cash privilege, however, whether in bonus, wage or subsidy form, is a little too obvious for all groups to succeed in getting it. The next most acceptable form of privilege lies in the destruction of competition.

For example, when it is suggested that the heavy duties on British textile machinery be lightened, the National Association of Textile Machinery Manufacturers protests. For as the bonus is to the American Legion and the cash subsidy to the American Manganese Producers, so is the protective tariff to the National Association of Textile Machinery Manufacturers.

The privilege of destroying competition, however, is not confined to protection from foreign goods. In Illinois there has been found a group of business men, called the Illinois Reciprocal Trade Association, who have united with the local branch of the United Mine Workers "to direct the buying power of Illinois, or otherwise provide employment for Illinois labor."

It appears that natural gas, piped in from other states, has made the blunder of increasing its consumption in Illinois from 3,100,000,000 cubic feet in 1929 to over 65 billion feet in 1936, thus "destroying the market for coal and, along with the coal, the jobs of almost 10,000 miners." Consequently, the two organizations have combined in declaring "relentless warfare upon natural gas and fuel oil—laborless intruders from distant states."

The "relentless warfare" consists in urging the passage of a law placing a tax of 5 cents on every 1000 feet of natural gas piped into Illinois from "foreign" states. Though an increasingly large segment of the population of Illinois have manifested their preference for natural gas, in terms which are unmistakable, the two pressure groups have vetoed their choice.

Poor America; that it harbors groups of citizens who can embrace the hypocrisy necessary to make such requests as these on grounds of "justice"! All that is needed is the barbarian, Brennus, to cast his sword into the scales and to cry, "Woe to the vanquished!"

For I have not begun to indicate the enormity either of the number of pressure groups or of the tribute they gather. What, pray, can be the cost of all the boundless bonuses, increased wages, subsidies, tariffs, quotas and discriminatory taxes demanded by all the endless thousands of pressure groups, from the Conference of Mayors to the People's Lobby, from the American Steamship Owners to the Independent Song-Writers of America, from the Townsend Clubs to the American Youth Congress, from the International Association of Police Women to the Good Citizens' Association of Squeedunk—but why go on? The list is infinite, like Banquo's issue which made Macbeth cry out, "What, will the line stretch out to the crack of doom?"

Nor can the tribute always be counted in money. Who can compute the money cost to the public of a century of "laissez-faire," still so zealously guarded by the Chamber of Commerce? Who can reckon in dollars and cents the scorn for law engendered by the severity of restrictions that were imposed at the behest of the Anti-Saloon League, the harm to public health stemming from false notions of freedom held by the Medical Liberty League? And what of the stamina of the coming generation who are learning the power of political pressure from that greatest of all teachers, the example of their parents? Can these things be measured in cash?

And how can we figure the cost of human misery under the despotism that will come unless the demands of the pressure groups are restrained? Free government is for strong men only—men who meet and solve their problems themselves; who resort to pleas only in rare matters of principle. Despotism is for the soft, whose demands for indulgence have passed beyond all reason and have rendered them unfit for the right of petition—and of free government.

Dilemma in Palestine

Books in the News

T. R. FEIWEL'S "No Ease in Zion," with its argument for appeasement of the Arabs in Palestine, was hardly out when the British went in for appeasing them in a big way. This makes some parts of the book seem out of date, but the title is more appropriate than ever. Alfred A. Knopf, New York, is publisher.

Mr. Feiwel's book, written from a viewpoint of sympathy with the aims of Zionism, proposes economic reconstruction, with financial aid for Arab villagers and Jewish settlers; a long-term plan for Jewish immigration; setting apart of the Negeb, Southern triangle of Palestine, for large-scale Jewish colonization and reclamation, and "increased autonomous government on a federal basis."

The writer warns against "vague Arab federation as envisaged by the British Government" and against "linking Palestine, with its Mediterranean economy, to an unstable federation of Arab territories of pronounced feudal and tribal background."

Mr. Feiwel holds that the British and the Zionist leaders were slow in realizing that Palestine was an inhabited country before the Eretz Israel (Jewish homeland) movement began. Yet he finds that some of the affected settlers prefer violent Arab hostility to the manifestations of European anti-Semitism.

The children of Zionist Palestine, he reports, are unlike the Jewish children of Europe, and they are taking Palestine and its conditions for their own. He believes they will be able, in future years, to understand the Arabs, and possibly to come to terms with them.

This may or may not suffice, for the Jewish problem, "in Poland or Palestine," the author says, belongs to a major problem—"whether European civilization is to survive or to end in chaos."

EMILY BAX, English stenographer in the American Embassy in London from 1902 to 1914—the era of Ambassadors Choate, Reid and Page—has gathered a miscellaneous and interesting lot of reminiscences in "Miss Bax of the Embassy" (Houghton Mifflin Co., Boston). Her story is partly diplomacy, partly society, with recollections of such things as presidential changes, Edward VII's death and George V's coronation, court presentations, the Panama Canal tolls question, Mark Twain's arrival in London the day the famous Ascot gold cup was stolen and the coming of the World War.

After 1914 a secretary to Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Reid and for many years since a citizen of the United States, Miss Bax writes as an Anglo-American who wants nothing as much as friendly co-operation between her two countries.

THAT hope for rehabilitation of delinquents of long standing should not be abandoned is demonstrated by the studies assembled in "Brothers in Crime," by Clifford R. Shaw (University of Chicago Press, Chicago). This record, by physician, psychiatrist, psychologist, sociologist, policeman and the offenders themselves, of five brothers, engaged in major and minor crime from 12 to 20 years, proves the efficacy of intensive and continued therapy when applied with a regard for the social setting of the offender, as well as his own personality.

Although primarily for the social worker, the book should open the eyes of any reader to the cultural conflicts that exist in any city's blighted neighborhoods and the necessity for a community-wide program for prevention of crime.

CC DENIES ANY AIM OF IMPOSING RADIO CENSORSHIP

CHANGES INTENDED AS "SIMPLE GUIDE"

Board Says Programs Must Reflect Culture of This Country and Promote Good Will.

By RAYMOND P. BRANDT
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—The ederal Communications Commision denied today that its recent mendments to international broadasting regulations could be interreted as steps toward Fascist cenorship of the radio.

The specific amendment which as been attacked as an opening o radio censorship and as a forearning of what might happen to he press under the second-class ailing classification follows:

"A licensee of an international roadcast station shall render an nternational broadcast service hich will reflect the culture of his country and which will promote international good will, underanding and co-operation. Any proam intended for, and directed o an audience in the continental nited States does not meet the equirements for this service."

The penalty for violation of this egulation includes revocation of he offending broadcasting station's icense, a valuable franchise, since he FCC this year permitted the inernational stations to sell radio ime for sponsored programs.

Explanation of New Rule.

While no member of the commison would answer officially pubshed reports that this amendment onstituted an infringement of the ight of free speech and was contrary to President Roosevelt's statement this month that Government egulation of radio would be conined "to such controls of operaions as are necessary to prevent omplete confusion on the air," a pokesman explained that the new ule was in conformity with a resoution adopted at the seventh Pan-American Conference at Montevideo in 1933, which said in part regarding international radio broadasts:

"These broadcasting channels are ntended to be used in promoting better understanding among the republics of the American Continent, through the broadcasting of the mu of the several countries and adresses on their cultural and intelectual life."

In 1937 the Inter-American Radio Communications Conference, meetng in Havana, adopted similar road resolutions and the convenions of this meeting were prolaimed by President Roosevelt last ear.

The FCC spokesman declared that he amendments to the internaional broadcasting regulations, alhough drafted by the commission, d been approved by the State Department after several changes had been made at the department's request.

No Complaint in Past.

"The new regulations," the spokesman said, "are a simple guide to he international broadcasters in this country, who for 10 years defrayed from their own pocket the costs of excellent services. There was never a complaint about these programs, and we expect none about future programs.

"Even under the old broad and flexible regulation of 'public interest,' we would have preceded against an international broadcaster in the event of numerous complaints. The same procedure would be followed now. Serious complaints would force us to call the offending broadcaster 'on the carpet.'

"In the past no programs have en submitted to us. Had such a course been followed, the commission probably would have immediately returned the submitted broadcast, because the commission does not want to establish a precedent of approving programs in advance."

A Notice to Broadcaster.

The spokesman conceded that the purpose of the amendment was twofold: First, that international broadcasters were put on notice that e commission might take action a station permitted a program which did not "reflect the culture of this country," and, second, that similar action might be taken if the program did not "promote international good will, understanding and co-operation." In other words, the international broadcasters are expected to "censor" their own programs of American life which might create unfavorable impressions of the United States and to eliminate any addresses which might cause local disturbances in the Latin American countries.

All the phrases used in the old and new regulations are general and open to many interpretations, and the spokesman emphasized that if a "number of complaints" were received by the commission against any program or series of programs the broadcaster would be granted a full hearing to present his side of the case. At present there are 14 international broadcasting stations which may be reduced to 12 if minimum power requirements are raised.

The children of Zionist Palestine, he reports, are unlike the Jewish children of Europe, and they are taking Palestine and its conditions for their own. He believes they will be able in future years, to understand the Arabs, and possibly to come to terms with them.

This may or may not suffice, for the Jewish problem, "in Poland or Palestine," the author says, belongs to a major problem—"whether European civilization is to survive or to end in chaos." C. F. H.

EMILY BAX, English stenographer in the American Embassy in London from 1902 to 1914—the era of Ambassadors Choate, Reid and Page—has gathered a miscellaneous and interesting lot of reminiscences in "Miss Bax of the Embassy" (Houghton Mifflin Co., Boston). Her story is partly diplomacy, partly society, with recollections of such things as presidential changes, Edward VII's death and George V's coronation, court presentations, the Panama Canal tolls question, Mark Twain's arrival in London the day the famous Ascot gold cup was stolen and the coming of the World War.

After 1914 a secretary to Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Reid and for many years since a citizen of the United States, Miss Bax writes as an Anglo-American who wants nothing as much as friendly co-operation between her two countries. I. D.

THAT hope for rehabilitation of delinquents of long standing should not be abandoned is demonstrated by the studies assembled in "Brothers in Crime," by Clifford R. Shaw (University of Chicago Press, Chicago). This record, by physician, psychiatrist, psychologist, sociologist, policeman and the offenders themselves, of five brothers, engaged in major and minor crime from 12 to 20 years, proves the efficacy of intensive and continued therapy when applied with a regard for the social setting of the offender, as well as his own personality.

Although primarily for the social worker, the book should open the eyes of any reader to the cultural conflicts that exist in any city's blighted neighborhoods and the necessity for a community-wide program for prevention of crime. E. K.

CC DENIES ANY AIM OF IMPOSING RADIO CENSORSHIP

Board Says Programs Must Reflect Culture of This Country and Promote Good Will.

By RAYMOND P. BRANDT
Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—The Federal Communications Commission denied today that its recent amendments to international broadcasting regulations could be interpreted as steps toward Fascist censorship of the radio.

The specific amendment which has been attacked as an opening to radio censorship and as a forewarning of what might happen to the press under the second-class mailing classification follows:

"A licensee of an international broadcast station shall render an international broadcast service which will reflect the culture of this country and which will promote international good will, understanding and co-operation. Any program intended for, and directed to an audience in the continental United States does not meet the requirements for this service."

The penalty for violation of this regulation includes revocation of the offending broadcasting station's license, a valuable franchise, since the FCC this year permitted the international stations to sell radio time for sponsored programs.

Explanation of New Rule.

While no member of the commission would answer officially published reports that this amendment constituted an infringement of the right of free speech and was contrary to President Roosevelt's statement this month that Government regulation of radio would be confined "to such controls of operations as are necessary to prevent complete confusion on the air," a spokesman explained that the new rule was in conformity with a resolution adopted at the seventh Pan-American Conference at Montevideo in 1933, which said in part regarding international radio broadcasts:

"These broadcasting channels are intended to be used in promoting better understanding among the republics of the American Continent, through the broadcasting of the music of the several countries and addresses on their cultural and intellectual life."

In 1937 the Inter-American Radio Communications Conference, meeting in Havana, adopted similar broad resolutions and the conventions of this meeting were proclaimed by President Roosevelt last year.

The FCC spokesman declared that the amendments to the international broadcasting regulations, although drafted by the commission, had been approved by the State Department after several changes had been made at the department's request.

No Complaint in Past.

"The new regulations," the spokesman said, "are a simple guide to the international broadcasters in this country, who for 10 years defrayed from their own pocket the costs of excellent services. There was never a complaint about these programs, and we expect none about future programs.

"Even under the old broad and flexible regulation of 'public interest,' we would have preceded against an international broadcaster in the event of numerous complaints. The same procedure would be followed now. Serious complaints would force us to call the offending broadcaster 'on the carpet.'

"In the past no programs have been submitted to us. Had such a course been followed, the commission probably would have immediately returned the submitted broadcast, because the commission does not want to establish a precedent of approving programs in advance."

A Notice to Broadcaster.

The spokesman conceded that the purpose of the amendment was twofold: First, that international broadcasters were put on notice that the commission might take action if a station permitted a program which did not "reflect the culture of this country," and, second, that similar action might be taken if the program did not "promote international good will, understanding and co-operation." In other words, the international broadcasters are expected to "censor" their own programs of American life which might create unfavorable impressions of the United States and to eliminate any addresses which might cause local disturbances in the Latin American countries.

All the phrases used in the old and new regulations are general and open to many interpretations, and the spokesman emphasized that if a "number of complaints" were received by the commission against any program or series of programs the broadcaster would be granted a full hearing to present his side of the case. At present there are 14 international broadcasting stations, which may be reduced to 12 if minimum power requirements are raised.

The Lord Chamberlain's Office, in St. James's Palace, consists of the Lord Chamberlain, the Comptroller, the Assistant Comptroller and other officials and staff with a total personnel of 72.

This office deals with all State ceremonies except the coronation and the funeral of a sovereign. They include the Royal Courts at Buckingham Palace, the Levees at St. James's Palace, State balls, Investitures (when decorations and honors are bestowed by the King), garden parties and royal weddings and funerals. The Lord Chamberlain also shares with the First Commissioner of Works (a political member of the Government) the work of caring for the royal palaces.

Job of Replying to Mail.

When the King attends any public function in London the arrangements are made by Lord Chamberlain's office. It is responsible, also, for State affairs at the Palace of Holyrood House, Edinburgh, and for garden parties at Windsor Castle. Dinner parties and State banquets at Buckingham Palace are superintended by the Lord Steward and the master of the household.

Much of the time of both the Buckingham Palace secretariat and the Lord Chamberlain's office is taken up with the mass of letters received daily. No letter is left unanswered unless it is an anonymous communication or from a person who is obviously insane.

Aside from his trips around the country, there are two occasions on which the King mingles with "my people." These are at the four or five Royal Courts every year and the annual Buckingham Palace garden party, which is a more mixed and democratic affair. For these functions the Lord Chamberlain issues the invitations.

Invitations to Court.

About 700 women attend every court; not nearly as many as apply for the invitation. Preference is given to women making presentations and to debutantes. When the list of invitations is completed it is submitted to the King for his approval but the gimlet eyes of the Lord Chamberlain and his staff always make it safe for His Majesty to give his unhesitating OK.

One of the restrictions is that no woman who has been the guilty party in a divorce case may receive the royal command to attend. Until a few years ago any divorced woman was barred, but now not if she obtained the decree.

However, a woman who has divorced her husband must submit a copy of the decree and a transcript of the official shorthand notes of the case when applying for an invitation. This is to insure that nothing was disclosed at the trial which reflected upon her moral character. These same rules apply to men. Since 1919 there has been no bar to actresses, providing they were otherwise eligible.

The royal garden party, held toward the end of July every year, is the biggest social function with which the Lord Chamberlain's office has to deal. It is usually attended by more than 10,000 persons. The work of preparing the invitation list begins toward the end of March, when an extra clerical staff is engaged for card indexing of the mass of correspondence involved.

Quotas for Officials.

Names are submitted to the Lord Chamberlain by the fighting services and other Government departments, by the foreign diplomatic representatives in London, the chief whips of the political parties in Parliament and the high commissioners of the British dominions. Every office or department is given a quota. Retired navy, army and air force officers of distinction and their wives are usually invited every four or five years.

The Lord Chamberlain's office itself makes up a list of invitations from the various medical, artistic and scientific groups to include prominent physicians, surgeons, authors, actors and actresses, painters, sculptors and members of the various branches of science. It tries to avoid asking the same persons every year and for this reason a card index file is kept of the attendance of every garden party for a good many years back.

All this routine of work and ritual means that the King's trip to Canada and America is a welcome change for him, but he has been known to remark to his secretaries, on returning from one of his few-day tours in England:

"It's all very well to tell me these trips do me good, but I have to work overtime when I get home to catch up with things."

tive administration, was threatened, he dashed in with a guarantee of her integrity. He gave it without even consulting the General Staff as to the feasibility of redeeming such a pledge. It was pointed out to him that without the aid of Russia, it was a nugatory guarantee—that we were walking into a trap.

The General Staff formally intimated to him that such was their view—hence the tentative, timorous approaches to Soviet Russia to help him out. The delay has not been due to any unreadiness on the part of Russia, but to the attempt of Chamberlain to secure the aid of Russia without touching its government.

The transaction has all the characteristics displayed by weak men in an emergency—"letting 'I dare not' wait upon 'I would!'" Just now it looks as if British and French public opinion had successfully forced Chamberlain and Bonnet to rub shoulders with the Bolsheviks in order to extricate themselves from the rash pledges they gave to Poland and Rumania when they had no means to redeem them.

ITALY TO TAKE ALL BUT AIR UNITS BACK FROM SPAIN

The 19,400 Who Will Sail Wednesday Almost Last of 40,000 Sent to Aid Franco.

ROME, May 27 (AP).—The Government announced today that 19,400 Italian combatants would sail from Spain next Wednesday.

A communique said this sailing would remove all Italian troops from Spain except some aviation units engaged in repairing planes which are to be turned over to the Spanish Government. These units are to leave for home early in June.

The homecoming troops, almost all that remain in Spain of 40,000 men who, Italy officially admits, went there to help Generalissimo Francisco Franco in the civil war, will get conquerors' welcomes in Naples and Rome.

Poland Lives In Fear of Munich No. 2

in the direction of land reform, Buell says, "it does not seem that the fundamental agricultural maladjustments in Poland have been remedied, as there were fewer farms in 1931 than in 1921."

While Poland has many internal problems to solve, there are also many sources of strength. A formidable war machine has been developed that includes 1500 first line planes with a full complement of pilots, mechanics, and ground forces. The manufacture of armaments, automobiles and airplanes is concentrated in the Government. The Government also owns and operates virtually all railroads, commercial aviation, radio, telegraph and telephone. While a considerable number of planes are produced in the country, the Government continues to buy American planes. These are for commercial airlines, but they are readily convertible to military purposes.

Polish and German Strength.

The total manpower that Poland could muster in event of war is 3,000,000, while Germany could put into the field, if all reserves were included, about 8,000,000. But Poland could concentrate its entire force on a single border, in the event of war with Germany, while the Germans would have to cover a half dozen fronts.

The importance of the position that Poland occupies in the current crisis could scarcely be exaggerated. If Hitler wants to dominate Central Europe, he cannot afford to have a strong power on the Eastern frontier of the Reich. If present day Poland had existed in 1860-70, as Buell points out, Bismarck would hardly have dared to make war on Austria and France.

Great Britain and France have given the Poles unconditional guarantees of assistance, leaving it to Poland to decide what is an act of aggression. At the same time they have counseled caution on the question of Danzig and the Corridor. Then there is the puzzle of Russian-Polish relations. The ruling clique in Poland is mortally afraid of the Soviet, panicky at thought of a Russian army on Polish soil. But such fears might be overcome if Britain finally reaches a real accord with the Soviet. These are some of the imponderables as a jittery world waits for what next day's headlines may bring.

FINANCIAL DETAILS OF SALE OF BRIDGE AT CHAIN OF ROCKS

Chicago Promoter Tells How Madison, Ill., Will Take Control of Highway Toll Span.

Acquisition of the Chain of Rocks Bridge, a profitable highway toll structure, by the village of Madison, Ill., under a $2,300,000 revenue bond issue will be consummated June 5, barring unforseen difficulties, R. M. Sherritt of Chicago, promoter of the deal, said to a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday.

He disclosed that profits of the Sarjem Corporation, of which he is president, would be derived from sale of the revenue bonds at a price above par, and, to a much smaller extent, from a rise in value of a small block of common stock of the present owner, the Kingshighway Bridge Co.

Ordinances to carry out the deal were passed unanimously by the village Board of Trustees Tuesday. The board did not call for bids on the bonds. The Sarjem Corporation owns 58 to 59 per cent of the common or controlling stock, but will make a profit on only 6 or 7 per cent, Sherritt declared. It acquired the other 52 per cent about a month ago, he said, from H. M. Byllesby & Co. of Chicago, one of the original promoters of the bridge, which was opened in 1929.

Sherritt said the only contingency which might interfere with completion of the deal was an adverse opinion from bond counsel in New York, which was not expected.

Price for Remaining Stock.

The price to be offered for the remaining common stock outstanding will be about $27 to $29 a share, the exact amount depending on the final outcome as to expenses, Sherritt said. The reporter had been told several months ago by J. J. Shinners of Byllesby & Co., a director of the Kingshighway Bridge Co., that the Sarjem Corporation had contracted with Byllesby & Co., which then owned about 48 per cent of the common stock, to pay at least $30 a share for the common. Sherritt, declared, however, that this was not a binding price.

Par value of the common is $5 a share. This par value, Sherritt asserted, was fixed, in a 1932 reorganization following a foreclosure, for "tax purposes," avoiding taxes arising from a higher value.

"Par doesn't mean anything in this case," he said, in response to a question as to why the stock was now worth so much more than par. "The bridge originally cost about $2,400,000, including all financing and miscellaneous charges. It had to establish its business. That business is now established to a point at which the company would have been able, for the first time, to pay a dividend on the common stock, of $2.50 a share. Any stock that can earn a dividend of that size is worth nearly $30 a share. The volume of traffic has been growing."

Madison Revenue Bonds.

Sherritt pointed out that the Madison revenue bonds, which will be an obligation only of the bridge income, not of the village credit, would be tax exempt, but that if Congress should eliminate such tax exemption, bonds of this type would not have as good a market hereafter.

The revenue bonds will be sold by Madison at par. Sherritt said that his concern and four bond houses, whose identity he would not disclose, would offer the bonds to the public, probably at a price 2 or 2½ points above par, or a premium of $46,000 to $57,500. He declared the chief profit of the Sarjem Corporation in the deal would be derived from this spread.

From the par proceeds of the revenue bonds, $20,000 will be set aside for painting the bridge and $9000 for a new asphalt roadway surface, Sherritt said, while the remaining $2,271,000 will be turned over to the village for payment to the present bridge company.

Right to Call In Bonds.

The bridge company will exercise its right to call in the $1,284,500 in income bonds outstanding, held largely by investors, at a 5 per cent premium. It also will deposit six months' interest on these old bonds, at 6½ per cent. For the 4456 shares of $5 preferred stock outstanding, a large part of which is held by the Byllesby concern, par will be paid. Thus to retire the bonds and preferred stock will cost $1,412,751.

There are 26,280 shares of common stock outstanding. If the price to be paid for this should prove to be, say, $29 a share, the total cost would be $762,120. Added to the cost of the bonds and preferred stock, this would make the cost of retiring present securities $2,174,871—or $96,129 less than the $2,271,000 purchase price.

This difference, Sherritt explained, would be required for Federal income taxes, fees for lawyers, auditors, engineers and trustees and other expenses in issuance of the new bonds and handling of the deal. Whether all these expenses amount to more or less than $96,129 will be the deciding point as to whether the promoters will derive a slight additional profit or stand a small share of the expense, he said.

On the principal block of common stock, obtained from the Byllesby concern, the Sarjem Corporation will make no profit, Sherritt declared. He said there would be a small profit, amounting to considerably less than the profit from sale of the revenue bonds, on the rest of the common stock now held by his corporation. The amount he would not state. He began acquiring these shares about a year ago, when it was possible to get them in the over-the-counter market at about $15 or $16 a share because the business outlook for the bridge was less certain and some holders were glad to liquidate, he said. The over-the-counter price yesterday was $25 bid and about $27 asked, while the bid for the old bonds was $101 and none offered.

Escrow Arrangement.

Minority stockholders will not be able to upset the deal, if they do not accept the price to be offered, as their money will be placed in escrow for them, Sherritt said. He added that his company owned none of the small block of preferred stock, but that this was held by 200 or 300 investors, besides the Byllesby company.

Last year the Kingshighway Bridge Co. caught up with arrears of interest on its income bonds. For the last two years it has paid a 7 per cent dividend on its preferred stock, but no dividend has ever been declared on the common stock.

For the fiscal year ending last March 31, tolls and payments for pipe and wire line privileges aggregated about $220,000, while operating expenses were about $75,000, not counting depreciation, taxes and interest and sinking fund payments, Sherritt said. He said comparable operating expenses under Madison's ownership were estimated at $54,000, including $4000 for reserve for painting and extraordinary repairs.

At that rate, and with earnings on the 1938 level, Madison would have $166,000 a year available for interest at 4 per cent on its revenue bonds and a sinking fund for retirement of these bonds. The interest on the full bond issue would cost $92,000 a year. Traffic estimates have indicated, Sherritt said, that it might be possible to retire the revenue bonds in 16 to 20 years. The bonds, which would mature in 1964, could be called earlier by payment of a premium on a sliding scale ranging down from 5 per cent.

The difference between operating expense under the company and under the village, nearly $22,000, would arise from the saving on Illinois property taxes, capital stock taxes and other taxes from which Madison will be exempt. Madison will continue to be liable for property taxes of about $6500 a year on the Missouri end of the bridge.

Net quick assets of the bridge company and a wholly owned subsidiary, largely cash, will aggregate only $25,000 to $30,000 and will go into the fund for payment of liquidation expenses, said Sherritt, adding that the depreciation fund was only a book entry.

Although Madison is 4.8 miles from the bridge and will derive no traffic from the crossing, it will benefit in several ways. These will include local expenditures for labor and maintenance, the opportunity for Madison business men to handle insurance on the bridge, the premium for which is said to be $3000 a year, and the acquisition of 174 acres of land adjoining the eastern approach. Sherritt made it known that Madison proposed to use the land for gardens for its unemployed. The village also intends to displace the nine toll collectors and several maintenance employes.

Stark Mentioned as Running Mate As Third Term Talk Rises Again

Governor Rated in Some Washington Quarters as Vice-Presidential Possibility If Roosevelt Is Renominated.

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

WASHINGTON, May 27 (AP).—A new surge of speculation over President Roosevelt's 1940 campaign role enlivened backstage political discussions in Washington this week.

The renewed third-term talk started through interpretations widely placed on the President's "no retreat" speech to the retailers' forum early in the week. Some influential Democrats shared the view that it indicated a readiness on the President's part to be "drafted" in 1940 in order to carry on this program.

The third-term talk was further and importantly stimulated by Postmaster General Farley's return from a survey of Democratic party prospects for 1940. The trip took him from coast to coast and, particularly, through most of the interior states where Democratic 1938 election reverses were heaviest.

Reports Roosevelt Sentiment.

Publicly, he had cheery predictions to offer of Democratic 1940 successes in the 13 states he toured —and nothing to say about 1940 candidates. Privately, the Democratic national chairman unquestionably pictured the consensus of State leaders he met as being that Roosevelt could have a third nomination if he wanted it; and that lacking Roosevelt's active support, the 1940 honor would be of little value to any other Democrat.

Political observers noted with special interest that Gov. Lloyd C. Stark of Missouri was among the State party chieftains who talked with Farley. There has been a notable increase in attention being given Stark as a possible important contender for a place on the 1940 Democratic ticket since his clash with Boss Tom Pendergast of Kansas City, who was sentenced to jail this week on a plea of guilty of violation of Federal income tax laws.

Stark men from Missouri say President Roosevelt has indicated a favorable attitude toward the Missouri Governor for a place on the national ticket next year. They are busy selling Stark in party councils as a man on whom pro and anti New Deal Democrats could compromise.

Stark as Running Mate.

There is a disposition in some quarters to rate Gov. Stark as a vice-presidential possibility if Roosevelt should seek and obtain a third nomination. An uncertain factor is the often discussed but never admitted hope of Senator Bennett Clark of Missouri for consideration in next year's party presidential ticket making. The two Missourians are friends of long standing, however, and friends of both are quoted as seeing no prospect of a breach between them over which is to be the State's favored son in 1940.

Whatever Roosevelt's intentions are, the upsurge of third-term talk armed him with added leadership leverage in Congress as the session draws toward a close. Observers saw some reflection of that in indications of a party harmony program on the tax revision issue.

DRAFT-ROOSEVELT MOVEMENT IN WEST

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
201-205 Kellogg Bldg.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—Various movements to draft President Roosevelt for a third term are taking shape throughout the country, with the more or less open blessing of New Dealers here, according to reports reaching Washington.

Plans are being discussed on the Pacific Coast for a draft-Roosevelt convention of labor and other elements from 11 Western states. This will be held, if present plans materialize, in August at Salt Lake City, Utah.

Leader of the effort to bring together a convention of delegates from organizations supporting a third-term movement is Howard Costigan, head of the Commonwealth Federation of the State of Washington. The federation includes not only the CIO and the A. F. of L., but important farm groups that are united for political action. It is an important factor within the Democratic party.

Encouragement in Washington.

Costigan discussed such a draft-Roosevelt convention with New Dealers when he was in Washington in the late winter and received considerable encouragement to go ahead. A friend of Mrs. Anna Roosevelt Boettiger, whose husband, John Boettiger, is editor of the Seattle Post-Intelligencer, Costigan was entertained during his Washington stay at the White House.

It is interesting, in the light of Costigan's efforts to organize a convention of those who want Roosevelt to run again, to recall that recently Boettiger engaged in a public controvery with Elliott Roosevelt, the President's son, rebuking Elliott Roosevelt for championing Vice-President Garner as the Democratic nominee and intimating the President might have to run for another term. Costigan edits a weekly paper at Seattle, the New Dealer, and speaks twice a week on politics over a powerful radio station.

Harry Bridges, head of West Coast maritime unions, and other labor leaders have been approached about the proposed convention but definite plans have not yet been formulated. Thus far Costigan is the chief promoter of the idea.

In all probability similar moves will come into the open as 1940 draws nearer. In part these will grow out of a genuine mass desire to see Roosevelt in the White House for another four years. But in part, of course, they will be inspired by politicians, not only here but throughout the country, who are more and more convinced that the President is the only candidate who can win for the Democrats next year.

Committee Gets Suggestions.

Already numerous third-term suggestions are coming into the headquarters of the Democratic National Committee here. Many writers want to organize Roosevelt-for-a-third-term clubs. Others want the committee itself to take some action. Committee officers reply, of course, that no action either for or against a third term movement can be taken by the committee itself.

Political observers here agree that if the President finally decides to run for a third term, he will not come out and seek the nomination. Instead he will be drafted and will appear to run against his own wishes and desires, as a sacrifice for the country. Roosevelt-for-a-third-term movements such as are being organized on the West Coast would serve this strategy.

The President's trip to the West Coast this summer will doubtless throw light on the third-term movement. He is likely to encounter the third-term demand at various points. That had begun already in 1938 when he crossed the country.

$486,971 OF STATE INCOME TAXES IN COUNTY COLLECTED

Sum Is 51.11 Per Cent of $952,799 Due—Bill for Quarterly Payment Awaits Stark's Action.

State income taxes for 1938 collected in St. Louis County by Friday totaled $486,971, it was announced by Collector William W. Benson yesterday. This amount represents 51.11 per cent of the $952,799 charged for the year and is $138,680 less than the amount collected this time last year.

Benson attributed the decline to the fact last year's total was $1,174,877 and that a bill, which recently passed both houses of the Legislature and is awaiting signature of Gov. Stark, provides income taxes may be paid in quarterly installments.

LETTER SUGGESTS WAYS TO GET EXTRA RELIEF FUNDS

Head of Social Welfare Group Outlines Four Methods of Increasing Amounts for General Aid.

Ways of providing additional funds for general relief, aid to dependent children and administration were outlined by C. W. Pfeiffer, president of the Missouri Association for Social Welfare, in a letter to members and friends of the association last night.

The method suggested was to transfer a fraction of the House old age assistance allotment to general relief, aid to dependent children and administration. A second way was to make a lump sum appropriation to the State Social Security Commission, permitting it to allot funds to various activities in public assistance and child welfare.

A third method was to appropriate funds for the University of Missouri from the State school fund instead of from general revenue, thus releasing nearly $4,000,000 for public assistance. "It is undoubtedly true that the school fund has been very greatly increased in recent years and also that a hungry child should be fed as well as educated," Pfeiffer said. A fourth method, he continued, was to appropriate funds needed, leaving it to the Governor to withhold part of the appropriations if State revenue proves insufficient or to call a special session of the Legislature when needed.

20,000 U. S. SOLDIERS REPEL MIMIC ATTACK ON HAWAII

Army Officers Indicate Four Enemy Divisions Would Have Hard Time Invading Honolulu.

HONOLULU, May 27 (AP).—Twenty thousand American soldiers ended two weeks of mimic warfare today, victorious in their fight against an imaginary invader.

Unofficially, army officers said four enemy divisions apparently were unable to capture heavily fortified Oahu Island (on which Honolulu stands) under perfect landing conditions and in the absence of the United States fleet.

The enemy landed on the north and southwest shores but was driven back into the sea.

An automobile plowed into the rear of a column of marching infantry in morning darkness today, killing one soldier, and injuring 22 others, two seriously.

Private J. F. Carlson of Jamestown, N. Y., was killed.

Twelve of those injured were able to return to duty. The others were taken to hospitals.

SEC Nomination Confirmed.

WASHINGTON, May 27 (AP).—The Senate confirmed today the nomination of Leon Henderson of New Jersey as a member of the Securities and Exchange Commission for a term expiring June 5, 1944. Henderson recently was confirmed for the unexpired term of William O. Douglas, now Associate Justice of the Supreme Court.

Stock Market Has Best Week Since Middle of April, Average Price Rising Sharply on Increased Trade

Bonds and Commodities Also Improve—Share Average Up 2.04 Points for Week—Million-Share Days.

NEW YORK, May 27 (AP).—The stock market today finished its best week since the middle of April.

Unlike many recent Saturdays, volume was on the expanding side. While late realizing cut gains running to a point or so at the close, steels, rails and specialties were well in front.

The Associated Press average of 60 issues retained a net advance of .3 of a point at 47.5. For the week this composite was up 2.2 points. The Dow-Jones average of 65 stocks at 45.91 was .32 of a point higher for the day and 2.04 points up for the week. The day's turnover amounted to 382,360, compared with 193,280 last Saturday. The week's volume was 3,870,950 shares, against 2,500,810 the preceding week.

Bonds and commodities also advanced in week.

The day's news, on the whole, was on the side of rising prices. Principle attention, however, centered on Treasury Secretary Morgenthau's testimony before the House Ways and Means Committee in which he criticized the undistributed profits tax and urged congressional study of other levies which, he suggested, might be amended in the interest of promoting "lasting business recovery." At the same time, the official warned that tax changes must not reduce Federal revenue.

Steels Prominent in Trade.

Steels revived as forecasts of next week's mill operations indicated a brisk upswing with virtually all centers participating. Buyers apparently stepped into this group on the thought that expanding production would tend to offset the price slashing which took place this month. Rails were aided by hopes of relief legislation to follow the passage by the Senate Thursday of the transportation co-ordination bill.

Motors pushed up for a while, but dipped at the last as the strike at the Detroit plants of Briggs Manufacturing continued. Motor makers which depend on this concern for accessories have been hit by the labor difficulty. To date some 70,000 workers have been made idle.

Stocks ending behind plus signs in the brief session included United States Steel, Bethlehem, Montgomery Ward, Goodyear, Santa Fe, Great Northern, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Allied Chemical, Westinghouse, American Telephone and Douglas Aircraft.

Attendance in boardrooms was sparse, many traders leaving for a long holiday in view of the closing of the exchange next Tuesday for Memorial day. Most foreign markets were in recess today and will remain shut Monday for whitsuntide.

Steel Output Gains.

Steel makers jumped operations to 48.5 per cent of capacity from 45.4 the previous week as a freer fuel supply was assured by the recent resumption of soft coal mining. It was the highest steel rate in a month.

The increased coal movement lifted railroad loadings for the week ended May 20, included in the latest week's statistics, to the highest point since December. Trade sources described retail business as "fair."

The news from Detroit, however, struck an off note. Automobile output, up the previous week contrary to seasonal expectations, contracted abruptly when a strike in the Briggs Manufacturing Co. plants shut off a leading supply source for manufacturers. It was estimated cars and trucks coming off the assembly lines fell to 67,740, lowest this year, from 80,145 the preceding week.

The rise and fall of automobile activity, together with allowances for seasonal adjustments, caused erratic fluctuations in the motor section of the business indices. The boost in steel and rail loadings, nevertheless, was sufficient to make up for the loss. The Associated Press weekly index of industrial activity, rising for the second consecutive week, advanced to 83.3 from 82.9 the week before.

Inflation Specter Again.

Some Wall street observers thought they detected a slight returning flush of "inflation sentiment" in the market place as result of President Roosevelt's speech before the American Retail Federation. The address was interpreted widely as indicating the administration intended to press ahead along the road of heavy Federal spending for public improvements and loans to public and private enterprise.

Wall street and business spokesmen, including Chairman Winthrop W. Aldrich of the Chase National Bank and Chairman Tom M. Girdler of Republic Steel Corporation, answered the "spending" hint with statements unbridled Federal spending threatened fiscal troubles and "dictatorship."

At the same time the President expressed the view the "nation is in an excellent position to move forward into a period of greater production and greater employment."

Whether this was meant to be prophecy or not, it attracted attention in business quarters because many shared the opinion, partly by reason of indications inventories in some lines have fallen to unusually low levels during recent months of slack buying.

Trading Volume Picks Up.

Brokers, on a meager business diet most of the spring, had the best run of commissions in six weeks when the stock market got out of a rut at mid-week and transactions increased to more than a million shares for a couple of sessions. The advance came after traders spent two days weighing the significance of the increase in steel production and President Roosevelt's speech, together with the bullish signals in London.

A broad upswing in commodities was headed by a further advance in grains. Cotton, silk, hides and rubber stepped into line. Business analysts watched the trend of commodities closely in the belief a rise in basic farm commodities and raw material should go far toward stimulating business improvement in the second half of the year.

Industrial Index.

The Associated Press industrial index, with components based on latest figures, calculated on 1929-30 levels as 100, compared as follows:

	Latest Week.	Prev. Week.	Year Ago.
Composite index	83.3	82.9	66.8
Automobile production	55.2	63.9	37.1
Steel mill act.	65.1	60.9	38.9
Cotton mfg.	108.8	111.9	80.0
Electric power use (L)	112.3	113.2	103.8
Residential bldg.	90.8	89.6	54.8
Total carloadings	63.6	57.6	56.4

(L) means new 1939 low.

The advance in stocks here and in London was accompanied by a further thawing of the March and April war fear. London showed the way for Wall Street bulls, the buying in the British center being ascribed partly to confidence growing out of an expected agreement for adherence of Russia to the anti-Hitler line-up. Banker Aldrich, in a Wall Street speech, said his advices from abroad reflected ebbing war fears.

INDEX OF WHOLESALE COMMODITY PRICES UP

"Grains and Cotton" Division Climbs to a New 1939 High During Week.

NEW YORK, May 27 (AP). — Le- by grains and cotton, commodities for immediate delivery as a group moved into higher ground this week.

The Associated Press index of 35 spot wholesale commodity prices, with 1926 as 100, advanced to 67.26 from 66.64 in the preceding week and 64.54 a year ago.

The "grains and cotton" division of the index climbed to a new 1939 high. While rains over Western crop areas and speculative profit-taking pared extreme daily advances in the latter part of the period, net gains were rung up by wheat, corn, oats and rye. A shortage of certain fibres demanded by the trade pushed cotton ahead.

Silk continued to advance in the textile division, but wool shaded downward.

Lambs were higher in Chicago livestock markets. Hogs, however, due to heavy supplies, dropped to the lowest levels in five years.

Among market basket items, cocoa, flour, lard and butter were dearer, but eggs and coffee sold at lower prices.

The Associated Press commodity price index, with its components, compared as follows:

LOANS OF SECONDARY RATINGS MAKE GAINS

Tapering of Demand for Some Recent Favorites in Top Division.

NEW YORK, May 27 (AP).—In thi week's bond market a moderate lift wa given to many loans of secondary rating.

For a number of weeks bonds of thi class had been relatively neglected by buyers, but as their prices sagged there wa evidence of a keen demand for the to grade low yield varieties of which U. S Governments are the established leaders.

Starting at mid-week the former trend were partially reversed and as speculativ groups pushed ahead there was a tapering of demand for some recent favorites in th top flight division. U. S. Governments settled back fractionally from their lately recorded all-time peaks.

Bond dealers thought the moderate revival of interest in the second grade departments was in some degree inspired by inflationary ideas following further persistent but unconfirmed reports that administration circles were pondering a new spend-lend drive to aid industry.

Also an important factor in the willingness of traders to take on the more speculative issues was a general belief in trading circles that the slow decline of th last few months had given that section o the market an improved foundation for a rally.

Rails accounted for a number of goo advances. Medium priced utilities and industrials ran a good second in the upturn.

The week brought little in the way o new corporate security offerings, but ther were indications several sizable issu were being readied for the market, wi the probability of early offering in th event the improved trends of listed issue were maintained.

The bond market picked up speed under the impetus of fairly broad inquiry fo secondary rail loans today.

Closing quotations were around the day' best and ranged from minor fractions to point or more for a large number of favorites.

Only the U. S. Government section dissented from the upward curve. This group which turned soft Friday after supplyin market leadership for more than tw weeks, was all but neglected and price drifted 1-32 to 5-32 of a point lower under the lightest sort of offerings.

Fuel for the rail bonds was supplied i two ways—from the halls of Congres where carrier legislation is being considered and from increased raffic this wee as soft coal began moving from mine that were shut down so long over the unio deadlock.

Prominent on the upswing were Wester Maryland 5½s at 86, Nickel Plate 4½ at 49¼, Southern Railway 4s at 52½, Illinois Central 4¾s at 46⅝, Delaware Hudson refunding 4s at 59½, and New York Central 5s at 54½.

Also higher were American & Foreig Power 5s, International Hydro Electr 6s and Continental Oil 2¾s.

COMMODITY MARKETS

NEW YORK, May 27.—Price trends were cloudy in commodity futures markets today.

Chicago wheat dropped ½ to ⅞ of a cent a bushel when trade reports indicated the drouth appeared to be broken in most sections of the spring wheat belt. Corn lost ⅝ to 1⅛ cents.

Distant cotton deliveries at New York gained 35 to 65 cents a bale, buoyed largely by hopes of an export subsidy plan, a pickup in textile sales and improved security markets. July, however, lost 10 cents.

Hides and Santos coffee shifted a little lower at New York. Wool tops and cottonseed oil moved indecisively.

Beginning of the usual summer Saturday holidays closed metals, cocoa, sugar, rubber and silk.

Livestock at Chicago held nominally steady.

BAR GOLD, SILVER AND MONEY

Local bank clearings were $13,200,000 for May 27. Debits were $58,000,000 for May 26.

COTTON PRICE ADVANCES 70C TO $2.15 A BALE IN WEEK

NEW YORK, May 27 (AP).—New-crop cotton deliveries took the lead in today's market. July dropped 2 points, but later months gained 7 to 13.

Cotton gained from 70 cents to $2.15 a bale on the week at the close of today's session. Brokers saw many factors influencing the price trend, but chiefly mentioned were a bullish interpretation of the Government 1939-40 program for the staple, continued tightness of the Southern spot basis and a pickup in sales of cotton goods. Strength in securities markets stimulated buying, they added.

Demand today stemmed mainly from domestic mill buying and foreign covering. Offerings were supplied by Southern spot houses and Wall street sources. Bombay sold near months and bought distant.

July failed to keep pace, analysts said, because the price for that delivery appeared sufficiently above the Government loan stock to attract cotton out of the loan.

Exports today, 4134 bales; season so far, 3,276,639. Port receipts 3154; port stocks, 2,010,903.

HOPE FOR WHEAT REVIVED BY RAIN IN GROWING BELT

Drouth in Spring Grain Country Reported Virtually Broken — Rise of 10c in Week.

CHICAGO, May 27 (AP).—Rains that have revived hopes for much wheat in the Southwest and virtually broken the drouth in the spring wheat belt caused selling which lowered prices more than a cent a bushel in the Chicago market today.

Although rains have been experienced most of the week in many sections of the belt, particularly in the Northwest, this was the first session in which the market showed any unusual weakness. Establishment of the season's best prices yesterday at levels 10 cents higher than a month ago and 7 to 10 cents better than a year ago attracted profit-taking and the market had less support from milling and other commercial interests than was the case yesterday.

After advancing to within small fractions of yesterday's best levels with net gains of as much as ¾ cent, prices took a definitely lower course as selling expanded. The day's lows of 77⅝ for July and September contracts were about 1¼ cents below the highs. Despite slight rallies from these levels, wheat closed ½@⅞c lower than yesterday, with July and September at 78@¼c.

Other grains sagged with wheat, with July soybeans slumping the 4-cent limit permitted in one session to 91½c. Corn closed ⅝@1⅛c lower, July 51@50¾c; Sept. 52⅜@¼c; oats ⅝@¾c lower; rye 1@¼c down; lard unchanged to 7c lower.

With quotations now ranging 7 to 10 cents higher than a year ago, the market is reflecting, traders said, prospects of a sharp cut in wheat production this season due primarily to reduced acreage. While recent rains have checked drouth talk in the Northwest and have apparently halted deterioration over much of the Southwest, the winter wheat crop still is in a debatable condition. Private estimates of probable winter wheat production vary widely but most dealers expect the forthcoming crop figures to be released early in June to show further reduction. They believe damage occurred during the past month.

Prices slipped about ½ cent at the opening but then steadied near yesterday's closing level, with July and September selling around 78½. Brokers heard reports that a well known market operator was active in the current trade but this could not be confirmed. Most of the buying was credited to milling interests and traders who acted on the circumstance that the wheat loan basis is higher than current futures quotations. There were numerous trade statements that factors other than the crop situation have played a part in the recent price advance and in this connection the Government's spending program was mentioned. Acting to hold buying in check, however, was profit-taking based on yesterday's sharp advance.

Weakness in corn, which declined fractionally, was attributed to the rains which experts believe were very beneficial to the new crop. Oats and rye also were lower but lard was steady.

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, May 27.—In the cash grain section of the market today wheat was steady and corn ¾c lower.

CORPORATION SHARE EARNINGS IN DOLLARS; COMPARISONS

Corporation earnings in dollars and cents per common share in most instances, with corresponding periods in the preceding year, reported by the Associated Press and other sources, will be found in the following table:

PHILADELPHIA, May 27 (AP).—The Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron Corporation, large anthracite producing concern, today reported a net loss of $7,059,678 for the year ended March 31, 1939.

The corporation's principal subsidiary, the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron Co., has been seeking financial reorganization under Section 77-B of the Federal Bankruptcy Act since Feb. 26, 1937.

For the 12-month period, the corporation reported net sales and other operating income as $27,351,958.

EXPORT COPPER CROSSES 10-CENT LEVEL ON WAY UP

NEW YORK, May 27 (AP).—Export copper crossed the 10-cent mark going upward last week.

Buying was good, according to reports from abroad, as industrial users showed greater interest in a market recently supported largely by armament demand. The week end price was 10.14 cents a pound, a gain of close to 1-5 of a cent for the week.

Domestic non-ferrous metal markets—including copper—were listless so far as metal sold was concerned.

But in the copper division price sentiment strengthened in wake of the upturn abroad. Copper in the secondary or outside market, available at 9.95 cents early, later firmed to 10 cents. Smelters and refiners held fast to the 10-cent base although Phelps Dodge still listed at 10½ cents.

Lead producers turned in another cheerful weekly report. Sales were in excess of output and prices held firm at 4.75 cents a pound.

Activity in zinc was restricted although quotations were unchanged at 4.50 cents East St. Louis.

Increased supplies of coal lifted the steel operating rate. Prices are about where they were a week ago as there has been no new test of the rate structure. New buying—after the splurge of inquiry at cut prices—was limited.

For the week, gains were recorded for each of the 12 districts, ranging from 1 per cent in the New York, Atlanta and Dallas districts, to 12 per cent for the Cleveland district.

L. D. VOGEL ESTATE DISTRIBUTION ORDERED

Daughter-in-Law and Nine Charitable Agencies to Share $100,000.

Circuit Judge Ernest F. Oakley yesterday authorized immediate distribution of the bulk of the trust estate left by Louis D. Vogel, an officer of the Charter Oak Stove & Range Co., who died in 1929.

The amount to be distributed is estimated at $100,000, equally to Vogel's daughter-in-law, Mrs. Byrd L. Vogel, and the following organizations: American National Red Cross, St. Louis Chapter; Community Fund of St. Louis, Little Sisters of the Poor, St. Louis Altenheim, St. Louis Provident Association, St. Louis Society for the Blind, St. Vincent DePaul Society, Jewish Federation and the Salvation Army Rescue Home.

They were beneficiaries named in Vogel's will, which provided that the trust was to continue during the life of the daughter-in-law and Vogel's son, Clifford A. Vogel, who died last December. However, she and the other beneficiaries agreed to the sale and disbursement of the principal assets, to which plan the St. Louis Union Trust Co., as trustee, assented, the Court was informed. William H. Bleyer appeared as attorney for the heirs at the hearing.

In addition to receiving one-tenth of the proceeds to be disbursed, Mrs. Vogel, also, under the terms of the will, continues to receive $100 a month from a fund to be reserved in trust, which will consist of income from 157 shares of American Telephone & Telegraph Co. stock. Eventually, the charitable organizations are to receive shares in a distribution of this stock, the decree provides.

"QUEEN OF MALIBU" LOSES FIGHT FOR VAST ESTATE

Widow, 74, Tried to Keep 26,000 Acres Husband Bought, But Finally Went Bankrupt.

LOS ANGELES, May 27 (AP).—Mrs. Mary K. Rindge, 74 years old, has lost her long fight to remain 'Queen of the Malibu." She defended with fire arms law suits and a fortune the 26,000-acre estate her husband bought in 1890, only to be plunged into bankruptcy.

"If we have any further trouble from you, you may expect to be sent to the county jail or fined for contempt of court," Superior Judge Ruben Schmidt said after Sheriff's deputies reported three years were required to serve the elusive Mrs. Rindge with a bench warrant requiring her to appear in court to explain her refusal to pay a $4680 judgment.

Rindge died in 1905, but his widow tried to hold the property he bought. It extended 30 miles along the coast from the Los Angeles-Ventura County line southward and eastward.

Rindge saw in it the site for a watering place which would make the French Riviera seem poor by comparison.

Today, wide highways cross the once forbidden empire. Parts of it have been subdivided. Only the estate's private railroad—two now rusty streaks interrupted by broken and decayed trestles—serve to remind one of the empire that was.

U. S. UNEMPLOYED 10,177,000

Industrial Board Reports Decline of 2 Pct. in April.

NEW YORK, May 27 (AP).—Unemployment in the United States declined 2 per cent in April to around 10,177,000 as the present month opened, the National Industrial Conference Board reported today.

The board, a research organization supported by contributions from private business corporations, said the number of jobless in April decreased by 220,000. The decline, it was added, was "due largely to considerable increase in the number of agricultural workers, which is usual at this time of year."

NO 'COCKTAILS' FOR W.C.T.U.

Iowa Chapter Bars Term, Even for Fruit Juices.

SHENANDOAH, Ia., May 27 (AP).—The Shenandoah W. C. T. U. chapter has voted to bar the word "cocktail" even when applied to fruit or vegetable juices. Mrs. E. R. Steally, president, warned members to "look up the definition of 'cocktail.'"

The definition (Webster): "A short drink, iced, of spiritous liquor well mixed with flavoring ingredients, commonly including bitters."

GIFTS FOR RESEARCH AT JEWISH HOSPITAL

They Are in Memory of Mrs. Morton J. May and Louis M. Monheimer.

Gifts for research at the Jewish Hospital laboratory in memory of Mrs. Morton J. May and Louis M. Monheimer were announced last night. Mrs. May was the wife of the president of the May Department Stores Co., which operates Famous-Barr, and Monheimer was vice-president for more than 20 years of the May company.

Some time ago, the hospital announced, May created the David May Fund for the study of tumors and diseases of the liver, gall bladder and pancreas. Following the death of his wife, who had been keenly interested in the research work, he and friends contributed a substantial sum for research as a memorial to her. The fund became known as the David May-Florence G. May Fund. She died last November 26.

The Louis Monheimer research fund was established by his widow and several friends following his death Feb. 23. He had been actively interested, too, in the work of the laboratory.

Gifts to aid specific projects were made by Mrs. Lillian Shuster, Hugo Uhrbauer and the family of Louis Brodsky. Louis Beaumont of Nice, France, created a fund for the study of blood diseases and Mrs. Edward Pryor of St. Louis created a fund for the study of fundamental biological aspects in allergy and associated conditions.

The amount of the gifts was not disclosed.

It was also announced that the laboratory is aiding four Jewish refugees, two physicians and two laboratory workers. Three are from Germany and one from Italy. One of the four has received a fellowship from Mark Steinberg, broker.

There are now eight research fellows on the laboratory staff, young physicians who showed promise as members of the resident staff of the hospital. Each receives a small monthly stipend and spends as much time as possible working on research problems in the laboratory.

CHICAGO TO DO ITS DRINKING ON CENTRAL STANDARD TIME

Judge Extends Tavern Closing an Hour by Ruling Against Daylight Saving.

CHICAGO, May 27 (AP).—Judge Francis Borrelli ruled today the Chicagoans may drink on Central Standard Time and thus remain in bars an hour later.

The question arose when police barred drinking after midnight and then wondered when the ordinance requiring taverns to close at 1 a. m. on week nights meant Central Standard or Central Daylight Time.

Judge Borrelli said the only precedent he could find was a Texas case in which it was ruled that "true" or "sun" time should govern.

Judge Borrelli said he didn't want to put the police to the cost of a sun dial, and that as a sort of compromise he would hold that taverns might operate on Central Standard.

WINDOW PAINS AND HOW TO CURE 'EM
CURTIS WOODWORK SILENTITE Pre-Fit THE "INSULATED" WINDOW
What's the trouble, Doctor—sticking—rattling—loss of weight—fracture of the spinal cord—can't the patient be lifted or lowered? These are all common window ailments.
Who hasn't put up with them for years? You call in a window doctor, pay his fee for makeshift repairs, and wonder how soon he'll be needed again.
But Curtis discovered the underlying causes of window pains and corrected them. Curtis Silentite Windows have the warmth and beauty of wood, but they cannot stick, bind or rattle.
Curtis also found that an operation was necessary and removed the weights and cords entirely. And then they insulated the Silentite Window to make it draftproof and dustproof. Fuel savings run as high as 25% in many cases.
The Curtis prescription for window pains has been tested in cottage and castle and brings sure relief. Let us tell you about it.

4-STORY BUILDING, 711 ST. CHARLES STREET, BOUGHT

Ylime Real Estate Co. Buys Fireproof Structure With Granite Facade Formerly Occupied by Brokerage Concern.

By Berry Moore

The modern four-story building, with red granite facade, together with the 99-year lease of its site, 41 feet, 6 inches by 70 feet, at 711-13 St. Charles street, was purchased yesterday by the Ylime Real Estate Co., of which W. Havard Perkins is president. It was owned by the Burnett Real Estate and Investment Co., a holding company of Claude E. Vrooman, which acquired the building along with the leasehold in 1933, from the liquidating company for Lorenzo E. Anderson & Co., a large stock brokerage concern, thrown into receivership in January 1930.

It is understood the consideration in the present transaction was $125,000. The fee to the site, owned by the Girard B. Allen estate, was not included in the transfer.

Perkins & Co., public accountants, will occupy the second and third floors of the building. The first floor, which is full two stories in height, is occupied by Friedman, Brokaw & Samish, New York Stock Exchange house, under a 10-year lease, executed in 1935. The building was remodeled and air-conditioned by the Vrooman at a large outlay.

Arthur H. Fuldner of the Oreon E. & R. G. Scott Real Estate Co., acted for both interests in the negotiations.

Erected in 1924.

Fireproof in construction, the building was erected in 1924 as quarters for Lorenzo E. Anderson & Co., from plans by the late Tom P. Barnett, noted architect. It is on an impressive scale throughout. The reported cost was $130,000, exclusive of the site. Designed in semi-Egyptian style, the building is one of the most striking in the downtown district. It is opposite the commodious quarters of the Mercantile-Commerce Bank & Trust

FEWER FORECLOSURES ON NON-FARM REALTY

Show Decline of 5.3 Per Cent in April From March Figures.

Non-farm foreclosures in April declined 5.3 per cent from March figures and 14.8 per cent from those of April a year ago, officials of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board announced today on the basis of a preliminary tabulation of records.

The movement was decidedly favorable, the Board's Division of Research and Statistics declared, since the March to April decrease over the past five years has averaged only 1.8 per cent.

Figures for the first four months of 1939 indicate that non-farm foreclosures were 12.6 per cent less than in the first four months of 1938. The decline in the first four months of 1938 over the corresponding period of 1937 was 22 per cent.

Whether the April trend is of permanent importance remains to be seen, officials of the board pointed out. But the comparison of April figures with those of last year is far more favorable than comparisons of the earlier months of this year with corresponding months of 1938.

There were 8882 foreclosures in the short month of February. The customary March increase brought the monthly figure up to 9757—as compared to 11,168 in March, 1938—on the basis of data received from 1344 communities throughout the country. The total for April is not yet available. The increase this year from February to March was 9.9 per cent, as compared to a five-year average of 12.4 per cent.

Only 15 scattered states reported more foreclosures in the first three months of 1939 than in 1938. No breakdown of figures yet is available for the month of April.

PRINTING CONCERN ACQUIRES LOCUST STREET BUILDING

Comfort Company Buys 4-Story Structure at Northwest Corner of Leffingwell Avenue.

Renewed attention was focused on upper Locust street as a center for printing concerns, with the purchase last week of the modern four-story building at the northwest corner of Leffingwell avenue by the Comfort Printing & Stationery Co.

The property was owned by interests represented by the Hemmelman & Spackler Real Estate Co. Negotiations for the purchaser were conducted by the Breitt & Naumer Realty Co. The sale price was not disclosed.

Fireproof in construction, the building comprises approximately 54,000 square feet of available floor space, including the basement. It is equipped with two large freight elevators and other labor-saving devices. The site has a frontage on Locust of 90 feet and on Leffingwell avenue of 135 feet.

The concern's printing plant and sales room, together with the Comfort Specialty Co., and Comfort, Inc., mail order subsidiaries, will occupy the building, which will be remodeled and converted to conform with their requirements.

The building was chosen by the concern after a survey as the best available adapted to its requirements, especially as to location.

Established in 1900

Established in 1900 the concern has been forced several times to obtain larger quarters to provide for expansion. Its sales rooms and offices are now housed in a two-story building at 107 North Eighth street, while its plant occupies quarters at 210 South Seventh street. Officers of the company are C. R. Comfort, president; W. S. Cummings, vice-president, and C. A. Wood, secretary and treasurer.

APRIL HOME BUILDING 43 PCT. ABOVE YEAR AGO

Total Construction in Cities for Period Showed Gain of 19 Per Cent.

The volume of residential construction for which permits were issued during April was 43 per cent greater than during the corresponding month of 1938, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins reported yesterday. "All seven geographic divisions shared in the increases in residential construction activity, the most important gains being in the West North Central and the West South Central States.," she said.

"There was a decrease of 3 per cent in the permit valuation for new non-residential buildings and an increase of 3 per cent in the volume of additions, alerations, and repairs over the year period. Total construction showed a gain of 19 per cent. These data are based on reports received by the Bureau of Labor Statistics from 2052 cities having an aggregate population of approximately 60,000,000.

"There was a decrease of 7 per cent in permit valuations for all types of building construction, comparing the current month with March. This decrease was brought about by a decline of 7 per cent in the permit valuation of new residential buildings and of 15 per cent in non-residential buildings. There was, however, an increase of 10 per cent in indicated expenditures for additions, alterations and repairs to existing structures, comparing April with March."

Permits were issued during April for the following important building projects: In New York City—in the Borough of the Bronx, for apartment houses to cost over $4,000,000; in the Borough of Brooklyn for apartment houses to cost approximately $1,500,000; in the Borough of Queens for one-family dwellings to cost over $2,000,000 and for apartment houses to cost approximately $2,000,000; in Mineola, N. 4-STORY BUILDING AT 711 ST. CHARLES STREET BOUGHT

The 99-year lease (under which the site is held) was acquired by the late Lorenzo E. Anderson, in 1923 from the Allen estate. It called for an annual ground rental of $2000 until 1936, and for $2500 per annum, plus taxes, etc., for the remainder of the term.

Mr. Anderson died several years before Lorenzo E. Anderson & Co. went into receivership, and his son, the late Oliver J. Anderson, who succeeded him, had previously disposed of his interest in the concern, and organized the Oliver J. Anderson Co. The Anderson family had no interest in Lorenzo E. Anderson & Co. when the receivership was ordered.

and Leffingwell avenue, through the Breitt & Naumer Realty Co.

The John S. Swift Co., Inc., printers and planagraphers, recently purchased the three-story building at 2100 Locust street, comprising 40,000 square feet of floor space, formerly occupied by the Lambert Deacon-Hull Printing Co. A large amount has been expended by the Swift company in air-conditioning and remodeling this structure. Replete with the most advanced type of equipment, it will replace the concern's plant quarters in the Von Hoffman Building, at 105 South Ninth street.

The building at 2100 Locust street was formerly an asset of the Lafayette South Side Bank and Trust Co., which is being liquidated through the Manufacturers' Bank and Trust Co. Negotiations were handled in this instance by the Breitt & Naumer Realty Co.

Other large printing concerns, including several in the riverfront memorial park district, are said to be dickering for buildings on upper Locust street.

The Swift & Co. and Comfort acquisitions are expected to reawaken speculative interest in property on Locust street, west of Twelfth boulevard, which prior to 1929 was one of the most buoyant sections of the real estate market.

Clayton Gardens Sale.

The newly built residence at 8133 Pershing avenue in Clayton Gardens has been acquired by Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Behring from Joseph Leopold, builder. The first floor has living room, dining room, kitchen, breakfast room and lavatory. The second floor has three bedrooms and bath. A recreation room is in the basement. Shaw & Francis, Inc., made the sale.

Residence of semi-modernistic English design at 7363 Winchester in Pasadena Hills, sold to Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Ryffel by the Excel Construction Corp., through the Carl G. Stifel Realty Co.

NEW MESKER RESIDENCE IN FRENCH CHATEAU STYLE

Construction has started on a country residence for Mr. and Mrs. John B. Mesker, on the Jamestown road, on a site overlooking the Missouri river, with Study & Farrar as the architects. It has been designed in the French chateau style.

The introduction of simplified classic details blended with the high pitched roofs, which are distinguishing features of many of the small French chateaus, will make this house unusually interesting.

The main entrance to the house, which will face the south, will be approached through a forecourt paved with cobblestones, and enclosed by brick walls with entrance gates after the French manner.

The plan of the building is that of the letter "E" with projecting end pavilions. As shown, the main entrance is through an arcaded central pavilion, from which one enters into a square paneled entrance hall and in turn passes on through into a loggia which commands a broad view of the Missouri River. Leading off this central entrance hall are passageways leading to the guest rooms and family bedrooms, and to the living room, anti-room, dining room, breakfast room and service quarters and garage.

The house will be of fireproof construction throughout, with all the main structural details of concrete and steel. The exterior door and windows will be of steel of special design. The architects are planning the terraces and courts immediately surrounding the house, while the rest of the grounds will be designed by a prominent landscape architect.

An interesting feature of the owner's suite will be a sunken bathtub of marble. In order to utilize all the space economically the storerooms and servants' quarters have been placed on the second floor above the garage wing.

RIDGE HILLS ON TELEGRAPH ROAD COMPRISES 152 LOTS

Oliver Kratz-Fischer & Co., realtors, have launched a development known as Ridge Hills on Telegraph road, near Kingston drive. Comprising 27 acres, the tract has been divided into 152 lots.

Contracts have been left for water, sewer, gas and electric mains. Surface improvements will include sidewalks, curbs and gutters. Approximately two acres of the subdivision will be reserved for a park.

Ridge Hill has been approved for FHA loans, according to the developers. A number of houses have already been erected in the addition, notably of the bungalow type.

ESTATE AT BARNHART, MO., PURCHASED BY W. PATTERSON

A residence, with 10 acres of ground at Barnhart, Mo., has been purchased by William Patterson of the American Window Glass Co. It was owned by Mrs. George Dobler, an executive of the Women's Exchange.

An attractive feature of the premises is a spring house. There are also various auxiliary buildings.

150-Acre Tract Acquired.

A 150-acre tract at Florissant avenue and Jennings Station road has been purchased by the Continental Building and Development Co., composed of north side operators. Plans are under way for grading and subdividing the tract for moderate priced homes. The development will represent an investment of $125,000, including proposed surface and municipal improvements, which will be of the highest type.

The Continental Building and Development Co. was recently formed to acquire the tract. The purchase price was not disclosed.

AT THESE PRICES THEY'LL MOVE FAST

—and that's exactly what we are aiming for. We've told readers of this paper for weeks past, that the only way any reliable dealer can make his legitimate profit on NEW car sales, is to turn over his trade-ins FAST. And that's what we're doing, by pricing our used cars so attractively they move almost overnight. Come in early Monday and drive away the biggest bargain you were ever offered in a Used Car.

KYLE BEATS DUNCAN FOR BRITISH GOLF TITLE

HE SUCCEEDS CHARLEY YATES AS CHAMPION

Score in Final Round at Hoylake Is 2 and 1; Victor Is a Cloth Designer.

HOYLAKE, Eng., May 27 (AP).—Alex Kyle, a free swinging Scotsman, came from behind on the last round today to beat Soldier Tony Duncan, of Wales, 2 and 1 for the British amateur golf championship.

Two down after 18 holes and even after 33, Kyle won the thirty-fourth and thirty-fifth to take the title back to Scotland for the first time since Hector Thomson won it in 1936. Ironically, Duncan, a superb putter, lost the match on the green. At the thirty-fourth, he was only 18 feet from the cup in three, but then his putter failed him and he needed three puts to get down.

The soldier lost his chance to send the match to the final hole by hitting his second out of bounds at the thirty-fifth and ending up with a six, two over par, while Kyle played safe with a five. Duncan actually put himself in a tough spot by hitting balls out of bounds at the nineteenth and twenty-first holes to lose the two-hole advantage he gained through the first 18 holes.

Duncan was really right during the morning round, however. After being two down through the first 12 he won fou of the last six holes. He shot at 36 for the homeward nine, one under par, while Kyle took 40 strokes.

After Kyle had tied the match at the twenty-first and went one up at the twenty-fifth as Duncan sliced his tee shot, the Welshman got square again at the twenty-sixth a birdie four. But he drove into the sand at the twenty-seventh and headed into the last nine one down. Duncan squared the match again at the twenty-eighth, went one down at the thirty-first where Kyle dropped an iron shot six inches from the cup for a deuce. Duncan drew even again at the thirty-third but faltered on the next three holes.

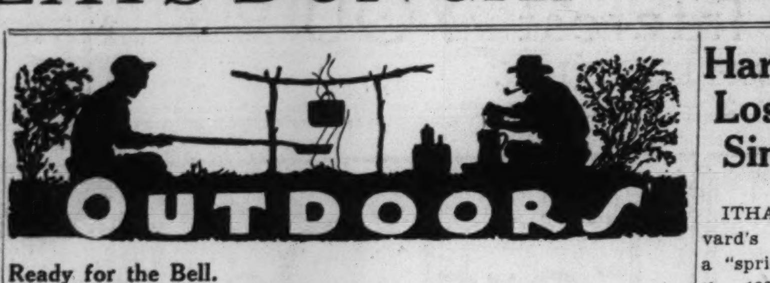
HEINE MEINE AND JOHNNY TOBIN IN FUNGO CONTEST

Heine Meine and Johnny Tobin, former members of the Browns will compete against Chet Laabs and Mel Mazzera, 1939 members, in a fungo-hitting contest at Sportsman's Park next Sunday.

The contest will be part of a program of the third annual American Legion day.

Meine and Tobin are members of the American Legion and Laabs and Mazzera are graduates of the Legion Junior Baseball League.



Ready for the Bell.

WITH the witching hour of midnight Monday the lid will be off for fishing in Missouri. The first minnow can hit the water at 12:01 a. m. Tuesday, then it's every fish for himself. If it swims and has scales it's liable to finish on the stringer. The only ones protected by law are the little fellows not yet of legal length. For all others it's the zero hour.

It is presumed of course that everyone has a license. Next, cut out these rules and regulations as set forth by the Conservation Commission and put them in your hat band or somewhere for handy reference.

Channel catfish open season ends June 1 and remains closed until July 14.

Creel and minimum lengths on other game fish are as follow: Bass, including large mouthed, small mouthed, Kentucky and white bass, 10, minimum length eight inches. Crappie 15, minimum six inches; white perch or drum 15, minimum nine inches; Jack salmon five, minimum 12 inches; goggle-eye 20, minimum five inches; trout 10, minimum eight inches.

Not more than 25 game fish may be taken in one day and while no closed season is provided for bluegill and black perch, these fish count against the daily creel limit.

Undersized game fish and small bait minnows must be returned to the water uninjured. Remember to wet your hands before handling them.

Although nets not to exceed 20 feet by four feet may be used to gather minnows, conservationists point out that minnow traps are effective and do not cause the damage to creeks that is sometimes caused by minnow seines.

With an Ear to the Ground.

Tabulations are now being completed of the 12 public hearings conducted by the Conservation Commission in various areas throughout the State. Consideration is being paid to changes suggested for the game and fish seasons, bag and creel limits and regulations on frogs and rabbits. Included also in the proposals is one to require every person more than 14 years of age to possess a fishing license to fish in public waters.

The commission has stated no changes will be made before Sept. 15.

Prepare for That Trip Now.

For the convenience of our anglers who are planning a fishing trip outside Missouri this summer here is a list of officials to write for official fishing laws:

Illinois—Director, Department of Conservation, Springfield. Tennessee—Director, Game and Fish Division, Nashville. Arkansas—Secretary, Game and Fish Commission, Little Rock. Michigan—Director, Department of Conservation, Lansing. Wisconsin—Conservation Director, Madison. Minnesota — Game and Fish Commissioner, Department of Conservation, St. Paul.

Will Wonders Never Cease.

Kipling made the flying fish famous, but it took William Leithold of Ely, Minn., to put across the idea of flying to your fishing. Until this year certain Minnesota wilderness lakes were practically non-existent so far as the average angler was concerned because it took five or six days to reach them from the nearest railroad station.

Today it's different. Regular plane flights take fishermen from St. Paul at 6 a. m. and land them at one of the wilderness lakes by 9 o'clock. He can hop a plane at the lakeside at 3 p. m. and be at home for 6 o'clock dinner.

For the curious, the pilot collects a $50 bill for a two-day, all-expense tour of this kind.

On the Trail.

A letter from a Dr. Arthur Ludwig reveals that he is spending his first year in Missouri and has decided to get a first hand glimpse of the Ozarks. He spent two days last week around Sam Baker State Park. Quoting from his letter:

"Desiring to do my own cooking I naturally had to carry a few simple utensils. I was advised to wear a northwestern type sack. I was troubled not only by the constant rolling of the utensils in the sack, but also, by the black coming off of the utensils onto the other stuff. I wrapped the pans in paper and in cloth but to no avail. What's the answer?"

Let us suggest first that instead of trying to carry everything loose that you fit a cardboard carton into your pack. The northwestern type is one of the best. As you use your supplies, cut the carton down so that it always "fits" the remaining supplies. You can purchase regular reed baskets to fit in your pack but cardboard containers will usually stand a week end of hiking.

So long as your utensils are not in a carton or basket and are playing a tune on your vertabrae at every step you can hardly keep them wrapped. A good investment is a "kitchen bag" which can either be strapped on the outside, or carried inside your pack, as room permits.

You'll see plenty of beautiful country in the Missouri Ozarks, doctor, but it will soon be plenty warm for carrying a pack. Now is the ideal time for camping.

Sabin Wins Tourney.

ENGLEWOOD, N. J., May 27 (AP).—Wayne Sabin of Portland, Ore., defeated Ladislaus Hecht, former Czecho-Slovakian player 6-0, 6-4, 6-1, today to win the Englewood invitation men's single tennis tournament.

Harvard Crew Loses First Sprint Since 1937 Season

ITHACA, May 27 (AP).—Harvard's varsity crew, unbeaten in a "sprint" race since the start of the 1937 season, bowed in defeat today before a gallant Cornell eight on rain-swept Cayuga Lake.

A poor fourth at the mile, the Crimson finished the two-mile pull with a final burst of speed that earned it a tie for second place with Syracuse a length behind Cornell as Penn trailed another two lengths in the rear.

Cornell was clocked in 11:23.5, Harvard and Syracuse in 11:28.5. Penn's time was 11:35.9.

Harvard gained some measure of consolation when its junior varsity nosed out Syracuse by a bare length, with Cornell and Penn trailing in that order. The Crimson eight's time for the two miles was 10:31.6.

Cornell walked off with an easy four-length victory in the two-mile freshman event, with Penn taking second honors and Syracuse third by another three lengths. Cornell's time was 11:16.

The varsity race was rowed under some of the worst conditions ever witnessed at a spring regatta. Before the crews had reached the mile, hail mingled at times with the rain. The boats were invisible a hundred yards away. As the boats reached the half-mile, Harvard, in the off-shore lane, was receiving the full force of the lashing gale and dropped back rapidly.

All four boats were water-logged at the finish. The Cornell rowers took to the water a few hundred yards beyond the finish line, and the Penn boat submerged before reaching the boat house.

ARMY DEFEATS NAVY IN ANNUAL GAME, 4-1

WEST POINT, N. Y., May 27 (AP).—Army's baseball team wound up a successful season today by defeating Navy, 4 to 1, in their annual game before a crowd of 5000.

Cadet Tom Davis, pitching his last Army-Navy game, turned in a fine performance. He allowed only six hits and kept them well spaced, and granted only one base on balls. The big righthander also hit three times in four trips to the plate, his last being a double which brought in a run.

The Cadets made only seven hits off three Navy pitchers but hit well with men on bases.

POINT SCORES

SENIOR DIVISION.

Edwardsville	11
Madison	9½

JUNIOR DIVISION.

East St. Louis	54
Edwardsville	29
Granite City	19½
Belleville	14
Wood River	13½
Collinsville	13

For three years East St. Louis High School's athletes had won the Southwestern Illinois Conference track meet and the league relays and the district qualifying trials for the State meet, but they slipped a bit yesterday.

It wasn't what you would call a nose dive, however. The East Siders outdistanced the junior division field in the conference meet at Wood River, scoring 54 points to 29 for the nearest competitor, Edwardsville. But the best they could do in the senior division was a 45-45 tie with Belleville.

State low hurdle champion Don Harpley led East St. Louis in the senior division with 14 points, winning both hurdle races and placing second in the 880-yard run. Harpley set a new record in the 200-yard lows of 23.8 seconds. He tied the record for the high hurdles—15.7 seconds.

Jim Hight was East St. Louis' best scorer in the junior division. He won the 100 and 220-yard dashes for 10 points, setting one of the three new records in this division when he ran the century in 10.8 seconds.

Bob Eller of Wood River broke the junior pole vault mark when he jumped 10 feet 11½ inches, and Wayne Groh of Belleville established a new javelin record of 162 feet 1 inch.

Saddest mishap of the day was that which befell Merten Kuykendall, East St. Louis sprint star. For two years he had won the 100 and 220-yard dashes. But a leg injury kept him from winning the 100 and out of the 220. He had set a time of 10.9 in preliminaries Friday. Winning time yesterday was 11.1.

The only Madison entry in the meet, Bill Kelio, was among the leading scorers in the senior division with 9½ points.

THE HOEHN CHEVROLET CO., which has taken over the building at 3939 Lindell boulevard, just west of Vandeventer, is headed by Ted W. Hoehn, who also operates a large Chevrolet dealership in Memphis, Tenn. He operated in Englewood for six years up to the first of this year when he sold the business and started the dealership in Memphis. He came to St. Louis in April to set up the dealership which he has just opened on Lindell boulevard. The vice-president and general manager of the Hoehn Chevrolet Co. is Harry A. Olson, who joined the firm in Englewood in 1934 and was appointed manager in 1937. Lew Johnson is new car salesmanager; E. Without hurrying, he made the 2700 miles in 59 hours and 40 minutes, averaging 46.26 m. p. h., whereas when he made the same trip in 1915, the road was so bad that he required 220 hours, averaging only 13.5 m. p. h.

THE WORK OF THE CHEVROLET dealer committees, whose recommendations are important in the determining of plans and programs of the company, was discussed among other matters in the graduation week address made by M. E. Coyle, general manager of the Chevrolet Division of General Motors, at the Post-Graduate School of Modern Merchandising and Management for sons of Chevrolet dealers. He also went behind the scenes to explain the sampling of public preferences preceding the designing and engineering of each new Chevrolet model. The student group which heard Coyle were enrolled in the unique industrial college founded by W. E. Holler, general salesmanager for Chevrolet.

THE REAR STOPLIGHT on a Dodge car operates on the hydraulic principle as do the brakes. Just as the Dodge hydraulic brakes eliminate levers, clevis pins, and rods, the Dodge hydraulic stoplight switch, working from a hydraulic cylinder of its own, opens and closes its electric circuit without the intervention of springs, cables or other linkage likely to become disarranged in continued service. Because it eliminates common causes of stoplight failure, the arrangement is a contribution to driving safety.

CHARLES McKEAN, MANAGER of the Western Auto Supply Co. local store No. 3, is back from a week's trip to Newark, Cleveland and Detroit which he won in a recent tire sales contest for the company's 198 stores throughout the country. The contest was held as part of the concern's observance of its thirtieth anniversary, and McKean made the trip with other winners and company officers from the general office at Kansas City. The company opened its first St. Louis store in July, 1926, and now has six stores and a warehouse here. It also operates 11 other stores and a warehouse in Missouri, at Kansas City, Joplin, St. Joseph, Independence, Springfield and Maplewood.

THE DIONNE QUINTUPLETS' first auto ride, when they went to Toronto to meet the King and Queen, was made in two Buick sedans furnished by R. S. McLaughlin, president of General Motors of Canada. They rode in the cars from the nursery at Callender to their train and again when they were taken from the railway terminal in Toronto to the Legislative building for the Royal audience. "We're not too big for the seats," cried Yvonne when the five sat side by side in the rear compartment. It was Emilie who discovered the Napoleonic coach emblem which Fisher Body uses as a trademark and compared it with the King's coat-of-arms. The quints exhibited interest in the shiny hubcaps, upholstering and the bright interior hardware and liked to play with the radio buttons.

ews and Notes

start of the Indianapolis 500-mile race Tuesday. Chayne will hav T. E. ("Pop") Myers, vice-president and general manager of the speedway, as his passenger.

THE 27,000,000TH FORD CAR, V-8 black sedan, will leave the Sa Francisco World's Fair ground May 28 for a trip across the co tinent and back which will includ a stop for a week at the New Yor Fair. Eastbound, the car will trav via Reno, Salt Lake City, Denver, Omaha, Joliet, Chicago, Detroit, Dearborn, Mich., Toledo, Buffalo, Syracuse and Albany. Returning it will come through St. Louis and then go via Kansas City, Bartlesville, Ok., Oklahoma City, Dalla Fort Worth, El Paso, Phoenix, Lo Angeles and Fresno to San Francisco where it is due July 14. The 27,000,000th Ford was assembled at the Ford plant at Richmond, Cal., Feb. 15, last. At the time, it was noted that the Ford Motor Co. had made more than a third of all the autos ever built.

A FACTOR IN CAUSING THE fatigue largely responsible for "driving jitters," which is blame for many auto accidents, is poo ventilation of cars. Stale air and carbon monoxide fumes, resulting from inadequate ventilation, are said by traffic engineers to cause drowsiness, sometimes semi-consciousness, in drivers. This was taken into account, it is said, in the designing of the air conditioning system used in Nash cars by which large quantities of fresh, filtered air are continually brough into a car under pressure and, in winter, warmed automatically to room comfort temperature. There is a change of air in a Nash car up to 600 cubic feet a minute.

APPOINTMENT OF RICHARD W. Arnold as regional manager for De Soto at Dallas, Tex., is announced by J. B. Wagstaff, general sales manager for the De Soto division of the Chrysler Corporatio Arnold, who once was famous as a racing driver and won the Indianapolis 500-mile race in 1930, joined Chrysler as a special promotional representative in 1931. He joined De Soto in 1936 as district manage for the city of Los Angeles and before his promotion to regional manager was merchandising manage in the Los Angeles region.

EACH OF THE WINNIN drivers in the Indianapolis 50 mile race in the past five years ha driven a four-cylinder car, Willys-Overland, Inc., points out. William Cummings won in 1934, at an average of 104.86 m. p. h.; Kelly Petillo in 1935 at 106.24; Louis Meyer in 1936 at 109.06; Wilbur Shaw in 1937 at 113.58 and Floyd Roberts in 1938 at 117.20 m. p. h.

A 240 PER CENT INCREASE in the last 30 years in the ratio of barrels of oil to number of "dry" or unproductive wells drilled in the United States reflects the improvement in the science and technique of exploration and location of oil fields. In the period 1906-1910, the ratio was 91,000 barrels of oil to each dry hole drilled. In 1936-1938 the ratio became 309,000 barrels to each dry well. Study of the figur reveals that in 1937 of every 10 wells drilled in wildcat territory—territory of unproved oil production—82 were located on the basis of geological and geophysical information and 18 without apparent technical information. Of the wells located scientifically, one well in each 6.5 was successful in producing oil. Of those located without advance technical information, only one in 17 produced oil.

TWENTY - FIVE CADILLA airport coaches have just been put in service as feeder transports in Chicago, Detroit and New York. They have 12-passenger steel bodies, 140-h. p. V-8 engines, four rows of tubular frame chairs, special luggage carrying provision.

GASOLINE OF 125 OCTANE, having 50 per cent greater power output than present 100 octane gasoline, is being produced experimentally in petroleum laboratories. Costing about $3600 a gallon a year ago, the experiments have already reduced the cost to $50 a gallon. Continued experiments are expected to reduce the cost sufficiently to permit commercial production. Although not essential for today's motor cars, the super-octane gasolines are a major requirement of the nation's flying defense forces. American refiners are now producing the world's only adequate supply of fighting grade aviation gasoline, a supply which could be vastly increased in the event of national crisis.

THE EDWARD G. BUDD MANufacturing Co. of Philadelphia, has received orders for 150 lightweight, stainless steel truck trailers. The orders include two distinct types one a 30-foot unit with squa front and 1600 cubic feet payload space, the other a 28-foot unit, with rounded front and 1495 cubic feet payload space. The 30-foot unit weights 6000 pounds including running and landing gear, and the smaller unit weighs 5850 pounds.

A DEFINITE TREND TOWARD preference for more luxury in autos is reported by the Chrysler factory with an increasing proportion of orders for its New Yorker and Saratoga models as evidence. These cars are built on the Chrysler Imperial 125-inch wheelbase, 135-horsepower chassis, and have special upholstery, trim and equipment.

THE SINKING OF THE SUBMARINE SQUALUS

Written for the Post-Dispatch

By Commander Edward Ellsberg

Salvager of S-51—Author of "On the Bottom"

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., May 27.

THE chunky little submarine tender Falcon squats in the sun-dappled sea, like an anchor man on a tug-of-war team, four lines hooked to the bottom and her after-boom hung out over the water. From the boom runs a cable and suddenly, at the point where the cable enters the water, there appears a strange device, looking for all the world like a denizen of the deep. It is the Navy's new rescue chamber, up from the bottom of the sea where the Submarine Squalus lies trapped in the frigid depths.

Swiftly the chamber is swung to the side of the Falcon. Eager hands reach for it, make it fast. The hatch is opened and a man steps out—the first man in history to walk through this handmade doorway from the grave.

And so the living are safe and the dead are gone but the question remains as to why the Squalus, newest and most modern of submarines, plunged to the bottom in a manner reminiscent of the days 40 years ago when underseas boats were just elongated coffins—more likely to stay down after a dive than ever to come up again.

In the frantic rush to save the living aboard the ship, the question of why has been thrust into the background, but today it was slowly emerging. The Squalus disaster raises an issue that our submarine forces have not had to face in years. The S-4 in 1927 and the S-51 in 1925 were sunk by being rammed and smashed wide open. Nothing mysterious about that. The S-5 in 1920 was lost because a petty officer forgot to close a valve. Earlier boats were lost because the crews were not well trained.

But now comes the Squalus with perfected machinery, with officers and men carefully trained in special schools, with automatic indicators to flash warnings in every emergency and like the most primitive underseas boat, she sinks to the bottom of the sea.

WHY?

Beginning of a Tragedy

THE U. S. S. Squalus, early on the morning of May 23, shoved off from the Navy Yard, Portsmouth, for a routine test dive. The Squalus, designed by the navy and built by the Navy Yard, was in charge of Lieut. Oliver Naquin, a submarine officer of long experience, already designated for promotion to Lieutenant-Commander.

For some weeks, Naquin and his crew had been running tests, some of which included diving the boat, and 18 times before this day, the Squalus had gone down and returned to the surface of the sea.

On this day, the specific test was a shallow dive to 50-feet depth to check the performance of the submarine in its most important military characteristic—its ability swiftly to submerge to periscope depth and disappear from sight, thus making herself invisible to any rapidly approaching enemy such as a destroyer coming up at 35 knots, and at the same time getting a blanket of some 10 feet of water over the highest part of her hull (the conning tower and bridge) under which circumstances in wartime shells fired at her would ricochet harmlessly over her, across the waves, unable to penetrate that far below the surface.

Out between the low-lying hills at the mouth of the Piscataqua steamed the Squalus, running on the surface, driving steadily ahead on her Diesels, steering for deep water to the southward of the Isles of Shoals. Her dive was to be brief, well under an hour. For the depth to which the boat was to be taken, deep water was not required, but long experience in operating submarines, especially new ones, has demonstrated that with vessels as long as the Squalus—299 feet from stem to stern—it is highly desirable to have plenty of depth under her so that should she take an undue trim while planing under, her crew would have sufficient water to regain control before either stem or stern crashed bottom.

Aboard the Squalus, aside from her commander, were four officers, 51 seamen of various ratings, and three civilians, one the test engineer of the Navy Yard and the other two representing contractors who had supplied machinery.

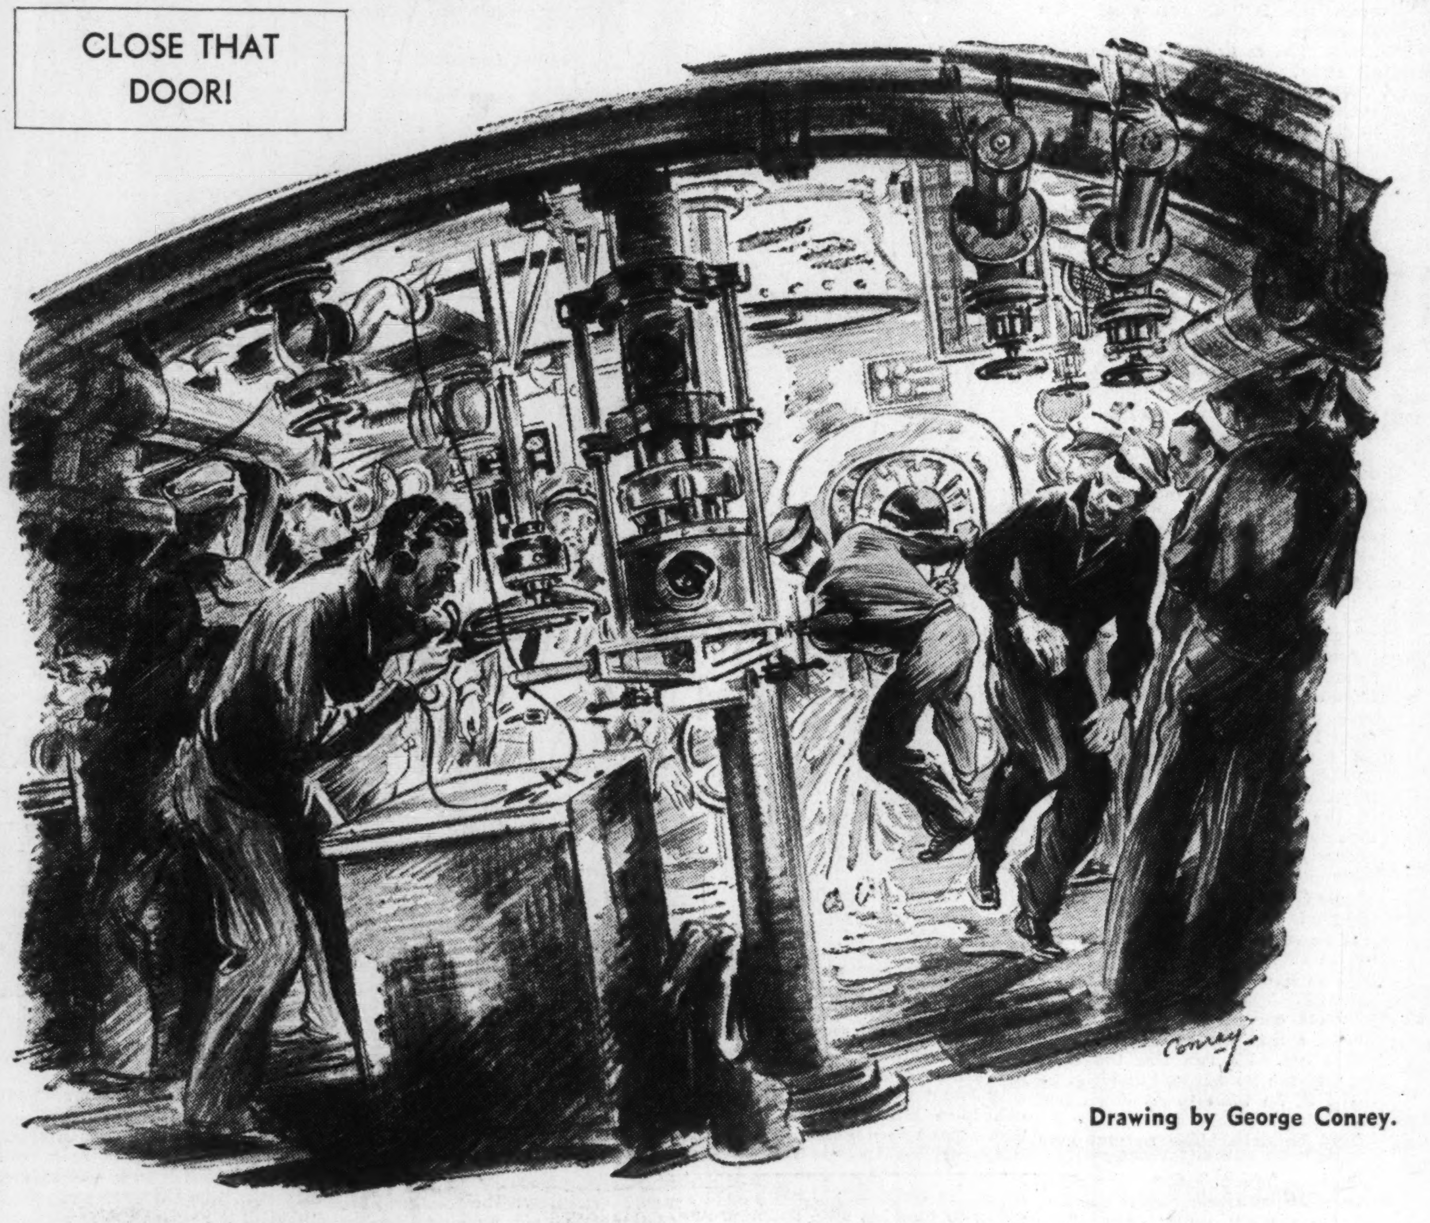
Some five miles to the southward of the Isles of Shoals and about the same distance off the coast of New Hampshire, with the charts showing 243 feet to the bottom, the Squalus at 8:30 a. m. prepared to dive. Below at their diving stations were the crew—torpedo men and officers in the forward and after torpedo rooms at bow and stern, machinist's mates and engineer officer at the Diesels, electricians standing by motors, storage batteries and switchboards ready for submerged operation, and in the crowded control room the diving officer and his enlisted assistants.

Before these latter to port was a maze of diving wheels, depth gauges, valve operating gear, indicating lights of various colors, and a galaxy of gauges with which to flood the boat down to proper depth and then maintain her there at proper trim.

The Squalus Dives

ALONGSIDE them, poised watch in hand waiting to check the time from full ahead on the Diesels to level trim at 50 feet was Preble, the Navy Yard's civilian engineer. The day was clear, the surface fairly calm, when Lieut. Naquin on the topside gave the order to dive. In every compartment of the boat below, the diving signal sounded. On the bank of indicators, in the control room before Alfred G. Prien, machinist's mate, second class, 26 years old, with six years of naval service, whose job it was to flood down for submergence, the diving light flashed on. Alongside him Preble started his watch, as Prien swung into action. It was Prien's task to open the vent valves through which the air in the ballast tanks escapes while they fill with water; to open the Kingston valves at the bottom of these same ballast tanks to admit the water which floods them and sinks the boat; and most important of all to close the two huge main air induction valves high up in the submarine's superstructure abaft the conning tower, through which valves while on the surface air enters to feed the Diesels and to ventilate the hull compartments.

CLOSE THAT DOOR!



Drawing by George Conrey.

Prien shoved over to "OPEN" the controllers for the vent valves and the flood valves, scattered out of his sight over a length of 200 feet of the submarine's hull. He noted that the Diesels were stopped, thus giving him clearance to close the outside air induction valves. Immediately he thrust over to "CLOSED" the control gear for the air inductions. Through high pressure lines liquid flowed from his controllers to the hydraulic-operating cylinders at the valves themselves, to push them over to the desired positions. Swiftly on the bank of red and green indicators before him lights started to flash, showing the valves had reached their intended positions—open for flood and vent valves, closed for the two air induction valves.

From the ballast tanks air roared out the vents as the sea rushed in and on the depth gauges the needles started up the dials as the boat flooded down. At the diving wheels, the rudders were tipped downward to plane the boat under. At the switchboard the main motors were started up, and running now on power from her storage batteries, the Squalus planed smoothly, the throbbing of her Diesels missing now inside the silent hull.

Last Word From Aft

AT a little beyond 20 feet on the depth gauge dials the Squalus, with buoyancy practically all gone, planed her deck beneath the surface. Nearing 30 feet, the tops of the two main air inductions, one 31 inches in diameter, the other about 18 inches wide, both shielded by the conning tower from the rising water, went under. About this time, Lieut. Naquin, his surface navigation finished, descended to the control room.

Forty feet on the depth gauges and the last vestiges of the Squalus' bridge and conning tower disappeared beneath the sun-flecked sea, leaving only an agitated wake, boiling with the air ejected from her ballast tank vents, to mark where she had been. Still driving ahead on her electric motors the submarine planed downward to the last few feet and as the depth gauge needles approached 50, the diving officer started to level off the boat with the horizontal rudders.

Inside the Squalus, everything seemed right—air induction indicator lights showing both valves closed, air pressure in the boat normal, the dive in every respect similar to the 18 uneventful plunges the submarine had previously experienced. Alongside the control men, Preble looked tentatively at his watch, nodded approvingly, prepared to take the time at the instant the trim indicators showed "LEVEL." It would be a good dive.

And then, startling in its suddenness, came disaster. From the engine room, over the telephone into the control room, came the almost unbelievable message, the first and last that ever came from aft.

"Water coming into the engine room."

As that message echoed through the control room, Prien, dumbfounded, stared at his indicator lights. They showed "CLOSED."

Inside the Squalus, things began to happen fast. The air, compressed by the water rushing in aft, rose suddenly in pressure, painfully distending ear drums, and warning every man in the boat that something was wrong. On the heels of that, under the impact of the sea flooding in aft, down-trimmed the stern, giving a sharp "up" angle to the deck.

What was wrong? Undoubtedly the eyes of both captain and diving officer instinctively flew to the main air induction valve controls and indicators. Had either showed "OPEN," down on those controllers would have leaped an officer to close the overlooked valve, and by that closing to shut off instantly the deadly stream of incoming water. But nothing like that happened. On valve gear already in proper closed position and with indicator light showing "CLOSED," nothing more can be done, and Naquin wasted no further time on that. The trim by the stern was increasing. On the depth gauges the needles were starting to race up the dials from "50." The boat was going down. The sole remaining emergency measure was taken.

"Blow all ballasts."

On the compressed air manifolds, tense operators swung open the valves, admitting through reducers, high pressure compressed air from the ship's tanks to the ballast tanks in a final attempt to expel the water, lighten up the boat, and if possible, float her to the surface.

But water was pouring in too fast for that. The trim rapidly increased, reaching at least a 30-degree angle. Except by clutching something fixed, no one could stand on deck. Prien, unable yet to understand was was happening, slid backward from his post, saved himself by grabbing a control lever, clung there eyes staring at the indicator lights of his valves, still showing "CLOSED." Forward, as yet free of all water, doors began to close, internal valves to swing shut, as the torpedomen started to seal off. In the after battery room, just abaft the control room, filled with the crew's bunks, water started to gush in from overhead through ventilation valves and blowers. Five men stationed there immediately made a dash for the open door to the control room. Booth, radio man, testing storage batteries beneath the deck, racing up the steep slope, made it first, crawled through into the control room without much difficulty, to find there at the bulkhead, Maness, burly electrician's mate, third class, reaching through from the control room to close the heavy steel door.

Booth's shipmates in the after battery room, some dozen of them, were less fortunate. Between water gushing down the deck and the rapidly increasing angle, climbing became next to impossible. Four more men only got through, of whom the last, O'Hara, was several times washed back by the flood before he at last fought his way up to the door and crawled through, the last man to escape from aft. And as he, half drowned, came through the door, Maness, by a superhuman effort, managed to drag the heavy mass of steel forming that door and slammed it shut, immediately setting up the dogs to hold it watertight.

Meanwhile, in the control room, in spite of ballast water going overboard, the depth gauges showed increasing depth, the angle of trim increased, and stern first, the Squalus plunged to the bottom. Within three minutes she hit, slowly leveled off as her bow dropped, and came to rest with the bow trimmed up at an angle of 11 degrees.

In another moment, the ship's power went off and the lights flickered out, except only a few on an emergency lighting circuit, which in perhaps two minutes more, short circuited also and left the ship in darkness.

Calmly, Lieut. Naquin went about securing the unflooded section of his boat. In the control room, and the forward torpedo room, all interior valves were closed, compartment doors closed, and every available flashlight in the boat was hastily gathered together.

The Fight for Life

ON a swift telephone check, Naquin learned the men in his torpedo room forward were safe, as were a few also in the forward battery room between him and that torpedo room. But from no one aft was he able to get the slightest response by telephone or by hammering. Realizing then that those aft were beyond his help and inside a sunken, dark and half-flooded submarine, his major problem was to save those still alive, he prohibited all discussion or reference to those astern as the first step in keeping up morale.

As his second step, once everything had been checked for leaks, the few men in the battery room were brought aft into the control to save them from possible chlorine gas. After that, no man except on the Captain's orders, was permitted to move about. Instead, each was ordered to lie quietly, and avoid any exertion which by accelerating his breathing would increase the amount of carbon dioxide discharged from his lungs and thereby hasten the fouling of the air.

What little else Naquin could do was soon done. Over the telephone, he ordered Lieut. Nichols in the torpedo room to let go the releasing gear on the Squalus' marker buoy, and in a moment up from the bow of the helpless submarine to the surface rose that buoy carrying in its cable a telephone line, and inside the buoy itself, marked by an engraved plate with the words, "SUBMARINE SQUALUS SUNK HERE," a telephone sealed watertight.

In the darkness, in the silence, in the chilly dampness of their steel prison, the trapped men, alone with their thoughts, waited for rescue.

Nine-thirty a. m. came and the Squalus, which should be reporting the completion of her dive by radio to Portsmouth, was unheard from. Shortly after, a sister submarine, the Sculpin, was dispatched to search the area of her operations. And when through the depths the vibrations of her screws beat down against the steel sides of the Squalus in a rhythm easily recognized there, Naquin immediately ordered the discharge through an ejector of special bombs which on reaching the surface, ignited to make a decided smoke, and first directed the Sculpin's attention to where to look.

Steaming over there, the Sculpin soon sighted the marker buoy, took it aboard, quickly learned from Lieut. Nichols, below in the torpedo room, the plight of the Squalus. Naquin himself, coming forward to the torpedo room to give further instructions, had hardly more than exchanged greetings with his fellow captain on the surface, when a sea hit the Sculpin, drove her to leeward, and parted the cable.

On the Sculpin, the radio began flashing the news. In a few minutes more, in far-off Washington, in the submarine base at New London, at every naval station on the East coast, diving gear, divers and salvage gear were being mobilized for transport to Portsmouth.

A Miraculous Rescue

IN some ways, the Squalus was lucky. Since the days of the S-4, our navy has developed the technique of diving with a synthetic atmosphere composed wholly of helium and oxygen. With this, instead of natural air, our divers can go much deeper than ever before.

Next, even if the divers failed, the Squalus was fitted with escape chambers and escape "lungs." Wearing one of these lungs, a man might emerge from the submarine and rise unaided through the sea to the surface, floated up by the buoyancy of the "lung" strapped to his chest and meanwhile breathing into it as he rose, through a special mouth connection.

Naquin well knew that aboard the Falcon was a special rescue chamber, which might obviate the need of using the escape "lungs." This device, intended to be hauled down, after a diver had attached the necessary line, on top of one of his submarine hatches, would permit the passage into it through the opened hatch of some eight men, who thereupon when the lower entrance to the bell was closed, might ride upwards inside it to the surface, never at any time exposed to the sea.

For this device Naquin decided to wait rather than risk his men in the "lungs."

The wait was long. By evening Momsen and the first divers had arrived by air. Also by that time, a grappling hook dragged from the surface had caught in the Squalus, making good the guide line lost when the marker buoy line parted. But until the Falcon arrived, diving was impracticable and the Falcon, steaming full power from New London, was not due till early morning.

All through that endless night, 33 freezing men lay in darkness and in silence at the bottom of the sea. The air grew worse, fouled by carbon dioxide, and the air purifying system was started up to remove the gas. No one talked, no one moved, no light showed in that stygian blackness save occasionally the flicker of a flashlight as some fitting was checked for leakage. With insufficient blankets for so many men, those available did more than double duty to wrap the shivering seamen. Nothing

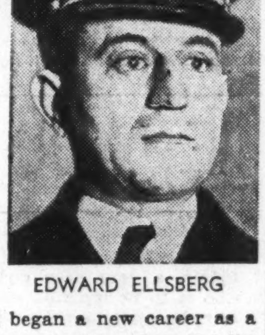
ELLSBERG FOREMOST EXPERT ON DEEP-SEA RESCUE WORK

COMMANDER EDWARD ELLSBERG, writer of the accompanying article, has been called the foremost expert in the United States, and probably the world, on deep-sea rescue work.



EDWARD ELLSBERG

He first won national attention in 1925 after the submarine S-51, rammed by a steamer off Block Island, sank in 135 feet of water, carrying her crew to a slow death. Commander Ellsberg led the hopeless efforts to save the imprisoned men, and then, after all hope of their being alive was gone, in the salvage work. He invented many of the tools with which to accomplish the work, and set an example for his men by putting on a diver's suit and working on the bottom. By special act of Congress he was given a Distinguished Service Medal.

He resigned from the navy and began a new career as a civilian and a writer, but returned temporarily when the S-4 was sunk in a collision with the Coast Guard cutter Paulding off Provincetown, Mass., in December, 1928. Again he distinguished himself.

He has maintained a connection with the navy as a naval reserve officer.

Commander Ellsberg was born in Hartford, Conn., 43 years ago, the son of Jewish immigrants from Russia. His father moved to Colorado when his son was a child, from which State the boy was later appointed to Annapolis. He was graduated at the head of his class.

His books include "On the Bottom," the story of the fight to raise the S-51, "Pigboats," a novel about submarines, and "Hell on Ice," the story of the Arctic expedition of the barque Jeanette in 1879.

THE last of the season's really seething first nights flowered into neon-lit opulence last week when the American Lyric Theater started its brief repertory season at the Martin Beck with "The Devil and Daniel Webster," by Steve Benet, and a score by Douglas Moore, and the Ballet Carnival provided a curtain raiser in the form of "Filling Station." Something more than a Broadway premiere, the occasion proved a synthesis of opera-length glace gloves, Murray Hill carriage trade, the curious werewolves of the business of belles-lettres and the regular swish and stamping of ballet loonies in beards, orange-colored wigs and platinum lame gowns armed to the teeth with three-foot cigarette tubes and shepherds' crook walking sticks.

It was all very confusing to the dinner-jacketted news photographers in the lobby, many of who had never before encountered balletomanes "en the rough," as Dwight Fiske put it and were quite justifiably frightened as a result. Above the entr'ate pavanes of the dance conscious, however, were visible such luminaries as Larry and Jane Tibbett, the Nelson Rockefellers, Bob and Mrs. Rubin in their accustomed front-row right location, the bland Conde Nast (in a short jacket, too, causing some slight scandal), Lincoln Kirstein, impresario of the Ballet Caravan; Clara Bell Walsh on the arm of Herman Sartorius, Mrs. Cole Porter, Paul Cravath, the Walter Damrosches, Alfred deLiagre and a farrago of bigwigs from the roster of the League of Composers, the American School of the Ballet and the fashion departments of the afternoon papers.

—O—O—

Dick Maney, who handled the publicity for the occasion, and for years has worked with Billy Rose, never batted an eyelash, being entirely accustomed to every form of eccentricity from pet rattlesnakes to opium-eating, but the mousy Mr. Benet, called to the stage for a curtain call, took one look at the house and ran gibbering to the wings. None of it achieved the screaming dementia of a Russian Ballet first night, where the management of the St. Regis holds imperial court in the bar of the Metropolitan Opera, but it contrived to close the season on a high—indeed practically soprano—note.

● THE LAST OF THE "OLD GUARD"' of that famed tribe of pre-war restaurateurs, Jacques Gustanoby, is still in harness. This caterer to the epicures and bon vivants who reigned supreme in the gilded era of Lillian Russell and "Diamond Jim" Brady, now caters to the palates and tastes of the stolid middle-class folks at his imposing new bistro in Flushing, a few minutes from the site of the World's Fair. The dominant attraction at the spot, excluding Jacques himself, who still cuts a dashing figure, is the "Cavalcade of Bustanoby," a series of murals on the wall depicting those legendary spots he once managed, and the personalities who frequented them. They are symbols of the wistful past. The Cafe des Beaux Arts, that forerunner of the modern night club, where dinner dancing was introduced, for which heinous offense the Committee of Fourteen sought to revoke the Bustanoby license; where the first women's bar was introduced to shocked and staid New Yorkers; where the counterpart of the modern "guest night" was originated, and which was termed the Soiree Artistique—at which Anna Held, Blanche Ring, Nora Bayes, Mrs. Leslie Carter, Isadora Duncan, Bob Fitzsimmons, Lillian Russell, young Douglas Fairbanks and countless others entertained impromptu.

—O—O—

Also gracing the wall are Bustanoby's Thirty-ninth Street, where Sigmund Romberg was a pianist, where Vernon and Irene Castle initiated the patrons in the delights of the Maxixe and the Castle Walk; the Chateau des Beaux Arts at Huntington, the costliest venture of its kind in America, three-fourths of a million dollars, where the first Chaplin picture was made in this country, directed by Mack Sennett and co-starring Mabel Norman; and finally, the most famous of all the Bustanoby places, the Columbus Circle. Four floors, four orchestras, and 140 employes. The first sidewalk cafe was introduced here, the Cafe de la Paix, which soon became the rendezvous of such cosmopolites as Richard Harding Davis, Fritz Kreisler, Victor Herbert, David Belasco and their kindred spirits. The most famous room in the house, the Domino Room, has now become a legend.

—O—O—

● IT WAS HERE that Rudolph Valentino was a dancing instructor, Emil Coleman conducted his orchestra; the highest cover charge New York imposed on patrons was $3.50—the year 1913, before the war inflation reached these shores. Dress was formal, and champagne order compulsory. The room seated but 75 and was done in black and white—walls, floor, ceiling and table covers. The opening night guests included Judge Elbert Gary, president of United States Steel; the Dodge brothers, auto magnates; Mr. and Mrs. William Randolph Hearst, O. O. McIntyre, "Diamond Jim" Brady squiring the Dolly sisters, Robert Goelet, and many others.

—O—O—

And the personalities portrayed in the "Cavalcade of Bustanoby" at the restaurateur's spot; Count Salm, David Warfield, Mary Garden, Peggy Hopkins, Charles Chaplin, Victor Herbert, Sarah Bernhardt, Otto H. Kahn, Vincent Astor, the Barrymores, Alfred G. Vanderbilt, Charles Dana Gibson, "Diamond Jim," the Dolly sisters, Enrico Caruso, and countless others who were representative of every phase of Manhattan's varied and colorful life—society, Bohemia, fistiana. All who were the "regulars" at Bustanoby are portrayed on the wall of Jacques Bustanoby's new venture, the most glamorous chapter of New York history!

The expensive Madison avenue florists giving the fish eye to the potter shrub and lilac man with his ancient horse and wagon. He undersells them fearfully. . . . THE WORLD AS WOMEN SEE IT

Would Your Husband Propose Again?

Question Is One to Give You Pause, Especially After Reading This Analysis of Wives' Faults.

By Heath Ainsworth

"IF SHE GIVES HER HUSBAND THE CLOSE, WARM FEELING OF 'WE TWO AGAINST THE WORLD,' SHE WILL GAIN A LOVE AND A SECURITY THAT NO CATACLYSM CAN AFFECT."

I AM fed to the teeth with the attitude of American wives toward American husbands. American men take their wives for granted. American men don't understand women. American men are a thorn in the side of female progress; an obstacle to happy home life; a blight and a frost upon the full flowering of the American woman's personality. Stuff! The men, God love 'em, are all right.

What's so awfully hot about the women? Woman is kidding herself to death about her new-found abilities and opportunities. Intelligent women have had freedom and power for centuries.

How many of the proud career women of today know that, in the fourteenth century, women of Europe were a power in the unions of those days, then called guilds? Women were barred from only two guilds—tanners and brewers. To the others membership was made easier than for men. They could receive membership by inheritance, purchase or gift; they could will it to whom they wished. They were merchants and craft heads in their own names; even their husbands could not take part in their affairs without written permission. (Are we even that free, under our community property laws?) In fact, the only thing women could not do, besides join the two unions, was to take a position of night watch or guard duty.

And why was this freedom again gradually crushed down by men? Because women could not take such power gracefully. To quote from E. Reich, Women Through the Ages, "Women became coarse, boorish and crude. They reveled in profane language; they frequented the taverns, drinking and carousing; they grew shrewish, tyrannizing and dictatorial. They used their power for personal aggrandizement and exploited their families and communities."

Is there possibly a word of warning in this historical tidbit? Suppose men do take their wives for granted? The favorite maxim of a jolly old colored woman is, "Lord, honey, a man thinks of love like a street car. He run like the devil for the one he wants, but when he catch it, he want to sit down and rest."

And he does. The normal man is simple and straightforward emotionally. When his wife pesters him with petulancies along the line of, "You don't really appreciate me"— his answer is generally, "I married you, didn't I?" To him that covers the ground. Today when women have shouted so very loud and clear that they are as clever and as efficient as men, a man DOES take it for granted that his home will be properly run. A man doesn't see any reason to go into ecstacies over a normally clean house or good dinner. His wife doesn't compliment him three times a day on the excellence of his business letters, on the neatness of his files, does she?

What does today's wife mean by the wail, "My husband doesn't understand me?" Apparently, that her husband doesn't compliment her, appreciate her, listen with bated breath to her opinions, reiterate that she is vitally necessary to his happiness. There are three things women seem to have forgotten in their consuming passion for the spotlight.

First, the only man who knows perfectly how to treat a woman is the man whose hobby is women. Any woman who wants that man can have him—for a little while. The second is a gray-bearded truism, so-called because it has been proved true, "You can't get something for nothing." A man is not going to give his wife spontaneous and heartfelt compliments unless he has some reason to do so.

WHY should be tell her how marvelously she runs the house? The chances are he loathes the way the living room looks after the decorator got through with it; his personal belongings are never allowed where he wants them; there is always an unexpected blow in the bills; and the checkbook is a darling feminine mess that takes him two evenings a month to figure out.

Why should he tell his wife how beautiful she is? Probably her hat strikes him as ridiculous; her hair as peculiarly tortured, and her sharp red fingernails as positively nauseating.

Why should he tell her that she is vitally necessary to his happiness? Actually: she makes him feel incompetent by criticising his lack of success and money; she makes him feel unattractive by nagging at his appearance; she makes him unhappy by harping on his inadequacy in general.

The third fact that women forget is that men are human beings, too. They respond to appreciation and thoughtfulness just as fast as wives.

What does a man get if he does try to compliment his wife? Suppose he says, "Well, darling, you look pretty fancy. New dress? Ninety-nine times out of the well-known hundred he gets either, "Good heavens, you've seen this old rag a thousand times, and my hair is ghastly," or else. "Yes, but it really doesn't fit. The one I wanted was too expensive, of course." If he is the demonstrative type and goes so far as to essay and embrace, he gets a good push and, "Don't muss me. Now I'll have to do my lips over. Don't be so silly." I wouldn't call this sort of thing encouragement. I wouldn't even call it friendliness.

Friendliness is a missing quality in the attitude of most wives toward their husbands. The appaling rudeness with which the average wife treats her husband would not be used by anyone with the slightest friendly regard toward the recipient of the remarks.

Suppose a friend has promised to bring along some important item, and forgets. What does a woman say? Something courteous, naturally, no matter how irritated she may feel. What does she say to her husband if he does the same sort of thing? I'd really rather not write down some of the things I've heard said, even in front of as many as 20 assembled guests. What does a woman say to her husband across the bridge table? Things no one would say in wildest dreams to someone they were fond of.

The defense along these lines is, that the husbands are to blame. They start everything. I don't think so. After quite a few years of quiet observation, I feel able to say that in 95 per cent of the cases bitter quarrels are started cold by the wife, or started, say, warmed a little, by some thoughtless remark of the husband that could have been answered softly or disregarded by any woman with a modicum of tolerance or dignity.

How can her husband understand her when she doesn't understand herself? One moment she is memorizing pages of How to Be Alluring to Men; and she is complaining that her husband doesn't pamper her. The next moment she is campaigning for equal rights; she is shrieking that she can, and should be allowed to, support herself; and she is complaining that her husband looks on her as a female and not as a brain. She wants to assume all the prerogatives and characteristics of man, and yet to be desired and treated as a woman.

But if woman doesn't want to throw herself entirely out of gear with life, and to become even more neurotic, jittery and dissatisfied than she is, it's time she checked up on a couple of fundamental facts.

THE fundamental and powerful desire of man is for the peace and tenderness—the femininity of woman. The fundamental desire of woman is for the stimulation and strength—the masculinity, of man.

Woman's answer is that she's too well educated to be "old fashionedly" womanly, kind, and gentle. She's an intellectual, a business woman, or a politician. Very well.

If she fancies herself such an intellectual, I should think she could use that fine intellect to figure out a way to get along with a man whom she herself has chosen, or at least accepted, as husband. If she's such a business woman, she could at least sell her personality to her husband, when he already has signed on the dotted line and only needs to be kept a contented customer. If she is a politician, how does she expect to please thousands if she can't keep her backer happy?

If American wives would only get wise to themselves they would realize that they have every opportunity to be the happiest wives of any generation and of any country. They have husbands who have been well conditioned to the emancipation of women, who admire healthy, capable, intelligent women. They have the advantages and training to give them these qualities in good measure. In addition they have both medical and cosmetic progress to give them extra years of youth, strength and beauty. All that women lack is the common sense to act like women, and to treat men like men. They should bear in mind the fact that men will be blind to an astonishing amount of homeliness, untidiness and inefficiency, but they will never overlook neglect, lack of consideration, criticism, selfishness.

If a wife praises her husband, gives him the support of a sincere interest and affection, he will never be happy if she is not at his side. If a wife confides in her husband her intimate hopes and feelings, listens to and respects his, she will never again believe in the legend of the unemotional coldness of the Nordic man. If she gives her husband the close, warm feeling of "we two against the world," she will gain a love and a security that no cataclysm can affect.

What do you think? If he had it to do over again right now, do you think your husband would marry you?

IF YOU ASK MY OPINION

By Martha Carr

A Father Changes Mind About Giving Bride Away

My dear Mrs. Carr:

I HAVE a very dear girl friend who is to be married this June. She is marrying a very nice boy; one who can give her a happy home. But here is her difficulty:

This girl has always wanted a church wedding and, until a few days ago, plans for the wedding were working out nicely. The bridesmaids are even ready with their gowns. My friend went to her own father and asked him if he would give her away at the wedding. He replied that he would.

Now, however, he wants to break up the marriage, although he has not contributed to her support for 10 years and has had no care of her in that time. Her mother and stepfather have been the ones on whom she has depended.

Do you think he has the right to find out what church she is to be married in and stop the ceremony? I would appreciate your opinion and I hope it may be published soon as possible. DOTSY.

I assume that the girl is of age; if she is, she has the right to marry without a parent's consent. In the State of Missouri 18 years is marriageable age, without consent.

Her father should appreciate the fact that she has shown him the deference and respect that any daughter should, by asking him to give her away. Her father has little consideration for her evidently, and no idea or realization of the embarrassing position he is causing her; and so I believe he could very well be left out of the wedding plans, the stepfather, who has cared for her as a real father, taking his place in the ceremony.

The girl's mother, or some responsible and dignified relative of the girl, should admonish the father in plain words, that while his daughter would be glad to have him attend the wedding, that the participants in wedding will see that no trouble or commotion is tolerated. They should say to him, that if he attempts this he will be stopped at once and removed from the scene.

My dear Mrs. Carr:

I AM A VERY POOR conversationalist. Is there any book that might help me to correct this fault?

2. Can you tell me if Lynne Fontanne ever played in "Strange Interlude?"

3. In August my husband and I are planning a vacation to a seaside resort where his mother lives the year round. Is it necessary for us to spend each and every evening with her?

4. Can you tell me what date Feb. 19 fell on in the year 1917?

Thanking you, DIANE.

Reading does, of course, increase one's vocabulary but sometimes self consciousness makes this equipment of a good vocabulary of little use. Any study or practice which helps you to eliminate self-consciousness will give you more fluency and freedom of speech.

In a group of people try forgetting your own personal tastes and feelings; make a mental record quickly of the person to whom you are talking and remember just what interests him most; fads, absorbing work, travel and equipment in any special line; then show a real interest in talking about them. Reading aloud will help you and discussions at home about popular topics; those you read about in the paper, see on a walk, or hear mentioned by others.

2. Lynne Fontanne played in "Strange Interlude" in New York in the spring of 1928.

3. You would, as guest of your husband's mother, consider her plans and engagements as a matter of courtesy; but it is not likely that she will be tactless enough to put you in the position of feeling that you must spend every moment with her.

4. This date came on Monday.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

I AM ANXIOUS to let "Radio" know that I am in perfect accord with her about the trashy radio programs. I ask just the average listener to turn on the radio at 7:45 a. m. and listen carefully until 2:45 p. m. There really is not one serial story on, at this time, that is not moronish; such as a person with average intelligence does not feel indignant about. The plots, far from being "true life" stories, are utterly inane and impossible.

There are so many fine novels which could be dramatized seriously and, if there must be mystery, there are thousands of good mystery stories that are at least not objectionable.

There are details of married life, of the birth of children too, which we are taught should at least call for some reserve. But these "true life" stories have no such delicate sensibilities considered—the line which is, or should be drawn between vulgarity and coarseness and good breeding. BEA.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

I NOTICED A LETTER signed "Radio" in which the writer complained about the number of stories given on the radio, which she did not like. I wonder if she is one of those persons who start the radio the minute they get up in the morning and keep it going all day. No wonder she gets tired of what she hears. She says "we women" must do something about this and have some of them taken off the air. There are five or six radio stories that I enjoy very much and I should hate to be deprived of them, and I do not see what "we women" could do about it as long as they are clean stories. There are any number of concerts, speeches by more or less prominent people, news and many other programs to listen to, without trying to take off the air what she does not happen to like. Wonder what others think about this.

RADIO FAN.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

I HOPE you can find room for this answer to "Observer." She talks about secondhand men being experienced, so what about women? They do not have to be experienced to be secondhand, as I have found out, to my sorrow. But this happened long ago and is all over now. I am married again, work every day of the week, go to church on Sunday and we are happy. I hope, therefore, she will not condemn all the men, any more than all the women. SOLDIER HUSBAND.

My dear Miss Carr:

MY INDIGNATION was aroused, as I am sure many others was, by the tirade against divorced men written by "Observer," in your column.

I have been married to a divorced man for 18 years, and we have a lovely family and happy home. I do not consider my husband "second hand" any more than as if his first wife had died, and certainly I did not marry a man "who had a living wife" for the same law that married us took away the title of "wife" from the other woman.

Just because a man or woman made a mistake once (perhaps "Observer" is one of those perfect people who never has made a mistake), is that a reason why he should pay with a life of loneliness?

I fear that "Observer" will always be just that—an "observer" of other people who have lived happily and made others so, in spite of the fact that he or she has been divorced.

Good luck to you, "Observer." I'd not change places with you!

JOHN KIERAN—Knows All the Answers

New York Sports Columnist Has Built Himself Up as Radio Star by Wide Knowledge—Noted Among News Men Long Before Radio "Discovered" Him.

By Alvin H. Goldstein

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

NEW YORK, May 27.

WHEN the more discerning radio listeners of St. Louis—and the whole country for that matter—tune in on the program "Information Please," on Tuesday nights, they bend an especially attentive ear when John Kieran speaks. He's the man who knows all the answers. Well, if not all, most of them.

"What manner of man is he?" the public asks. "Where has he been? Where did he pick up all that knowledge and information?"

One at a time, the reporter will try to answer these and other questions about the remarkable Mr. Kieran, first leading off with the generally known fact that Kieran is the sports columnist of the New York Times.

His fresh, scintillating articles have appeared in that paper daily for the past 12 years under the heading, "Sports of the Times," and long-time followers of the column—and there are many scattered from one end of the country to the other—were not one whit surprised when Kieran started knocking his new-type audience for a loop and a couple of antennas. It's the same brilliant Kieran; printed or spoken word.

Offhand, it cannot be said that Kieran has a favorite sport. All are grist for his typewriter, but he is at his best, many of his readers think, when he is writing about a personal favorite in the sports world. In this connection, he has turned out columns on Frankie Frisch, Dazzy Vance, Moe Berg and Al Schacht that were practically priceless.

His every-day columns are at a standard far better than par for the course. During the football season he can, on a Friday morning, even make his football predictions worth while as reading matter, embellished as they are with references to the classics, to school colors, or what not.

Only on rare occasions in his column does he show a trace of testiness. About as far as he will go in this direction is indicated by the following illustration:

It was springtime and Babe Ruth had signed with the Boston Nationals and was making his last stand as a player. Writers were dealing easily with him even though it was apparent that he couldn't go on forever. Then Walter Johnson, manager of the Cleveland Indians at the time, visited St. Louis on the club's first trip of the season and in an interview with a Post-Dispatch sports writer he said he believed Ruth would bog down before the season's end.

Kieran fumed at Johnson's remarks. The keynote of his column a day or so later was, "Walter Johnson puts in his 2 cents worth." That Johnson was right is, at this late date, quite beside the point.

But such an outburst, if it can be called that, is rare for Kieran. Recently he did indulge in a bit of belligerency which completely unhorsed a college professor.

"I was invited to speak before the students and members of the faculty of one of the country's most exclusive preparatory schools," Kieran told this reporter in a conversation at the Times sports desk. "I went, but with a great deal of reluctance because I am still unaccustomed to public speaking regardless of the radio experience. I sat there ready to speak my piece and run, and the faculty member presiding got up to introduce me.

"It was obvious from the first that he was extremely doubtful of the propriety of having a sports writer address such an august and learned body. In fact, he said so. He added, apparently in the way of apology for those who had invited me, that I was not just plain, run-o'-the-mill newspaper sports commentator. I started to boil. Then, as if fate had ordained it, he put his foot in it. I guess to properly impress me, he concluded his introduction with several phrases of Latin. His Latin was not bad, but imperfect. When I arose, I first took the liberty as a sports writer to correct his errors, added a few comments of my own in Latin, and had the great satisfaction, before I completed my talk and left, to see a look of embarrassed confusion on his face."

PHYSICALLY Mr. Kieran is small. He is slightly stooped, his thinning hair is gray, and his large ears are definitely Irish. As radio listeners know, he quotes the classics with a New York accent.

His love for the classics goes back to childhood and may be explained in part by heredity, if you believe in heredity. His father, Dr. James M. Kieran, was president of Hunter College in New York City and his mother was an accomplished musician and a student of literature. She made it a rule to introduce the world's best books to her seven children, of whom John was smallest. She also introduced them to music, but, for the moment, the writer will digress to an "Information Please" program of three or four weeks ago. Perhaps you heard it.

Clifton Fadiman, master of ceremonies, asked a studio pianist—Oscar Levant wasn't present that night—to play the first lines of an old song, following which he invited any one of the four "experts" present to step forward to the piano and play at least a part of the chorus.

Mr. Kieran, the only expert who recognized the opening notes of the verse, raised his hand. "I know the song," he said, "but I can't say that I can play it. Maybe I can pick it out with two fingers." Thereupon he went to the piano and, not using a mere two fingers, but 10, he went rollicking along on the familiar chorus of "The Sidewalks of New York."

Fadiman's amazement was as great as the audience's. "Two fingers!" he exclaimed. "Why, Mr. Kieran, that was practically an orchestration." Kieran had scored again.

That talent for the piano goes back to Kieran's first exploits in the field of knowledge, when, at the age of four, he began to pick out, with one finger, the opera melodies he heard his mother play. By the time he was 10 or 12 he was on familiar terms with the piano and many great composers, and he hasn't forgotten about either to this day.

He denies, however, that his memory is out of the ordinary. "I just remember what I'm interested in," he says. "Everybody does. I just happen to be interested in a lot of things."

In season and out of season Kieran has followed the policy of "improving each shining hour." Soldiering, in France, he carried Tennyson's poems, Thoreau's "Walden" and Carlyle's "French Revolution." During a stretch as operator of a boating concession in a New York park he studied flowers and birds in his spare time and became an authority in those fields. He credits his knowledge of the Scripture to the fact that in almost every hotel room where he has had time on his hands he has found a Gideon Bible.

Kieran says that his luckiest break in the pursuit of learning came when the paper on which he was then working, the New York American, assigned him to go on the road with the New York ball clubs. "Nobody on a ball team gets up early," he said, "and I had almost every morning to myself."

As a result he had long hours for study in museums and libraries around the major league circuits.

Kieran's stylish pieces on baseball during this period caused his work to be studied by aspiring young sports writers in widely scattered sections of the country. They knew even then that he had what it takes.

Much of Kieran's knowledge, as disclosed in the foregoing paragraphs, has been picked up along life's highway, but he also has a formal background of education. He was graduated, cum laude, from Fordham University in 1912.

Following his graduation he taught in a country school. A year of this was enough, and he went back to New York to take a job as timekeeper for a sewer construction gang. During this job he learned French while riding back and forth to work.

HIS study of birds and flowers led him to submitting articles on those subjects to the New York Times, and finally he was offered, and accepted, a job as sports writer. It was then he met and fell in love with another Times employe whom he married a short time before his National Guard regiment was sent to the Mexican border. His outfit in France was the Eleventh Engineers.

When he returned to New York he worked on several papers, but, in 1927, he returned to the Times with a sports column of his own. This was the first signed daily column that paper had ever printed, but even with this distinction to his credit, Kieran's troubles in making his way on the Times were not ended.

The executive sports editor at the time, friends have quoted Mr. Kieran as saying, did not like his treatment of sports comment.

Kieran finally became discouraged and debated with himself whether he shouldn't quit and go back to the American, where they took a lighter view of life on the sports pages. He asked the advice of a friend, who told him, before thinking further of quitting, to go to the very top of the Times organization and make a vigorous kick. Feeling he had little to lose, Kieran followed the advice.

The top executive surprised Mr. Kieran, and agreeably, too, by telling him to write his column in his own way; he would see that it was published "as is." From that point forward Kieran has encountered smooth sailing.

About the only bridle is that he is not allowed to write in the first person, singular. Hence his column reads, "This corner thinks," "this department believes," rather than "I think this," "I believe that." In any event it's a pretty safe bet that Kieran, given absolute freedom, would never wear out the upper case "I" on his typewriter. The bright and shining light of "Information Please" is not that kind of man.

About the Program

"INFORMATION Please," most popular of the many quiz programs now on the air, is built around questions sent in to the program directors by listeners.

The questions, usually in groups of four or five, are submitted to the panel of "experts," composed of John Kieran, Franklin P. Adams, and two special guests. They must correctly answer three of the four, or four of the five. Sometimes they must answer all correctly.

If the "experts" fall down, the sender is paid $10 in addition to the $5 he receives from the sponsor for the use of his questions.

Superstitions In Our Beliefs About Women

At Least, They Are Called Superstitions by Woman Columnist.

By Elsie Robinson

WE moderns still knock wood and cross fingers over an amazing amount of superstition concerning black cats, broken mirrors, ladders and such. But for sheer nonsense, nothing quite surpasses our veneration for "feminine intuition."

Many wise heads will shake in indignant denial over the classification of this belief as "superstition." For, according to even some master minds, the little woman—however dumb she may be in her scholastic records—has some uncanny power whereby she arrives at the right answer without ever knowing how she got there or bothering to make any preparation.

As a consequence, a female moron with no more brains than a gnat frequently achieves the authority of an Einstein in her own circle or household, merely by demonstrating what she claims to be supernatural hunches, and thereupon proceeds to get by with murder. Indeed, there is no slicker game than this intuition racket when worked by a smart girl. And what she can do with a confiding male is nobody's business.

The situation thus far is mischievous enough. But it becomes a public peril when mama joins the ranks and begins to run her job by the same mysterious "instinct." Then belief in mumbo-jumbo becomes almost religious veneration for that something we call "mother instinct." And if there's anything crazier in this cockeyed world than our belief in mother instinct it ought to be in a museum.

MAMA MAY NOT—frequently doesn't—know enough to ride herd on a mud turtle. She may be completely ignorant of all information necessary to her craft—a stupid lazy, shiftless, notoriously poor housewife, cook and nurse. And her children may show all the evil effects of this ignorance and stupidity.

Yet, through mother instinct, she is supposed to be amply equipped to meet every conceivable domestic situation. Just try and tell her that she isn't and see where you get off!

Nor is this amazing credulity confined to her equally nitwit associates. Important ladies and gents, with imposing strings and collegiate initials after their names, bow unhesitatingly at the shrine of mother instinct and take mom's side in case some officious school teacher or social service worker intimates that maybe there's something she doesn't know. Which is certainly "the tops" or something or other.

The simple truth is—there's nothing to this whole theory of feminine intuition or maternal instinct. Neither women in general nor mothers in particular, have any peculiair psychic powers.

Then why does a woman always jump to such right conclusions?"

She doesn't always. And when she does there's no miracle about it. A woman's conclusions are no more often right than a man's. If as often! And she reaches them by exactly the same processes of reasoning—accepting certain facts, eliminating others. But where the man proceeds step by step, the woman—jumps.

—o-o—

IN THE JUMP the woman covers the same territory that the man covers. The same facts flash through her head. But the man, disciplined by generations of contact with his fellows, is trained to consider his facts carefully. And has also learned, by sore experience, to face the results of recklessness. So he reviews the facts slowly and cautiously.

But the woman has had no such training. For generations she has played a lone wolf game—made her own rules as she went along and dispensed with them when she so desired. Accordingly, she is hampered neither by fear or failure or respect of truth.

Bam!—off she goes! Maybe she lands and may be she doesn't. But when she does, the feat seems so remarkable that we can only conclude she has some secret stand-in with the powers of darkness.

There's the whole truth about woman's instinct. And what goes for females in general goes also for mothers in particular. A mother's love may heighten her interest in her children, but it does not endow her with any occult powers of obtaining information. A mother must obtain wisdom by the same slow and arduous process used by other humans, and there's nothing in the birth travail which will shorten that process.

Flowers in Hair

Every girl is wearing flowers in her hair and most of these ornaments are attached to barettes. The fad started last winter at the Southern resorts after which the college girls adopted it with enthusiasm. With the coming of warm weather, there is a general acceptance of the style. Hawaiian themes are most extensive, al though any flower idea seems to be meeting with favor.

FORMULA FOR HAPPY MARRIAGES

By Lydia Gray Shaw

This is the first of six articles in which psychologists and educators consider problems that often trouble the average married couple, and tell how they may be met. The second article will appear tomorrow.

NEW YORK, May 27.

WHEN pressed for a one-sentence formula for happy marriages, Dr. Leland Foster Wood doesn't talk vaguely about high-sounding virtues.

He puts it this way: "Success in marriage depends on the ability to see life from the standpoint of the other."

Most of the time life is a succession of conflicts over minor points, not major principles, explains Dr. Wood, who is authority on marriage and the home for the Federal Council of Churches.

An understanding wife has to figure out why, if her husband throws a tantrum every time she suggests he put on his rubbers—or go to a concert with her—or eat dinner in a foreign restaurant.

Maybe it all dates back to his childhood. Perhaps his mother used to shout at him about the rubbers. It's an old source of irritation. Maybe there's no good reason for his behavior. But anyway, let her try to see the thing from his point of view.

Getting his point of view doesn't mean agreeing with him. Dr. Wood makes that very clear. Man and wife cannot—and do not need to—see eye to eye on every subject, he asserts. Many newlyweds are aghast when they discover how differently they look at life. They want to effect changes immediately, each anxious to convert the other. It simply isn't necessary, Dr. Wood holds. Thirty years of happy married life can go by with husband still disliking concerts.

Says Dr. Wood, "Husband and wife should realize in advance that if they find themselves occasionally at odds, it will not mean they are unsuited to each other."

Unfortunately, they often don't realize it. The husband thinks, "Helen and I should never have married." And the chances are, he's completely wrong.

If the points of difference seem acute, forget them for a while and cultivate interests over which there is no disagreement, advises Dr. Wood. Skip the concerts and spend an evening with friends whom you both like. Work up some new hobbies which both can enjoy. It all takes intelligent effort and patience, but it will produce compatibility.

John J. Anthony, director of the Marital Relations Institute in New York, lists these "trivial complaints" as the troubles that most often send people to the divorce courts:

WIVES COMPLAIN ABOUT:

1. Shop talk.
2. Nagging about money.
3. Digs at in-laws.
4. Personal carelessness.
5. Over-criticism of little things, mostly household matters.
6. That one drink too many.
7. An anti-social attitude, that "I'm too tired to go out tonight."
8. Attention to other women.
9. Indifference to the children.

HUSBANDS COMPLAIN ABOUT:

1. Too much attention to the children.
2. Being forced into diversions they're not interested in.
3. Wives' intrusion into personal interests.
4. Jumping to conclusions.
5. Slipshod housekeeping.
6. Spoil-sports who go home just when the party gets lively.
7. Mental laziness.
8. Bossy wives.
9. Extravagancy.

Tomorrow: Jealousy.

Let Me Suggest

By Josephine Walter

SUMMER time is adventure time—or it should be, anyway. It's the time of picnics, barbecues, antiqueing over the countryside; and it should be the time of trying all sorts of daring things that you might never consider in the dignified winter time. Because summer is the time of casual dress for both your person and your house, you may introduce many amusing touches that you might hesitate over in more sober moments. So go adventuring over the highways and byways with an open mind and a slightly open purse and add at least one touch of whimsy to your summer decorating scheme.

Consider gingham, for instance, not only as the smartest dress fabric of the season but as the smartest decorating material of the moment. Try it in a checked pattern for slip covers, either as the slip cover itself or combined with a plain material, the gingham being used for a wide ruffle at the bottom and even around the outline of the chair. Or try the big pillows on a sofa or chair covered in gingham with the rest of the piece covered in a plain material such as bagging or satine or some plain cotton fabric. Try small cushions of two or three blending check patterns in gingham banked against a plain colored sofa as a note of gaiety. And, if you use checked gingham for your slip covers, repeat the same pattern for summer draperies with very wide ruffles.

If you use checked gingham for dining room slip covers, trim them around the edges with rick-rack and repeat the same note with place mats for your table of exactly the same material, also trimmed in rick-rack. Replace your monogrammed towels in the guest room or lavatory with some of checked gingham. And if you're the type of person who is really willing to go to some effort, stitch bands of this gay fabric on the tops of your sheets and you may find that it makes the nights seem cooler even if they aren't.

● IF YOU HAVE a June bride to think of and she is the sort of person who is interested in flowers, or at least in the arranging of them, make a whole collection of flower vases for her as a gift. This sounds and looks extravagant, but it really only takes time and thought with a very limited outlay of money. Haunt the little antique shops and be open-minded on the subject, and you will find any number of quaint and charming little vases, jars or mugs that may have originally held Uncle Oscar's false teeth or the freshly churned butter, but which now would make charming receptacles for pansies or petunias. If you make such a collection, include a book on flower arranging, a few flower holders and a little chicken wire for special arrangements, and you will undoubtedly be doted on for the rest of the bride's life.

We have talked so much about our feathered friends in this column that we live in daily fear of being tagged "The Bird Woman," and yet, even risking this possibility, we cannot resist telling about some glasses that we saw recently. They had reproductions of Audubon bird prints painted in natural colors on tall glasses for iced drinks and, truly, anyone even drinking buttermilk or iced tea couldn't help but feel that they were drinking ambrosia from such glasses.

● AND, DURING THESE warm months, when a great deal of serving of drinks of one kind or another goes on, get yourself a bunch of "identifiers" to be hung on the glasses. These are like little charms and may be had in such groups as zoo animals, fish, boats or sports implements, and are made with hooks to attach to the edge of a glass rim so that the drinker may identify his own glass. And, best of all, a card of six of these little gadgets may be purchased for as little as a thin dime, tenth part of a dollar.

ONE DEPARTMENT STORE, realizing that "seeing is believing," has installed a series of rooms showing just what summer attire does in the way of making a place seem cooler. Very cleverly they are displaying groups of rooms, one being a room as it is normally for most of the year and the room next to it being completely revamped with summer slip-covers, draperies and accessories. It is little short of amazing to see, right before your eyes, two rooms that start out with the same wall papers and basic pieces and yet achieve such different effects. Really, in the summer versions of the rooms, even the backgrounds, which are identical to the winter arrangements, seem to be lighter.

In addition to the attractiveness of these rooms, in both their winter and summer versions, there are a wealth of suggestions of ways to make your house cooler and more livable during the summer months. One of the cutest tricks shown was that of hanging pictures from ribbons made of starched white pique, finished with a crisp bow at the top, the whole effect being to pick up the room and give it a crisp laundered look. Certainly it is a simple and inexpensive gesture for any of us to make.

June to Bring Hollwood Jam Session

Youngsters Will Converge on Film Capital in Hopeless Quest for Jobs.

By Harold Heffernan

A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., May 27.

BILL GRADY, the talent scout, looked long and hard at his desk calendar, penciled a ring around "June" and heaved a sigh.

"It won't be long now," he said. "Only a matter of days before our big jam session begins—and I don't mean swing, either. It's going to be a mighty bad June again this year."

Grady was referring to the close of school and college terms throughout the country and to the hordes of youngsters released from classrooms who seize vacation periods to scamper Westward—all with one thought in mind: the movies.

Through the long winter months back home, they've memorized the lines of standard plays, waved their arms and spilled their emotions before what they thought were spellbound audiences of relatives and friends. They've been told by doting kinfolks that their stars lie along the movie horizons, that Gable had nothing on them and that Myrna Loy is just standing by, waiting until they reach the movie capital.

Grady and half a dozen other apprehensive studio talent executives have launched their annual campaign to keep the kids at home—at least to keep them off Hollywood's doorstep.

The movie makers haven't been content in recent years with merely wishing the youngsters would stay home. Joined by the Hays office and the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, they've been resorting to devious and ingenious devices in an effort to convince heads of schools and colleges that even the most promising dramatic pupils should be discouraged from making the long and hopeless trek to the film capital.

"But it won't do any good," said the dejected Grady. "No matter how much propaganda we spread, each June sees an increase in out-of-town applicants. Last June, for instance, the casting departments of seven major lots reported a total of more than 2000 boys and girls coming here from all parts of the nation, many from distant points in Canada and a number even from foreign countries.

"In spite of all our warnings and our attempts to explain that we wish to find our own prospects rather than have them find us, I venture to say that this June will break all invasion records."

If you happen to know of a boy or girl preparing for a summer onslaught on Hollywood gates, you'll be saving heartaches, possible tragedy, if you pass along this emphatic message from Grady—one in which all talent executives heartily concur.

"First of all," he begins, "don't come to Hollywood. When that point's settled, begin to prepare yourself at home for that movie career. Find a good teacher and study every possible moment. You can do this at home as easily as anywhere else. Get into every play you can and play any kind of part. Do radio work if you can.

"Go to the movies and watch people on the screen. Above all, don't imitate them, but study their actions and see how they achieve certain effects. Make speeches, declaim in front of a mirror. A lot of established actors still do that today.

"When you have distinguished yourself locally—but don't accept the opinion of flattering friends on that point—choose the closest Little Theater group that has become prominent. You'll find them all over the country. Travel there and study there. Those are the places where you're most likely to be seen by Hollywood scouts.

"The all-important thing is to get experience and to end up where you can be seen acting. A thousand tests will not show us as much as one small part on a stage."

ELLEN DREW, OF KANSAS CITY, AN EXCEPTION TO THE RULE THAT YOU MUST HAVE EXPERIENCE TO LAND IN PICTURES.

—o-o—

IF the determined aspirant to film fame still feels Grady is merely "popping off" in an effort to keep his doorstep clear and his job easier, check over the backgrounds of practically all the most promising youngsters contracted by Hollywood studios during the past year.

With only a few miraculous exceptions—such as Arleen Whelan, who zoomed out of a manicurist's booth in a barber shop, and Ellen Drew, plucked from behind a candy counter — best prospects among starlets of screenland today are those who let talent scouts discover them—in small stage plays or in radio stations.

Take Laraine Day, regarded as the best young feminine prospect on the MGM lot. She played Little Theater stock for three years before a scout brought her into the studio. The Little Theater was a done-over freight station near Long Beach, but that didn't impair the girl's acting.

Bill Holden, acting the title role in "Golden Boy," at Columbia (for his first start, too), tried hanging around casting offices. He never got a tumble. Then he went away, took a job in a small theater group—and, within three months, two rival scouts were fighting to land him.

Robert Preston, an overnight success in the secondary male lead of Cecil B. De Mille's "Union Pacific," had a similar experience.

Do you think Robert Taylor would be drawing $7000 a week today if he hadn't treated himself to a bit of stock experience? Taylor knows he wouldn't, because he tried unsuccessfully to crash the movies without it in 1932. Then Bob accepted some smart advice. He went to Pasadena and played a few roles in stock. There an MGM scout found him.

The list of those who stopped seeking and went into stage or radio showcases to be sought goes on endlessly — all piling up proof that the cards are overwhelmingly stacked against any boy or girl who appears at a studio door uninvited.

"But what good does it do to sound of?" concluded Grady with a shrug. "The trains and the busses still run and the highways are open. They'll soon be pouring in by the hundreds, all just as positive—as they were last June—that they're the exceptions. When I think what happens to a lot of those poor kids, I think there ought to be a law against it!"

Fishnet Turbans

"Drape your own" is the slogan in connection with an array of fishnet turbans designed for active sportswear. The pretzel drape is one of the favorite suggestions, but more simple arrangements may be preferred by the novice. Two and three color combinations contribute to the festive appearance of these little hats. Knitted rabbit-hair turbans created to match the popular woolly sweaters also are among the novelties in headgear of the sports type.

THE SINKING OF THE SQUALUS -:- -:- By Commander Edward Ellsberg

disturbed the silence except the occasional rapping out with a hammer in Morse code of some message sent by Naquin to the ships on the surface.

Morning came, the Falcon came, and with both came the finest diving weather that divers have ever been blessed with. Overhead a brilliant sun to light the depths, on the surface of the sea only a light swell, insufficient even to cause moderate rolling. In strong contrast to that bleak December day in 1927 when a fierce northwest gale off Provincetown stopped dead this same Falcon and her divers for three days while below them on the S-4 the crew slowly perished from cold and fouled air, the conditions on the surface were now ideal. Hurriedly the Falcon ran out her four moorings, bow and stern, to hold her fixed while the divers worked below. That done, aboard the Falcon came the grappling line caught somewhere in the wreck below. And down that line at 10:10 a. m. slid Martin Sibitzky, bosun's mate, first-class, diver from the submarine base at New London, clad in electrically heated underwear to keep him from freezing to death, inclosed in a ponderous flexible canvas and rubber diving suit, weighted down with 200 pounds of lead and copper and breathing through special apparatus, the Navy's synthetic atmosphere of helium and oxygen.

Swiftly Sibitzky dropped down the line to the bottom, to his great joy found that the grappling hook had caught so that he was able to land on deck of the Squalus. Favored further by a most remarkable visibility, unusual for northern waters, he resecured the grappling line, then plodded along the deck forward through the sea, dragging with him one end of the hauling-down wire for the rescue chamber.

He came to the hatch over the torpedo room, knelt on the motionless deck, carefully shackled to a deck fitting alongside the hatch the wire he carried. And then Sibitzky's work was done.

Pushing slowly aft, he came to the guide line, signaled to be hauled up 15 minutes after he hit bottom, and started his slow rise to the surface for decompression. At 11:24 a. m., a little over an hour after going overboard, he was once again aboard the Falcon.

Overboard from the Falcon went the rescue chamber, to some degree a miniature submarine in its functions, its operator inside to work its machinery and ballast tanks. Balanced off till it was only slightly buoyant its air motor reeling in the guide wire, down it went through the sea until it came to rest on the Squalus' deck over the hatch. Then began the delicate process of attaching the bell watertight to the submarine, a process in which by blowing, venting and making use of a thick rubber gasket, the operator in the bell made a vacuum cup out of the bottom of his chamber, making the sea pressure itself force the bell so tightly to the submarine's hull that leakage was impossible.

That done, he opened the lower hatch of his bell, and beneath that the crew inside the Squalus opened their hatch. Gathered below were Naquin and his men. Hurriedly the Captain told off those to make the first trip—Lieut. Nichols to inform those above of conditions inside the Squalus; six seamen chosen from among those whose weakened condition made hasty escape imperative.

Up through the hatch into the bell went these seven, with the lower hatch of the bell promptly closed to seal them in. And on the remaining 26 men in the Squalus down slammed their own hatch, sealing them once again in their prison.

Quickly the vacuum holding the bell down was broken, the wire slacked off, and the bell started up with its cargo of the saved, soon to reach the surface, where to its seven inmates as they climbed out through the top hatch to the Falcon, the sunlight overhead seemed deliriously unbelievable.

Twice more during the daylight the bell repeated its journey, removing all but nine of the crew. In darkness the last trip was started, the last contact made with the Squalus, the last nine men, including Lieut. Naquin, taken aboard, and for the last time the hatch to the submarine closed, leaving her on the bottom of the deep sea, utterly silent, peopled only by the dead.

"Teach Child Self-Reliance At All Times"

"Beware of Taking Over His Job and Doing It for Him."

By Angelo Patri

HELP from outside oneself is only a temporary lift. The emergency over, one is exactly where he was before if not a bit behind. The help one gets from another does not strengthen and it is likely to weaken the body and spirit of the one who accepts. Leaners, clinging vines, dependents of whatever kind or grade, are weak sisters and brothers and must remain so until they are able to pull their own weight, one way or another, in the lifeboat.

The time to teach people to help themselves, to be self-sufficient is in early infancy. Begin with the baby and promise him and yourself that as long as you both shall live you will do nothing for him that he can do for himself.

Tie the baby's ball to his carriage or his crib and teach him to pull it back to himself when he tosses it over the side. If you let him throw it for you to chase he will love the game and keep you at it if not by fair means, by foul, yelling and kicking until you give in and fetch for him again.

THAT IS A FAIR SAMPLE of what happens when one does for children what they can be trained to do for themselves. When a child falls as he struggles to learn to walk one longs to run to him, pick him up, dust him off and comfort him with croonings and soft love-murmurings. If one does it is so much the worse for the child. He learns to lie down comfortably when he stumbles and wait for help which is certain to come. That lesson feeds his spirit with feebleness, fear and failure.

It is inevitable that children fall as they struggle toward their growth. They will make few efforts that do not meet with failure at the start. A child will need advice, encouragement, sometimes even a lift, but beware of taking over his job and doing it for him. You cannot give him strength, nor courage, nor anything that will stay with him permanently. You can stimulate him to growth and spiritual power if you will and thereby put him everlastingly in your debt, and you will rear a man (or a woman) worthy the name.

THERE IS NO SENSE in making life difficult for children while we train them to help themselves to grow and to function as people. The washrag the small child uses can be sized to his measure; so can his cake of soap. The pail the little girl uses to scrub her doll's kitchen can be of papier-mache, light and efficient. The tools children use, the furniture as well as the family experiences can, and should be, adjusted to the child's needs. But after that he ought to be given a chance to do for himself.

Fond parents and relatives enjoy doing for children, enjoy providing pleasures for them, smoothing their way. Some of this is justified and necessary, for children must know that they are loved and wanted, but there is a limit beyond which it is dangerous to go. Keep the child's tasks sacred to himself and so allow his growth to proceed with speed and sureness.

Don't be afraid to let children work. They have great energy, wells of power, waiting to be released for purposes of growth. Encourage them to try new experiences, to carry out the idea they cherish and keep hands off while they struggle through. Then be loud and lavish with your praise. A self-helpful child is the crown of successful parenthood.

Thrift in Cooking

By George Rector

TODAY we will discuss the changing of left-over foods into appetizing dishes, for I feel that most housewives, in this present day and age, are not averse to practicing thrift in their cooking.

Whenever there is a small quantity of cooked meat on hand and you would like to extend it into a tasty dish for the family, here is one way to go about it. Beef, lamb, veal, ham or chicken may be used.

BAKED STUFFED GREEN PEPPERS

Six green peppers, one and one-half cups cooked meat, chopped fine; one onion, finely chopped; two tablespoons butter; one and one-half cups fine bread crumbs; stock or milk to moisten; one-half teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon pepper, buttered bread crumbs.

Select large peppers. Wash in cold water and cut off slice from stem end. Remove all seeds and white pulp from seams. Drop peppers into boiling salted water, remove from heat and let stand 10 minutes to blanch. Meanwhile cook onion colorless in butter; add meat, bread crumbs and seasonings and mix well. Add just enough stock or milk to moisten, using about one cupful. If you fancy a highly seasoned filling add any one of the following to suit your taste: Worcestershire sauce, cayenne pepper, chili powder, curry powder, celery salt or garlic. Drain blanched peppers and fill with mixture. Cover top with buttered bread crumbs and bake in moderate oven (375 degrees) about 15 minutes.

When the pantry is bare of cooked meat and you have to start from scratch, call the butcher and have him grind one-half pound of lean beef and one-half pound of shoulder of pork together and rush it right over. The procedure of this recipe is different from the above, but then, I believe, you will find them both good.

STUFFED PEPPERS

● SIX GREEN PEPPERS, one-half pound chopped beef, one-half pound chopped pork, one tablespoon grated onion, one tablespoon parsley, finely chopped; one-half cup chili sauce, two tablespoons olive oil, one-fourth cup bread crumbs, one-fourth cup grated cheese, salt and pepper.

Wash peppers, cut off slice from stem end and remove all seeds and white pulp. Mix balance of ingredients together and fill peppers with mixture. Place peppers in a deep baking pan and add enough cold water to half cover them. Bake in a moderate oven (325 degrees) 40 to 50 minutes.

—o-o—

SUCCOTASH AU GRATIN

Two cups corn kernels, one cup green Lima beans, salt and pepper, two cups cream sauce, buttered bread crumbs, grated American cheese.

—o-o—

Corn may be cut from the cob or the whole kernelpack which is purchased in cans may be used. Combine corn with cooked lima beans, season with salt and pepper and add to hot cream sauce. Turn into shallow baking dish and cover entire surface with buttered bread crumbs. Sprinkle grated cheese over the top and bake in a moderate oven until lightly browned.

● MELT ONE-FOURTH CUP of butter and stir in one cup of bread crumbs, mixing gently until butter is absorbed. To be used as a filling and top for all scalloped dishes or a topping for an au gratin dish when combined with cheese.

ESCALLOPED VEGETABLES

Two cups cooked vegetables, vegetable water, salt and pepper, one cup dry bread crumbs, two cups buttered bread crumbs.

Asparagus, tomatoes, string beans, carrots and peas are just a few suggestions for an escalloped vegetable dish. Have ready a well buttered baking dish and cover bottom with dry bread crumbs. Arrange a layer of cooked vegetable on top, moistening with a little of the vegetable water. Season with salt and pepper. Now a layer of buttered bread crumbs, using half, and another layer of vegetable, seasoned with salt and pepper. Cover top with remaining buttered crumbs and bake in a moderate oven about 30 minutes.

—o-o—

● RICE IS AN ITEM which all too often becomes a leftover. Well, here is a tasty way to utilize it.

BAKED RICE AND HAM CROQUETTES

Two tablespoons butter, two tablespoons flour, two cups scalded milk, salt and pepper, one and one-half cups boiled rice, one and one-half cups cooked ham, ground; one tablespoon parsley, finely chopped; one teaspoon grated onion, one egg.

Melt butter, blend in flour and gradually add hot milk, stirring constantly until boiling point is reached. Let boil two minutes. Season with salt and pepper and add balance of ingredients and mix thoroughly. Shape mixture into cones or four-inch rolls and arrange on well greased baking pan. Bake in hot oven (425 degrees) about 30 minutes.

A good way to use left-over cooked vegetables is to work them into a tasty au gratin or an escalloped dish. And don't forget they hold possibilities for golden crispy fritters.

SUCCOTASH AU GRATIN

Two cups corn kernels, one cup green Lima beans, salt and pepper, two cups cream sauce, buttered bread crumbs, grated American cheese.

—o-o—

Corn may be cut from the cob or the whole kernelpack which is purchased in cans may be used. Combine corn with cooked lima beans, season with salt and pepper and add to hot cream sauce. Turn into shallow baking dish and cover entire surface with buttered bread crumbs. Sprinkle grated cheese over the top and bake in a moderate oven until lightly browned.

—o-o—

MELT ONE-FOURTH CUP of butter and stir in one cup of bread crumbs, mixing gently until butter is absorbed. To be used as a filling and top for all scalloped dishes or a topping for an au gratin dish when combined with cheese.

ESCALLOPED VEGETABLES

Two cups cooked vegetables, vegetable water, salt and pepper, one cup dry bread crumbs, two cups buttered bread crumbs.

Asparagus, tomatoes, string beans, carrots and peas are just a few suggestions for an escalloped vegetable dish. Have ready a well buttered baking dish and cover bottom with dry bread crumbs. Arrange a layer of cooked vegetable on top, moistening with a little of the vegetable water. Season with salt and pepper. Now a layer of buttered bread crumbs, using half, and another layer of vegetable, seasoned with salt and pepper. Cover top with remaining buttered crumbs and bake in a moderate oven about 30 minutes.

—o-o—

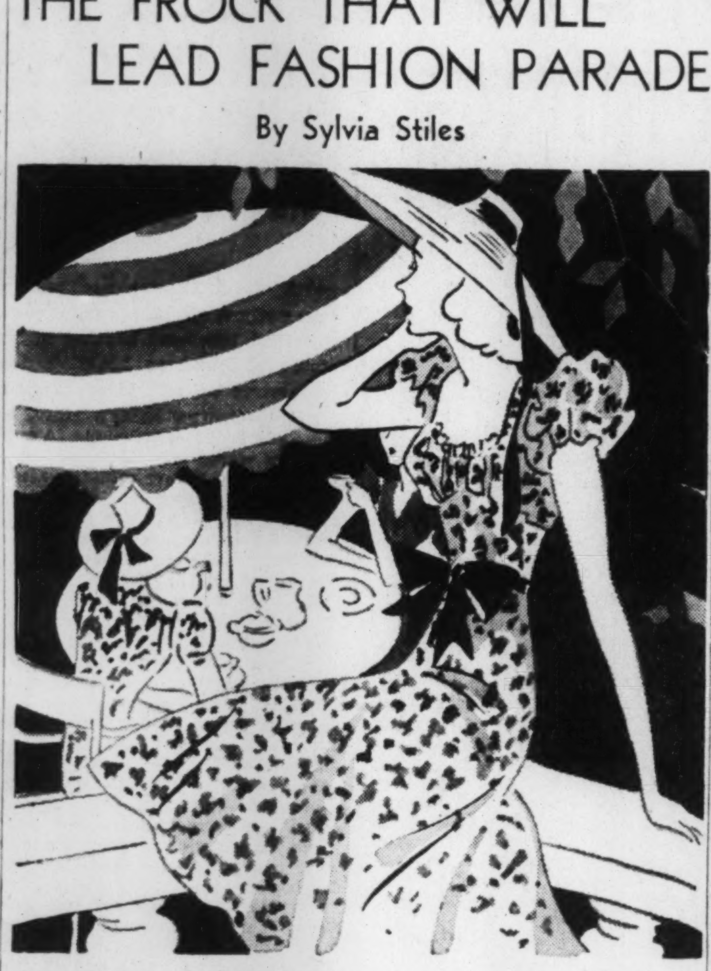
BAKED RICE AND HAM CROQUETTES

Two tablespoons butter, two tablespoons flour, two cups scalded milk, salt and pepper, one and one-half cups boiled rice, one and one-half cups cooked ham, ground; one tablespoon parsley, finely chopped; one teaspoon grated onion, one egg.

Melt butter, blend in flour and gradually add hot milk, stirring constantly until boiling point is reached. Let boil two minutes. Season with salt and pepper and add balance of ingredients and mix thoroughly. Shape mixture into cones or four-inch rolls and arrange on well greased baking pan. Bake in hot oven (425 degrees) about 30 minutes.

THE FROCK THAT WILL LEAD FASHION PARADE

By Sylvia Stiles



"A STRIKING FEATURE IS THE LOW NECKLINE, GRACEFULLY SHIRRED AND FLATTERING."

EVERY season one definite type of costume leads the fashion parade. This summer's favorite in St. Louis, judging by early indications will be very cool, exceedingly feminine and frankly pretty. It has a charm of other days and provides sufficient of the "little-girl" theme of the springtime to carry on the youthful vogue. Several St. Louisans have chosen versions of the costume which is sketched and you'll be seeing them at the head of the summer style promenade before many days have passed.

The frock pictured happens to be a daintily flowered white silk crepe but it would be equally as smart of a sheer cotton. In addition to the floral motif which is significant of the trend the most striking feature is the low neckline, gracefully shirred and flattering. The wide fitted waistband also is characteristic of the current mode, while the wide hemline is a "must" of the season. Only a wide-brimmed hat looks well with such a dress—and if the hat has long ribbon streamers, so much the better.

WE'VE BEEN hearing rumors of a new silhouette which has the skirt fullness concentrated at the back. Since the theme recently was indorsed by several leading Parisian designers, it was not scheduled for acceptance in the United States before autumn. However, the new May Queen of Webster College, Miss Marjorie Belt, has proved herself to be a fashion-wise young woman by adopting the style. The lovely white frock of imported French tulle which she wore for the festivities on Friday had the new skirt—tight across the front and cut very circular and full at the back. The "sweetheart" type of neckline, puffed sleeves and crushed girdle of the tulle contributed to make this a most graceful and becoming dress. She carried gardenias and larkspurs, matching the flowers of which the crown was covered. Incidentally her little flower girl wore the same costume in miniature.

SINCE THIS May day promenade has become a veritable fashion parade, the crowd witnessing the ceremonies always gets several important style pointers. In addition to the Queen's significant frock, there were arresting color schemes worth remembering. For example, Miss Rosemary Boehm, the retiring queen, chose a figured lime green mousseline de soie frock over matching taffeta, contrasted with sandals the exact shade of her armful of American beauty roses. Miss Jane Hyde, one of the maids of honor, selected yellow dotted net, the square neckline of which was outlined with cornflower blue daisies. She wore the same colorful flowers in her hair. A velvet ribbon bow of matching blue was placed at the front of the neckline, the streamers reaching to the hemline of the bouffant, three-tiered skirt.

For sheer elegance and subtle blending of colors there was the mauve pink marquisette frock of Miss Jean Raymond, with which she chose violet purple accessories. A wide, fitted band of lace was inserted at the waistline, while another lace insertion appeared above the skirt hem. Hyacinth blue organza worn by Miss Dorothy Henderson also introduced lace trimming in a wide "midriff" section as well as to adorn the edges of the redingote type of skirt. Miss Mary Margaret Koenitz, another maid of honor, won applause when she appeared in a picturesque hoop-skirt model of chartreuse net.

EVERYONE AGREES that this is a year of striking color schemes, so we are accustomed to unusual alliances. However, a visitor from the West Coast shows us how the hues are blended in California by wearing a vivid green linen jacket trimmed with violet as an accessory for a navy costume.

—o-o—

MOST GIRLS won't part with their long bobbed hair while snoods are in fashion. If they tire of their hair blowing about their shoulders it's very simple to tuck it into a fishnet or jersey snood and go blithely on their way. In a group of well dressed young women lunching recently in a hotel restaurant, I counted six with their hair in snoods, and all looked very trim and tailored. Typical of the trend was the plain banded navy straw sailor worn by Miss Esther Witt, the fishnet snood of dark wine red shade picking up the hue of accessories and holding a long bob securely. Those snood-like turbans advocated for summer wear are destined to be even more popular than the snood bandeaux of today.

—o-o—

ALL THE expert knitters are busy with their needles in an effort to finish one more little jacket of fluffy woolen. There's a fad now for these cardigans to wear with spectator sports dresses as well as with evening frocks. To represent the "last word" in style the jackets should look hand-knitted. The accepted length is slightly below the waistline. A matching turban is considered an important asset.

Reversible Jackets

REVERSIBLE jackets that do double duty, one side being acceptable for use with street costumes and the other having a more casual appearance, are advocated for summer wear. There is one boxy jacket that is made of colorful sharkskin which is lined with terry cloth. When the sharkskin side appears the jacket looks well for any informal need, but when the terry cloth shows its texture, the coat becomes a beach accessory. Combinations of solid colors and printed fabrics, and of two different printed materials also are evidences of the versatility of the summer wraps.

"Morality and Criminality Are Not Inherited"

CASE M-127: Gordon T., aged 14, is a juvenile delinquent.

"I was referred to you, Dr. Crane, in a last hope of changing my son's outlook on life," Gordon's father pleaded.

"He has been convicted of belonging to a gang of youthful thieves, and I regret to say that Gordon has stolen on many occasions.

"Perhaps I haven't been able to give him the attention which he deserved, but isn't it possible to change a youth, even though he has started along the wrong pathway?'

—o-o—

DIAGNOSIS: Yes, it is always possible, but not so probable. Criminality is never inherited. It is simply the mass of wrong habits that have been allowed to develop over a period of years.

Morality, on the other hand, also is not inherited. It must be taught our children by somebody. And one lession is not sufficient. It requires hundreds of lessons, year in and year out, before a moral individual can be produced.

In contemporary America, 51 per cent of the people do not belong to any church. They don't send their children to Sunday School. Yet the church is the only organization whose primary concern is planting a sense of ethical values in thee minds of our youth.

While the scout masters and the public school teachers co-operate in teaching honesty and good citizenship, the primary source of such instruction still is the home and the church.

How is your home? If you wantonly deprive your child of the right to receive moral instruction from your neighborhood church, then you have a double obligation to make up the deficit by greater home training.

And don't think you can salve your conscience by slipping your child a dime and sending him off to a nearby movie. The movies do not teach morality to the degree to which some producers would have you believe.

One educator recently announced that he had kept track of the 248 movies which he had seen during the preceding few years. These were also the better class of pictures.

And of the 248, he found that in 243, alcohol was openly and flagrantly used by the various characters, often including the hero or heroine. And they almost all smoked, heroines as well as heroes.

This is obviously beautiful advertising for the brewers and tobacco manufacturers, but certainly not good child psychology. Children are imitative creatures. They try to model their behavior after the adults who are held up before them.

The movies try to crawfish out of these valid criticisms by saying that they show only what the public wants. They also claim with great gusto that morality triumphs in the end, so the children can learn a profitable lesson thereby.

This is chiefly rationalization and sophistry. If children spend 59 minutes witnessing debauchery, alcoholism and implied adultery, the concluding one-minute of the happy ending will not efface that long exposure to wrong impressions.

In habit formation, quantity and duration are very powerful. The intelligent thing to do is send your child to a religious environment at least once a week where he can get 60 minutes of moral training.

Aluminum and Iron Pans

After washing the aluminum pan it may be dried just like a dish on a tea towel but the iron skillet will keep in better condition if it is dried over a slow flame on the stove. When all moisture has disappeared, let it cool and then pack away. It is less apt to rust if this method is used.

Shrimp and Cabbage Salad

Add to chilled cooked shrimps about one-third their bulk in finely shredded cabbage. Bind together with a heavy mayonnaise and serve on one large leaf of lettuce garnished with strips of green pepper. A delightful combination.

The SCREEN In REVIEW

By Ellwood Douglass

NO doubt about it, the purser will have his hands full this season. Lady tourists are going ashore in every banana port, and they're going alone, preferably at night, and there's going to be the devil's own time getting them back on board again. And who can blame them? Just look what befell Jean Arthur in Barranca.

What happened to Jean is set forth with warmth and color and even a bit of a sparkle at the Ambassador this week in "Only Angels Have Wings," a "big" adventure movie that has not only size but balance and discernment, or maybe the word is discretion. It's an aviation picture as full of crashes as a comedian's kitchen, and yet Director Howard Hawks contrives, in the fascinating diversion of crate-busting, hardly ever to lose sight of the main business of the show, the human conflicts of an isolated handful of very human beings.

They're quite a handful, this band of adventurers with whom Cary Grant is trying to establish a mail line inland from Barranca, fog-shrouded village cluttering a narrow swamp between mountains and sea. It's no place for a lady; emphatically, says Cary, not while he's around.

Tripping into the Dutchman's store, Jean Arthur, chorus girl in a tailored suit, is discordant as a parrot's homing. Her words fit in no better than her looks. Likewise her ideas about things in general, it appears very soon, when the first pilot crashes largely on her account.

But Miss Arthur seems to have a will of her own. She decides to stick around. And her determination to show Pilot Cary that, after all, she has some grounds for staying—in the counter-play of half-a-dozen other very ungirlish wills—makes a story reasonably worth the time it takes to see.

She and Grant are not alone in convincing performance. Particularly Richard Barthelmess and Thomas Mitchell, but also Rita Hayworth and men in lesser roles, Sig Ruman, Noah Beery Jr. and Allyn Joslyn, present characters with a touch of reality. There are handsome aerial shots over the mountains, done with the aid of Stunt Pilot Paul Mantz. And even the Latin music provided by Manuel Maciste is served without the Romberg touch.

The companion feature, "Some Like It Hot," is barely lukewarm for some minutes before Gene Krupa and his band begin to warm it up. It features also Bob Hope and Shirley Ross.

The Gorilla.

ONE of the funnier Ritz Brothers comedies, "The Gorilla" provides chills and chuckles at the Fox. Even those who prefer their Ritzes in small doses are apt to find them palatable in this ample, highly carbonated admixture of melodrama.

The Brothers are Garrity, Harrigan and Mulligan, private detectives, retained to guard Lionel Atwill, who has been receiving threatening notes from the "Gorilla." What happens to Atwill with such protection seems pretty obvious, but it may not be quite as dead open-and-shut as it seems; after all, Garrity, Harrigan and Mulligan are on the job.

On the stage Blackstone makes things appear and disappear, "saws a girl in half"—a new version of sawing a woman in two—passes an electric light over the audience, apparently without connection, suspends a girl in midair, likewise without apparent connection, and displays an eye to appearance in the choice and costuming of assistants. Put on his mettle in his first show Friday by a short-circuit which filled the stage with smoke from rubber insulation, he held forth inexhaustibly with card tricks and patter before the footlights—but never thought of making the smoke disappear.

LOEW'S offers Myrna Loy and Robert Taylor in "Lucky Night," with back-stopping by Jackie Cooper and Martin Spellman in "Streets of New York." The St. Louis has a pair of melodramas, "Bulldog Drummond's Secret Police" and "Homicide Bureau," and the Missouri has two features entering their third week's run, "Union Pacific" and "Rose of Washington Square."

One of the modern works on urban geography may have fallen into the hands of Fanchon & Marco, for their local manager, Harry C. Arthur Jr., announces a gesture in line with the trend of the times, toward the suburbs. Glamour, Says Lamour, Merely Romance 'Racket'

HOLLYWOOD, May 27 (AP).

MISS DOROTHY LAMOUR, in a form-fitting Chinese robe of white silk, was dressed to slink. She pouted her cherry red (No. 7 red, which is very red) lips and wrinkled her indefinite nose. Romance had been mentioned.

"That's all I ever hear these days," said she.

Herbie Kay and Dorothy agreed less than a month ago, via telephone, that they didn't want to be married any more. Since Kay filed suit for divorce, the gossips have had Dorothy engaged to half a dozen different men.

"It's part of the racket," offered Dorothy.

"You know how this glamour stuff is. They want people to think you're the same sort of girl off the screen as you are on it.

"But I have too much to do. I can't stay out late at night when I'm working.

"Honestly, even if I were inclined to be as romantic as they say I am, I wouldn't have time."

Dorothy, naturally, is now in for the No. 1-A build-up, whether she likes it or not. Romance is a very saleable commodity, especially when the subject is fair, free and four and twenty.

Does she like it? Does it excite her? Will she co-operate? In a word, and this is Dorothy's word: "No!"

Rooftop Theater To Open June 9

A NEW open-air theater, the Town Square, will open with Elmer Rice's comedy, "See Naples and Die," June 9 on the roof of the General Van Building, Euclid avenue and Delmar boulevard.

The play, a New York hit several seasons ago with Claudette Colbert and Roger Pryor, will be performed on Friday and Saturday evenings of three successive weeks. The story is of a pawnshop heiress and her titled husband, who become involved in an intrigue for the seizure of a Balkan state. Rehearsals are being held on the outdoor stage with a staff including Willard Holland, producer; Owen Miller, stage designer, and Thomas Murphy, production manager.

Players appearing in "See Naples and Die" are professionally trained stage and radio performers, with representatives of St. Louis nonprofessional groups in several minor parts. The cast includes Betty Wilkinson and Gene Marshall in the leads; Ann Bono, Warren Smith, L. J. Herzberg, Fred Elbrecht, Dee Wentz, William Marshall, Harriet Barnes, Joseph Biondo, Helen Anzulovich, Edward Thurman and Nellcey Pratte.

Scheduled to follow are "The Guardsman," by Ference Molnar, opening June 30; "Now You Chase Me," by P G. Wodehouse, opening July 21, and "Star Spangled" by Robert Ardrey, to open Aug. 11.

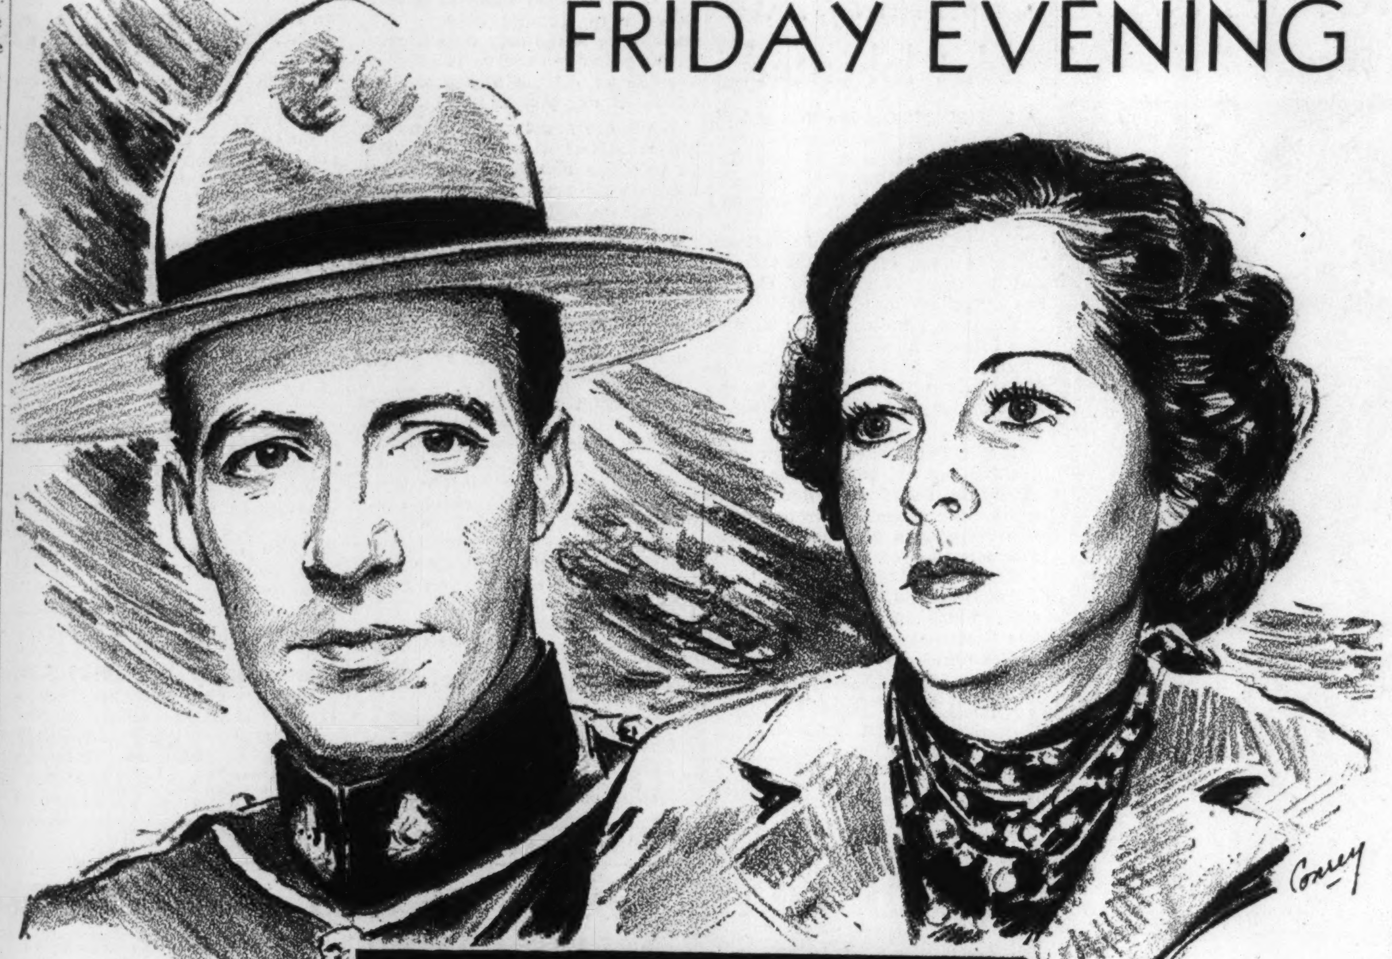
STAGE PLAYS AND MUSIC

MUNICIPAL OPERA TO OPEN FRIDAY EVENING



LANSING HATFIELD, MAKING HIS MUNICIPAL OPERA DEBUT AS JIM KENYON IN "ROSE MARIE."

THE WEDDING SCENE BY NORRIS HOUGHTON FOR "ROSE MARIE."

THE twenty-first successive season of Municipal Opera in St. Louis will begin at 8:15 p. m. Friday in the open-air theater in Forest Park with a revival of "Rose Marie." Nancy McCord, a favorite prima donna of former seasons, and Lansing Hatfield, outstanding newcomer, will head the cast.

Although the season will be ushered in without the fanfare of last summer's twentieth anniversary celebration, it is the opinion of the park management that the repertory of 12 works for this summer is better balanced than any previously presented at the outdoor theater.

Each offering, except one, has been a success in New York and as well on tour. They are representative of operetta, light opera, comic opera and lighter music plays, but operettas and light operas predominate.

"Rose Marie," "Lost Waltz," "Katinka," "Waltz Dream," "Firefly," "The Bartered Bride," "Mary" and "Song of the Flame" have won the approval of Municipal Opera patrons in other summers. "Queen High," "Babette" and "On Your Toes" are being seen for the first time in Forest Park, the last named in its St. Louis premiere. "Victoria and Her Hussar" will have its American premier to conclude the 1939 season in Forest Park. The operetta has scored a triumph in London, Berlin and Vienna.

—o-o—

WHILE the casts in quantity may not be as large as some of those in other seasons, the quality is indicated in the roster of such names, besides Miss McCord, as Hazel Hayes, Gladys Baxter, Rosemarie Brancato, Muriel Dickson and Helen Gleason.

Besides Hatfield, who will be seen as Jim Kenyon, other new faces to be seen in leading roles in "Rose Marie" are Lester Allen, comedian; Earl Oxford, juvenile singer; Norma Gallo, dancer, and Eleanor Searle, soprano.

Hatfield, who will sing in three other productions this summer, has been described as a "discovery" of 1938. A baritone, he filled 40 concert engagements during the 1938-39 season, including the Worcester Festival, Hartford and New York Oratorio societies. He was heard on many occasions on the air. He was the star of "Show Boat" at New York's Randall Island last summer. The past week he had the role of Daniel Webster in "The Devil and Daniel Webster," the first production by the new American Lyric Theater.

He was born in Virginia but moved to Hickory, N. C., as a child. He began vocal study while a student at Lenior Rhyne College, where he received his bachelor of arts degree. About four years ago Hatfield, in his early twenties, won the Woods Scholarship to the Peabody Conservatory of Music in Baltimore, where he received the Harold Randolph prize for outstanding achievement. Later he won a $1000 prize on a national radio contest and then finished first in a contest of the National Federation of Music Clubs. He has been soloist at the St. Thomas' Church, New York. His first appearance on the New York operetta stage was in "Virginia."

ALLEN, who will play the comedy role of Hard-Boiled Herman, last appeared in St. Louis as one of the stars in "Le Maire's Affairs." He has been seen in New York as "Planchet" in "Three Musketeers;" in the "Passing Show" and "Pajama Lady." He has been in vaudeville, burlesque, dramatic stock and even spent a season on a Mississippi show boat. He comes here direct from an engagement at Billy Rose's famous night club, Casa Manana, and prior to that he appeared in Australia for two and a half years.

Oxford will appear in the juvenile lead of Edward Hawley. He has been an important figure in Broadway musicals for some time. "Three's a Crowd" was the first legitimate musical play in which he played. He appeared in the final Follies produced by the late Florenz Ziegfeld. There followed roles in Ed Wynn's "Laugh Parade," "Life Begins at 8:40," and with the Theater Guild's only revue, "Guild Parade." When Rudy Vallee had his famous fight with George White, Oxford replaced the famous radio crooner. Oxford also has scored on principal radio programs.

As a child Miss Gallo, who will be seen as the treacherous Wanda, made her Broadway bow in "Cinderella on Broadway" and "Sally, Irene and Mary." Later she entered vaudeville with the famous Pat Rooney. She was featured on the legitimate stage in "Ramblers," "Padlocks" and "Some Day." She has danced at command performances in London. In September she will sail for Australia for a leading part in a revue.

Miss Searle has been engaged by the Municipal Opera for the entire summer. In "Rose Marie" she will make her St. Louis debut as Ethel Brander. A native of Plymouth, O., she attended college at Southern Lakeland, Fla. Later she attended Columbia University and sang there in musical plays. She has been soloist in New York churches, in festivals, concerts and with oratorio societies. She sang in Max Reinhardt's recent spectacle "The Eternal Road."

—O-O—

OPERA goers presented Miss McCord with unusual ovations for her work in two seasons in "Roberta." Last summer she scored also in her beautiful portrayal of the sister in the American premiere of "Lost Waltz." She made her bow at the Municipal Theater in 1931. She sings the title role of "Rose Marie."

Another important favorite returning to entertain opera goers is is Doris Patston, comedienne. Last summer her husband, Jack Sheehan, graced the giant stage with wit and charm. Miss Patston will give ample demonstration of her ability to provoke laughter in "Rose Marie" in the part of the pert "Lady" Jane. Beginning in 1930 she was at the al fresco playhouse for five successive seasons. Since her last appearance here she has appeared in musical plays in both New York indoor and outdoor theaters.

Opera goers will remember Robert Chisholm, baritone, for his interpretation of the role of Oscar Wilde in the professional world premiere of "Knights of Song" last summer. He will be seen as Sergeant Malone in "Rose Marie." A native of Melbourne, Australia, Chisholm began his musical education at the Royal Academy of Music in London. He was awarded the Rutson and Walker memorial exhibitions at the Academy. Among the musical plays in which he played the leads on the London stage are "Lilac Domino," "Maid of the Mountains," "Merry Widow," "Katinka," and "Blossom Time." He was brought to this country for a coast to coast tour on the Keith vaudeville circuit. Later he was selected to play the role of Shep Keyes in the operetta, "Golden Dawn." There followed top billings in "Sweet Adeline," "Luana," "Dessert Song," "The Three Penny Opera," and "Two Bouquets." He recently completed a concert tour of South America.

Frederic Persson, baritone, and Al Downing, character actor, are principals returning. Persson will be seen as Black Eagle and Downing as Emile la Flamme in "Rose Marie."

—O-O—

MUNICIPAL OPERA audiences of the 1939 season will hear what has been described as one of the best singing choruses in the 21 years of the theater. The 56 men and women have been going through the scores of the different musical plays for nearly a month. The dancing unit, always a popular feature, comprises 25 girls and 12 boys chosen for top-notch ability.

Each of the 12 offerings again is under the personal direction of Richard Berger. His staff is the same except for the art director, who is Norris Houghton, Princeton graduate, and Broadway's newest and youngest scenic artist. His work for the New York hits and advance publication of designs for the Municipal Opera promise color and originality.

Zeke Colvan will be responsible for the staging, assisted by O. J. Vanasse. George Hirst will wield the baton at the opening performance. His leadership during the last few summers has attracted praise. His associate again is Jacob Schwartzdorf. Ballet Master Theodor Adolphus and Dance Director Al White Jr. are here for the third consecutive year. Chester Herman and Phil Farley are stage managers.

—o-o—

THE score of "Rose Marie" contains musical gems which are the combined work of Rudolf Friml and Herbert Stothart. There are "Rose Marie," "The Indian Love Call," "Door of My Dreams," "The Mounties" and "Totem Tom-Tom."

Otto Harbach and Oscar Hammerstein II wrote the book and lyrics. The latter two were given personal introductions to St. Louis last summer, when two of their works were given first world performances on the outdoor stage.

The operetta was produced for the first time anywhere Sept. 2, 1924, at the Imperial Theater, New York, where it ran for nearly a year. "Rose Marie" was given in Forest Park in 1927, 1928, 1929 and 1931, and each season shattered previous attendance records.

The story, dramatic in detail, is laid in the Canadian Northwest. The romance centers around the love of Jim Kenyon, a young American prospector, and Rose Marie. Black Eagle, an Indian, accuses Jim of stealing gold from his land. Edward Hawley also loves Rose Marie, but is entangled in an affair with Black Eagle's wife, Wanda. The latter kills her husband after she is caught with Hawley, and then tries to place the blame on Jim. Proving Jim's innocence and Rose Marie's virtually loveless marriage with Hawley provide enough excitement and romance.

Tickets for the opening production will be on sale today at the Municipal Theater in Forest Park from noon until 7 p. m. Sale of seats is beginning a day earlier for the convenience of the thousands of persons who are expected to attend the dedication of the pergolas at 3 o'clock. The Municipal Opera orchestra, stars and chorus will participate in the ceremony.

'Father Damien' to Screen

The outstanding biography, "Father Damien," has been purchased by RKO from the author, John Farrow, a Hollywood director, who will direct the moving picture.

Now in its eleventh edition, the book tells the heroic story of the Belgian priest—subject of a famous Stevenson letter—who dedicated his life to the lepers of Molokai.

Filming Color in India

Alexander Korda announces that camera work has begun on "Thief of Bagdad," with major sequences to be made on location in India. It will be entirely in technicolor.

Worker's Life and Death In WPA Broadway Play

Patriotism and Pathos in One Lad's Fight Against Industry's Impasse; Old American Themes, Too, for New Lyric Theater.

NEW YORK, May 27 (AP).

THE WPA theater has been always singularly provocative and sometimes profitable on Broadway. From its dramatic indictment of bad tenement housing in "One-Third of a Nation," through its defense of Abraham Lincoln's democracy in "Prologue to Glory," it now arrives with "Life and Death of an American."

This is George Sklar's story, a biography that might belong to any man you would meet in the street. He was born a few minutes after our generation passed the year 1900. He was an average American lad, a boy with good ideals who blundered into only the customary troubles of adolescence.

His parents were respectable, Irish and poor. His father worked hard in a factory and tried to do everything for this growing son of his. Only when he found the young son stole some money from his mother's purse did he become severe.

The boy wants to rise above his father's position in a factory, wants to become a successful engineer and to get a college education

The father dies because he has been overworked in the factory. The boy has to quit his studies and follow his father as a laborer. The World War comes and he enlists as an aviator.

After the war he is one of the lost legion of ex-soldiers, unable to adjust himself in civil life again. He becomes a stunt flier at county fairs. He marries happily. And then the depression casts him out of his work. He is killed by police in the Illinois Memorial day tragedy.

That is the end of this American who didn't want to be trapped in the industrial impasse that killed his father and finally caught up with him

It is an interesting play, much in the both depressing and patriotic mood of "The American Way" (which tells the story of how a European immigrant flees from his native country to find new liberty on these shores) and it has an excellent cast. Especially good is the growing American boy, J. Arthur Kennedy, a Carnegie Tech drama school youngster who has much the flair of James Cagney and seems destined to go as far in the theater as he likes after this performance.

—o-o—

THEATRICAL pilgrims, poking their noses just a block off Broadway, find something a bit more cultural than the sightseeing busses, the chorus girls seeking work and such accustomed sights. Today they find the American Lyric Theater, which needs perhaps a bit of explaining.

The American Lyric Theater, with sponsors of wealth and prestige, first presented "The Devil and Daniel Webster," an operetta about Webster and his particular devil, personal debt. After that came "Susanna, Don't You Cry," a musical romance based on the music of Stephen Foster.

After those two, both lovely, they presented "The Ballet Caravan." The dance sketch that brought the house cheering was the story of Billy the Kid.

Billy the Kid was born in New York City and he went to Texas just at the close of the Civil War. He kept moving and killing, and he became the most notorious of outlaws because he wasn't particularly a tough guy; he was just a smooth kid who killed in desperation and he always won until that moment before dawn when his sweetheart gave the signal for the Marshal to come in.

That is the story of the ballet and character study of "Billy the Kid," and it is a graphic picture in dance, extraordinarily exciting as Eugene Loring designed and dances it.

THE songs of Stephen Foster, such heart-warming songs as "My Old Kentucky Home" and "Somebody's Coming to See Me Tonight" and three dozen more were damatized in "Susanna, Don't You Cry," by Sarah Newmeyer and Clarence Loomis.

The story was that of a family group, part Southern and part Yankee, moving westward shortly after the days of '49. There, towards San Francisco, is the promised land. But just as they are building towards the riches of the West belated news comes that the Civil W r has begun, families are torn asunder as, heretofore good pioneering friends, Yankees and Southerners rush back East to take their separate sides.

Their comfort is the song of Stephen Foster. He walks through this turmoil composing "Under the Willow She's Sleeping" and "Come Where My Live Lies Dreaming." And he leaves an unexpected heritage. After his death there was found in his wallet a piece of paper on which were scribbled notes for a song which he intended to write, but there wasn't quite time. The song was completed for the musical with the aid of others, still with Foster's original title—"Dear Friends and Gentle Hearts."

It is a sentimental picture of Foster's songs, a cameo picture of a man who wrote enduring melodies of the American home—who died in unsentimental Bellevue Hospital 75 years ago.

Civic Group Fills Roles For Its Opening Comedy

Three players have been added to the cast of "Call It a Day," which opens the second season of Civic Theater June 20. They include Robert Murdock, Jane Bruce and Bruce MacFarlane, who replaces Charles Barnhart in a leading role.

"Call It a Day," to continue for six evenings at the outdoor theater on Warson road, details the romantic and amusing activities of an English household on a day in spring. Besides those named the cast includes Lenore Griffith, Tommye Birch, Billie Lou Watt, Alan Green, Jane Owsley, Margaret Hart, Eugene Wood, Anne Reinholdt, Betty McGrew, Katherine Maze, Dorothy Gillan and Elm Joseph.

KING GEORGE'S address at the luncheon given for him and Queen Elizabeth by the British Columbia Government will be broadcast from Victoria at 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon on KSD and the WEAF network.

Singin' Sam, one of the most popular singers radio has known, will be heard on KSD regularly at 11:45 a. m. Monday through Friday, beginning tomorrow. Singin' Sam, whose real name is Harry Frankel, started in minstrels and finally became the featured comedian with Al G. Fields' Minstrel Show. Later, he won top billing in vaudeville. His start in radio was on WLW, Cincinnati, and his success there led to a five-year run on a national network during which his pleasing bass voice and easy singing style made him known to virtually all listeners. In the fall of 1936, he began a transcription series of which his programs on KSD will be a continuation. His home is on his farm near Richmond, Ind.

There will be another concert series of recorded fine music on KSD at 11 o'clock nights Monday through Saturday. Suzanne Mackay To Be Bride of F. W. Russe Jr.

Betrothal Made Known at Cocktail Party for 200 Guests—Wedding Planned for July.

THE engagement of Miss Suzanne Mackay, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Castleman Mackay, and Frederick William Russe Jr., was announced late Friday afternoon to about 200 guests invited for cocktails at the Mackay home, 3693 Lindell boulevard, ostensibly as a home-coming party for Miss Mackay and her sister. Miss Suzanne recently returned from Mexico, and Miss Lucie has been in New York for the winter, studying at the Art Students' League.

The wedding will take place the middle of July, probably at Christ Church Cathedral, with a small reception afterward at Mr. and Mrs. Mackay's home.

Miss Suzanne is a graduate of Mary Institute and Sweet Briar College in Virginia, and served as a maid of honor at the Veiled Prophet ball. Several seasons ago she made her debut, as did her mother, the former Miss Suzanne Cable, in the house where the Mackay family now lives. It was an old-fashioned reception and ball, patterned after her mother's coming-out party, with three generations of guests dining and dancing from early evening until early morning. The house, an imposing Victorian structure, its lawn inclosed by a wrought iron fence, was built by Miss Mackay's great-uncle and great-aunt, the late Mr. and Mrs. George Castleman (Lucie Cable), and the older generation of prominent St. Louisans has long known it as a scene of lavish entertainments.

Miss Mackay is a granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Mackay, and of the late Mr. and Mrs. Ben T. Cable of Rock Island, Ill., whose family built the Rock Island Railroad. Her uncle, Philander Cable, was for many years a member of the diplomatic corps.

Mr. Russe is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Russe, 5247 Westminster place, and a brother of Mrs. Frank L. Kluckhohn, Mrs. Arthur Lansing Prewitt Jr., and William H. and Lawrence P. Russe. He is a graduate of Country Day School and Harvard, 1932, and is a member of the University Club.

A grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Henry Russe of Memphis and of the late Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Lempriere Prince of Washington, he is a great-great grandson of James Booth, first Chief Justice of Delaware, whose son, James Booth Jr., was that State's second Chief Justice. Mr. and Mrs. Alvan J. Goodbar are his uncle and aunt.

About Aug. 1, Mr. and Mrs. Mackay and Miss Lucie will depart for Rye Beach, N. H., to occupy their summer home.

Social Activities For Decoration Day

WITH Decoration day on Tuesday, social St. Louisans are spending a long week-end at country clubs, farms nearby, or using the four-day holiday to visit summer resorts in Michigan. As the first activity of the week-end at the St. Louis Country Club, members attended the weekly dinner dance last night. The largest party, was given by Mr. and Mrs. Tom K. Smith, and Mr. and Mrs. Elzey Roberts, for their debutante niece, Miss Becky Wells, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Erastus Wells. She presided at a long table, decorated with spring flowers, which was set up on the screened porch. The club will have a buffet supper tonight and on Tuesday there will be a bar lunch in the tap room for men. That evening a family buffet supper is planned for after 7 o'clock.

The swimming pool was opened for the season yesterday at Bellerive County Club and last night at 8 o'clock the first dinner dance was held on the outdoor floor. Tonight there will be a buffet supper, and Tuesday's program includes a golf tournament, dinner at 6:30 o'clock and an illuminated exhibition of swimming and diving at 8 o'clock.

The main event of the week-end at Algonquin Golf Club was the supper dance last night from 9:30 to 1:30 o'clock. Spring flowers ornamented the tables. On Decoration day there will be music at the swimming pool during the day and a special dinner in the evening.

Mr. and Mrs. James Lee Johnson are having a house party at St. Albans for the following: Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Levering Whittemore Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Wright Pettus and Mr. and Mrs. John Crago.

Georgia Morse To Be Married To N. E. Heitner

Engagement Announced at Luncheon at Home of Bride-elect's Mother—Wedding to Be in November.

YESTERDAY, a little more than three weeks after the marriage of her twin sister, announcement was made of the engagement of Miss Georgia Riddle Morse, and Norman E. Heitner. Miss Dorothy Riddle Morse was married May 2 to Dayton Henry Mudd Jr.

The bride-to-be is a daughter of Mrs. Edward A. Morse, at whose home, 5207 Lindell boulevard, the announcement luncheon was given, presumably in honor of Mrs. Mudd, who returned Sunday from her wedding trip and who will live in Quincy, Ill. Miss Morse is a granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. George T. Riddle and of the late Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Morse. Her father died several years ago. She was graduated in 1934 from Mary Institute, and made her debut with Mrs. Mudd at a home reception in the fall of 1935, after attending Washington University for a year. She was a maid of honor at the Veiled Prophet ball her first season out.

Mr. Heitner is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry J. Heitner, 5745 Lindell boulevard, and a grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. Louis H. Waltke. He is a graduate of Concordia College, Fort Wayne, Ind., where he combined preparatory and junior college work, and of Washington University, where he became a member of Phi Delta Theta. His clubs are Bellerive Country and the Missouri Athletic Association.

The betrothal was announced by means of cards attached to imitation engagement rings concealed under gardenia corsages which surrounded the large centerpiece of white flowers. White satin ribbons were stretched from the corsages to each place. Guests were Miss Virginia Brown, Miss Isabel Moberly, Miss Olive Culbertson, Miss Mary Elizabeth Musick, Miss Chauncey Gallaway, Mrs. William F. The wedding will take place early in November.

Junior League Has Anniversary Party

MEMBERS of the St. Louis Junior League, having promised to honor its founders at an entertainment to celebrate the league's silver jubilee, proceeded to "cast precedent to the winds and provide food, fun and foolishness" at the annual play day Friday at the St. Louis Country Club. Statistical reports on league progress, usually saved for the annual meeting, were shelved in favor of a few off-the-record statements by Mrs. Alfred Brown, president, highlights of the recent national league conference in Memphis, presented by Mrs. George McDougall Weeks Jr., and an amusing floor show in which both cast and crew satirized themselves and fellow members.

The party began with luncheon, served buffet style to about 300 guests seated not only at tables in the three dining rooms and inclosed porch, but in lounges and outdoors. Five of the 12 original members—Mrs. John Brodhead, the former Miss Dorothy Farish; Miss Georgia Elliot, Mrs. Walter Fischel, who was Miss Virginia Elliot; Mrs. Edward Gillette Hotchkiss, who was Miss Jane Taylor, and Mrs. Thomas S. McPheeters, formerly Miss Frances Filley—and Mrs. George Gellhorn, one of the two honorary members, sat with chapter officers at the head table, were toasted by the membership and decorated with gardenias in honor of the occasion. Mrs. Fischel, responding for the founders, thanked the league for "letting us found you" and expressed pride in their many "daughters."

Luncheon over, the show was staged on the terrace, the walls of the club for backdrop, and the curtain a frilled net arrangement purloined out of someone's house and carried across the stage when the occasion demanded by Mrs. Lee Niedringhaus, dressed in red wig, bowler hat, black face make-up, a man's dress shirt over shorts, and a pair of cast-off shoes belonging to Robert Wadlow, the Alton giant.

By pre-arrangement, Mrs. Thomas C. Noel was master of ceremonies; a chorus of six, Mrs. Robert Sherman, Mrs. Thruston Pettus, Mrs. Edgar Rand, Mrs. Orrin Wightman, Miss Miquette Magnus and Mrs. Woodson K. Woods, did the dancing, and the crew, Mrs. Joseph L. Werner, Mrs. Garneau Weld, Mrs. Clarence Maloy, Mrs. Donald Bixby, Mrs. John Franciscus and Miss Adelaide Mahaffey, had been told slightly in advance

St. Louisans Attend School of Fashion In New York

NEW YORK, May 27.

IN this city where nine out of every 10 are aware of the latest in skirt lengths or the correct tilt of the hat, it is only to be expected that a School of Fashion Careers, to train girls for executive positions in the world of fashion, would be a success from the start—with pupils from all over the country running up a waiting list to enroll for the one-year course.

When the School of Fashion Careers, the first of its kind in the world, opened last year at 9 Rockefeller Center, there were three St. Louis girls among the pupils: Miss Janet Fuller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Fuller; Miss Eleanor Rench, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Turner Rench, and Miss Julia Wiener, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Meyer Wiener. Instructors were Julia Coburn, for many years fashion editor of the Ladies' Home Journal, and Tobe Collier Davis, who under the name of Tobe heads a fashion service catering to stores from Florida to Oregon.

Classes are held in modernistic rooms, with white walls, salmon-hued leather upholstery and indirect lighting, and from here the girls go out on field trips—which means anything from reporting what girls wore to the opening of the "Met" to a visit to a textile mill or a wholesale house.

The girls learn selling and merchandising by a two-month apprenticeship in a large store, and although jobs aren't promised to graduates, to date, nearly all of the pupils have been signed by big firms, before they even finish the course.

Miss Rench went from the school to a department store in Atlanta, Ga.; Miss Fuller to her father's Stix, Baer & Fuller, and Miss Wiener was picked by Macy's Training Squad—which means that she goes from one style department to another, being trained for a top-notch position.

Miss Wiener, who at the moment reports for work in the junior deb department, lived at the Vanderbilt Hotel last fall but recently took an apartment at 45 East Sixty-first street.

Orchids, photographers and last-minute telegrams are as much a part of sailing for Europe as the familiar "All's ashore that's going ashore" and deafening blasts of the ship's whistle. Mrs. Robert H. Keiser and Mrs. Alfred H. Murphy, seasoned travelers, boarded the Nieuw Amsterdam Tuesday, and after looking over their cabins, went up on deck where silver fox capes, stewards' white jackets and crisp new tweeds were edging their way up and down the crowded gangway. Finally the liner eased away from its slip in Hoboken, bound for Rotterdam, and started Mrs. Keiser and Mrs. Murphy off on the first part of their six-month trip.

Mrs. Keiser, who was Julia Chouteau Maffitt, first went abroad when she was 12, when her mother, the late Mrs. P. Chouteau Maffitt, took her to Egypt for the winter. Since then Mrs. Keiser has traveled to out-of-the-way spots such as the Khyber Pass or the Straits of Magellan, and this summer it's the Belgian Congo in Africa. She and Mrs. Murphy will sail from Antwerp on June 4 for the west coast of Africa, where they will take an automobile and drive through the Congo to Capetown. After a week in Paris, they plan to sail for New York on the Queen Mary Oct. 11. During the few days spent at the Barclay before sailing, Mrs. Keiser entertained several friends and relatives including Mrs. Edward H. Watson, the former Hermine Gratz, who stopped in for lunch Monday, and Mrs. John McGinley, formerly Claudia Matthews, who now lives in New Canaan, Conn., and her mother, Mrs. Skinker Matthews, who has an apartment in town.

Miss Frances Reyburn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Valle Reyburn, is leaving New York, after spending a week at the Junior League rooms at the Waldorf. She will go to Baltimore for a visit with Miss Anita Pressman before returning to St. Louis. Miss Reyburn may come East again in June with her grandmother, Mrs. Charles Fletcher Sparks, for the wedding of Nathaniel Randolph Reyburn, Mrs. Sparks' grandson, and Miss Reyburn's cousin. Mr. Reyburn, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Randolph Reyburn of Fairfield, Conn., and Miss Myra Watson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold E. Watson of Morristown, N. J., will be married June 23.

When the Queen Mary ran into fog Monday and docked seven hours late, Mrs. Wilson Linn Hemingway and her daughter, Mrs. Arnold R. White, were among the St. Louisans at the North River pier to meet Miss Miriam Hemingway, Miss Virginia Carter and Mrs. Atwell T. Lincoln. Mrs. Lincoln chaperoned the two girls on a four-month trip abroad. Also at the dock were Miss Carter's mother, Mrs. Emmet T. Carter, and her aunt, Mrs. George Norris Henson.

While in New York at the Waldorf, Mrs. White spent some time with her mother-in-law, Mrs. Aldo Balsam, and with her brother-in-law and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Burrell Gordon White. Mrs. Balsam has closed her apartment and has moved to Bridgehampton, L. I., for the summer and Mr. and Mrs. White (she was the former Audrey Betts of St. Louis) live in Alpine, N. J. Another one-time St. Louisan who lunched with Mrs. White was Mrs. Guilford Snyder, the former Marian Foley, who lived in Grammercy Park for some time after her marriage, but now has a house in Fairhaven, N. J. Mrs. Hemingway and her daughters returned to St. Louis Friday.

After traveling through Europe for the last 16 months, Mrs. Virginia Foster Limberg returned to New York two weeks ago and is at the Fairfax on East Fifty-sixth street. She was in Finland, Latvia, Estonia and Lithuania and stopped off for a visit with friends in Warsaw, before going back to Paris. Mrs. Limberg returned to this country to attend the graduation of her son, Charles, from Princeton. Her older son, Edward Limberg Jr., is one of the young men explaining exhibits at the Ford building at the Fair.

of their many duties, but members of the cast were drawn from the audience and provided with script they had never seen before. The league laughed uproariously as their favorite committees were burlesqued.

The crew got the first laugh. Dressed in an odd assortment of blue jeans, brown shirts and red wigs or cast-off evening finery, they swept the stage, set up and pulled down the few props, and took part in skits if the microphone failed. Mrs. Hall Walker played incidental music.

The telephone committee suffered first. With Mrs. Busch Magnus done up in negligee (she changed on stage) on one end of the wire, and a hidden committee member on the other, they forgot completely what the president had told them to do and concluded that "anyway it has probably been done." A clerk (Mrs. James Moss Hall) in the Open Door, league bookshop, offered a cook book or bed jacket to a prospective buyer as a gift for a bachelor, compromised by selling matches, and then was unable to add up the bill. The "Arts Without Interest" committee, Mrs. Isaac Orr, chairman, questioned the advisability of inviting King George, Hitler or Mussolini to a league function in the hope that she might be credited with preserving peace, and a called meeting drew an audience of one, because everybody, including the president, forgot.

The tea room committee fared badly. As a woman pleaded in vain for luncheon, a league fashion show was produced, with Miss Martha Love in bridal attire attempting to sing, Mrs. Maloy in blue jeans stealing the show, and the bride roller-skating off the stage. A shy applicant for membership, Mrs. John Wallace, was finally admitted by the entrance committee because she could rhumba, owned the right dog and had had the accepted number of marrage proposals.

The placement committee had a bad time. The girls who couldn't drive, wouldn't wait on table or keep books or model or sew, decided they could dance and didn't like work anyway, so would present the Junior League Follies. The chorus, in slinky slashed black dresses, paraphrased the song "You Made Me What I Am Today," to burlesque the league board.

After the show was over, winners of contests were announced. Mrs. Magnus was declared the most domestic, Mrs. Maloy the funniest (and was presented with a hat made from an angel food cake tin); Mrs. Brown, president, the most energetic, and Mrs. Lee Niedringhaus the most glamorous.

Mrs. James A. Seddon Jr. won the tennis tournament, held before luncheon, with Miss Phoebe Weed runner-up. Miss Mary Sullivan won the consolation tournament. Mrs. Samuel Fitzhugh Gordon was winner in the bridge tournament with a score of 4900; Mrs. Joseph Renard was second and Miss Eleanor Conant third.

The finale was the sealing of a large tin can, in which copies of the league magazine, yearbook, St. Louis publication called Topics, a photograph of the present board, copy of the first minutes, conference report and a miniature copy of the president's hat, were placed. The can is to be opened on the league's fiftieth anniversary.

Mary Institute Senior Class to Mark Thirteenth Anniversary of Kindergarten Opening

SENIOR Class day at Mary Institute on the morning of Wednesday, June 7, will celebrate the thirteenth anniversary of the first kindergarten class organized at the school. Mary Anne Christy, Nellie Jane Mellow, Marilynn Meyer, Sheila Shelp and Margery Stauffer, members of this year's graduation class, were enrolled in the first kindergarten.

Sheila Shelp, chairman of the program, assisted by Ashley Papin and Nancy Scudder, president of the class, has selected the anniversary as the theme for skits which will caricature experiences at school. Scenes will portray a singing class, an operetta practice, a teachers' meeting and a kindergarten of the future. Musical numbers will include a bus drivers' chorus given by Winifred Bryan, Betty Lou Custer, Hazel Garland, Ruth Ellen Latzer, Rebecca MacMillan, Nellie Jane Mellow and Caroline Putnam, and a sextet by Jeanne Billman, Winifred Bryan, Anita Glaser, Loraine Goldberg, Edith Longmire and Anne Neitherland.

The class history, which will open the program, was written by Clotilda Brown around familiar nursery rhymes, and will introduce the members of the class, the girls appearing according to the year in which they entered Mary Institute. Prominence will be given to the "old guard," members who have been enrolled in the class for 12 years and who include, in addition to the kindergarten group, Martha Howard and Ashley Papin. Other traditional class day features will conclude the program: The class will, written by Peggy Lansing; the class prophecy by Ashley Papin, Charlotte Parsons, Sheila Shelp and Emmalene Weichsel under the chairmanship of Anne Netherland, which will be presented in a fortune-telling skit; and the class day song, the music of which was written by Anita Glaser and the words by Anne Netherland, to be sung by all the graduates.

Commencement exercises will be held at 10:30 o'clock the morning of Friday, June 9, in the school auditorium. Chancellor George Reeves Throop of Washington University will present the diplomas; Mrs. Randall Foster, president of the Alumnae Association, will award the alumnae prizes, and Charles H. Garrison, principal of Mary Institute, will announce the school honors.

MRS. CHARLES O'NEAL

WHO is taking an active part in arrangements for a county fair and barbecue, to be given by the alumnae of the Academy of the Sacred Heart, Tuesday, at the home of Mrs. John L. Tuerney in Normandy. The entertainment will be given for the benefit of charitable enterprises conducted by the alumnae.

Elizabeth Gartner Wed to W. W. Lorch Jr.

MISS ELIZABETH ANNE GARTNER, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Gartner, 7436 Cromwell drive, became the bride of Walter William Lorch Jr. yesterday evening at 6:30 o'clock in a ceremony performed at the Gartner home. The Rev. E. L. O'Toole officiated. Mr. Lorch is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter William Lorch, 3887 Holly Hills boulevard.

The fireplace in the living room was banked with white spring flowers and greenery as a setting for the ceremony. Candles stood on either side of the improvised altar.

Mr. Gartner gave his daughter in marriage. The bride was gowned in white mousseline de soie and lace, her gown made in a period style with a lace yoke shirred to a high waistline. Sleeves were three-quarter length and puffed and the skirt was bouffant. Her fingertip-length tulle veil was caught on top of her head by a cluster of lilies of the valley. She carried a colonial bouquet of the same flowers.

Miss Lorraine Korte, the bride's only attendant, wore white mousseline de soie, her gown made off the shoulder with short puffed sleeves. She carried a colonial bouquet of pink, yellow and blue daisies and snapdragon and wore a cluster of the flowers in her hair. Benjamin Gutman Jr. attended Mr. Lorch as best man.

Mrs. Gartner's gown was of pink lace, and Mrs. Lorch wore pale blue lace. Both wore orchids.

A reception after the wedding was given in the Tower Room of the Congress Hotel. White spring flowers furnished a background for the receiving line and further decorated the room.

Mr. Lorch and his bride will go by automobile to Miami, Fla., and fly from there for Havana, Cuba, where they expect to remain a month. On their return they will live at 6330 Bancroft avenue, University Hills.

Attending the wedding from out-of-town was Miss Martha Redmond of Sedalia, Mo., who is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Gartner.

Gray Hair... at my age?
Certainly NOT! I can't afford it
CANUTE WATER solves my problem
If you have gray hair, simply wet it with Canute Water and allow to dry. A few applications, (all in one day, if desired), completely re-colors it . . . similar to its former natural shade. Attention only once a month will keep it that way.
Canute Water will not interfere with permanent waving or curling. The new color also withstands sunshine, salt-water and shampooing. Your hair remains clean and natural to the touch and looks natural in any light.
Canute Water is pure, safe, colorless and crystal-clear . . . and remarkably easy to use at home. No experience is necessary. It solves your problem so completely that you, yourself, will find it difficult to distinguish the re-colored hair from your natural.
SAFE!
No Skin Test Needed
"Canute Water is safe and pure. It has been used for over 25 years without injury to a single person. In addition to this remarkable record of safety Canute Water was also tested and proven perfectly harmless by a Noted Scientist in one of America's greatest Universities."

17 BOY SCOUT TROOPS TO SUPPLY OWN TENTS

To Take Equipment to Camp Irondale and Lion's Den; Season Opens June 18.

Seventeen of the 57 troops which have already made reservations for Camp Irondale and Lion's Den will provide their own equipment this summer. This marks the first time in the history of the St. Louis Council that scouts are attending Camp Irondale with their own tents.

The troops are 31, 41, 53, 71, 78, 102, 108, 130, 197, 199, 234, 249, 255, 282, 324, 333 and 353. Scouts of these troops will be under supervision of trained camp members of their own units.

Troops not providing their own camping equipment may rent cabin shacks or tents, with food served on the site, or they may establish tree houses or Indian tepees. To date 15 troops have registered for the Indian village at Irondale.

The summer camping season will open June 18 and continue until Aug. 20. There will be four two-week sessions at Camp Irondale. Lion's Den, near Seckman, Mo., will offer eight one-week sections. In addition, there will be a two-week camp for St. Louis Negro Boy Scouts at Lion's Den after the regular season ends.

Sixty-five troops were given the outstanding streamer award last Sunday at the close of the Camporee at Tilles Park. The South District, with 16 troops receiving the award, led all other districts.

Troop 102 of Flynn Park School will dedicate its Lone Camp at Flint Hill, Mo., to its former scoutmaster, Gilbert C. Turner, who died May 16, 1938. The date for the dedication will be announced later.

Seventeen members of Sea Scout Ship No. 1 of Webster Groves Lions Club spent last week end at Washburn's Point on the Lake of the Ozarks. Noel Chadwick is skipper of the ship.

Troop 280 of Our Lady of Lourdes Church has been awarded the Midland District's official flag. The winner was selected on the basis of the highest average of points obtained by each scout at the Camporee. Dr. R. E. Hennessey is scoutmaster.

GIRL SCOUTS.

The final meeting of the season of the North County Girl Scout Training Committee will be held tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock at First Presbyterian Church, 7200 Delmar boulevard, University City.

The Program Committee of the North County District will hold its June meeting at Cedarledge, the Girl Scout Camp near Pevely, Mo. The camp will open June 28 under the direction of Miss Georgia Flowers.

The South District Leaders' Association will have a barbecue Thursday at the Girl Scout Little House, 4253 Magnolia avenue. New officers of the association are: Miss Eugenia Henke, president; Miss Willie Herrington, vice-president; Mrs. T. E. Howery, secretary, and Miss Adelheid Peters, treasurer.

Above, diagram of the Squalus. According to the Navy's report, the main induction valve, supplying air for the Diesel motors, failed to close, although Alfred G. Prien, at the control board, said he pulled the lever that should have closed it, and a light indicated it was closed. At least one of the two secondary valves in the outlet in the Diesel engine room, operated from there, also was not closed. The ventilation system intake and exhaust, along with secondary valves in each of the seven compartments of the sub are closed and inspected by the diving officer in "rigging ship" some time before the dive. But the main induction valve is not closed until the second before the dive, when the Diesels are shut off and electric motors are started.

WHEN the submarine Squalus sank to the ocean floor in 240 feet of water 15 miles off Portsmouth, New Hampshire, last Tuesday, the United States Navy was able to rescue the 33 survivors quickly and efficiently because it had been preparing to cope with just such a disaster for 12 years. It was a triumph for the diving bell developed by the navy as a result of the S-4 sinking in 1927, in which 40 lives were lost. It was the first use of the bell for a disaster, and the first time victims in a submarine sunk at such a depth were rescued by a salvage ship.

The submarine, launched last September, went down for a practice dive but the main 31-inch air induction valve in the conning tower, operated by hydraulic power, failed to close. Water rushed into the Diesel engine room and also flooded other aft compartments of the ship. The diving officer attempted to reach the surface by expelling the water from the ballast tanks to lighten the boat. It took a steep upward angle, and more water poured into the stern, so that the men there were unable to scramble up the tilting deck to close either one or both of the secondary valves on the main induction pipe. Twenty-six of them were trapped and drowned. A seaman, through superhuman effort, closed the steel bulkhead door dividing the fore part of the ship from the stern. The power failed and the submarine sank, helpless, to the bottom.

Smoke bombs fired to the surface brought the rescue ship Falcon with one of the four diving bells the navy possesses. Four trips down with the bell brought up the 33 of the crew of 59 known to be alive just as the air began to get bad after 29 hours of imprisonment.

The round escape hatch over the torpedo room, from which the survivors emerged into the diving bell, is in the foreground.

A rescue worker is leaning over to pull the second man out. Note the taut expressions on the faces of the rescuers. As Blanchard stepped on the deck of the Falcon, the tenseness was broken by a cheer.

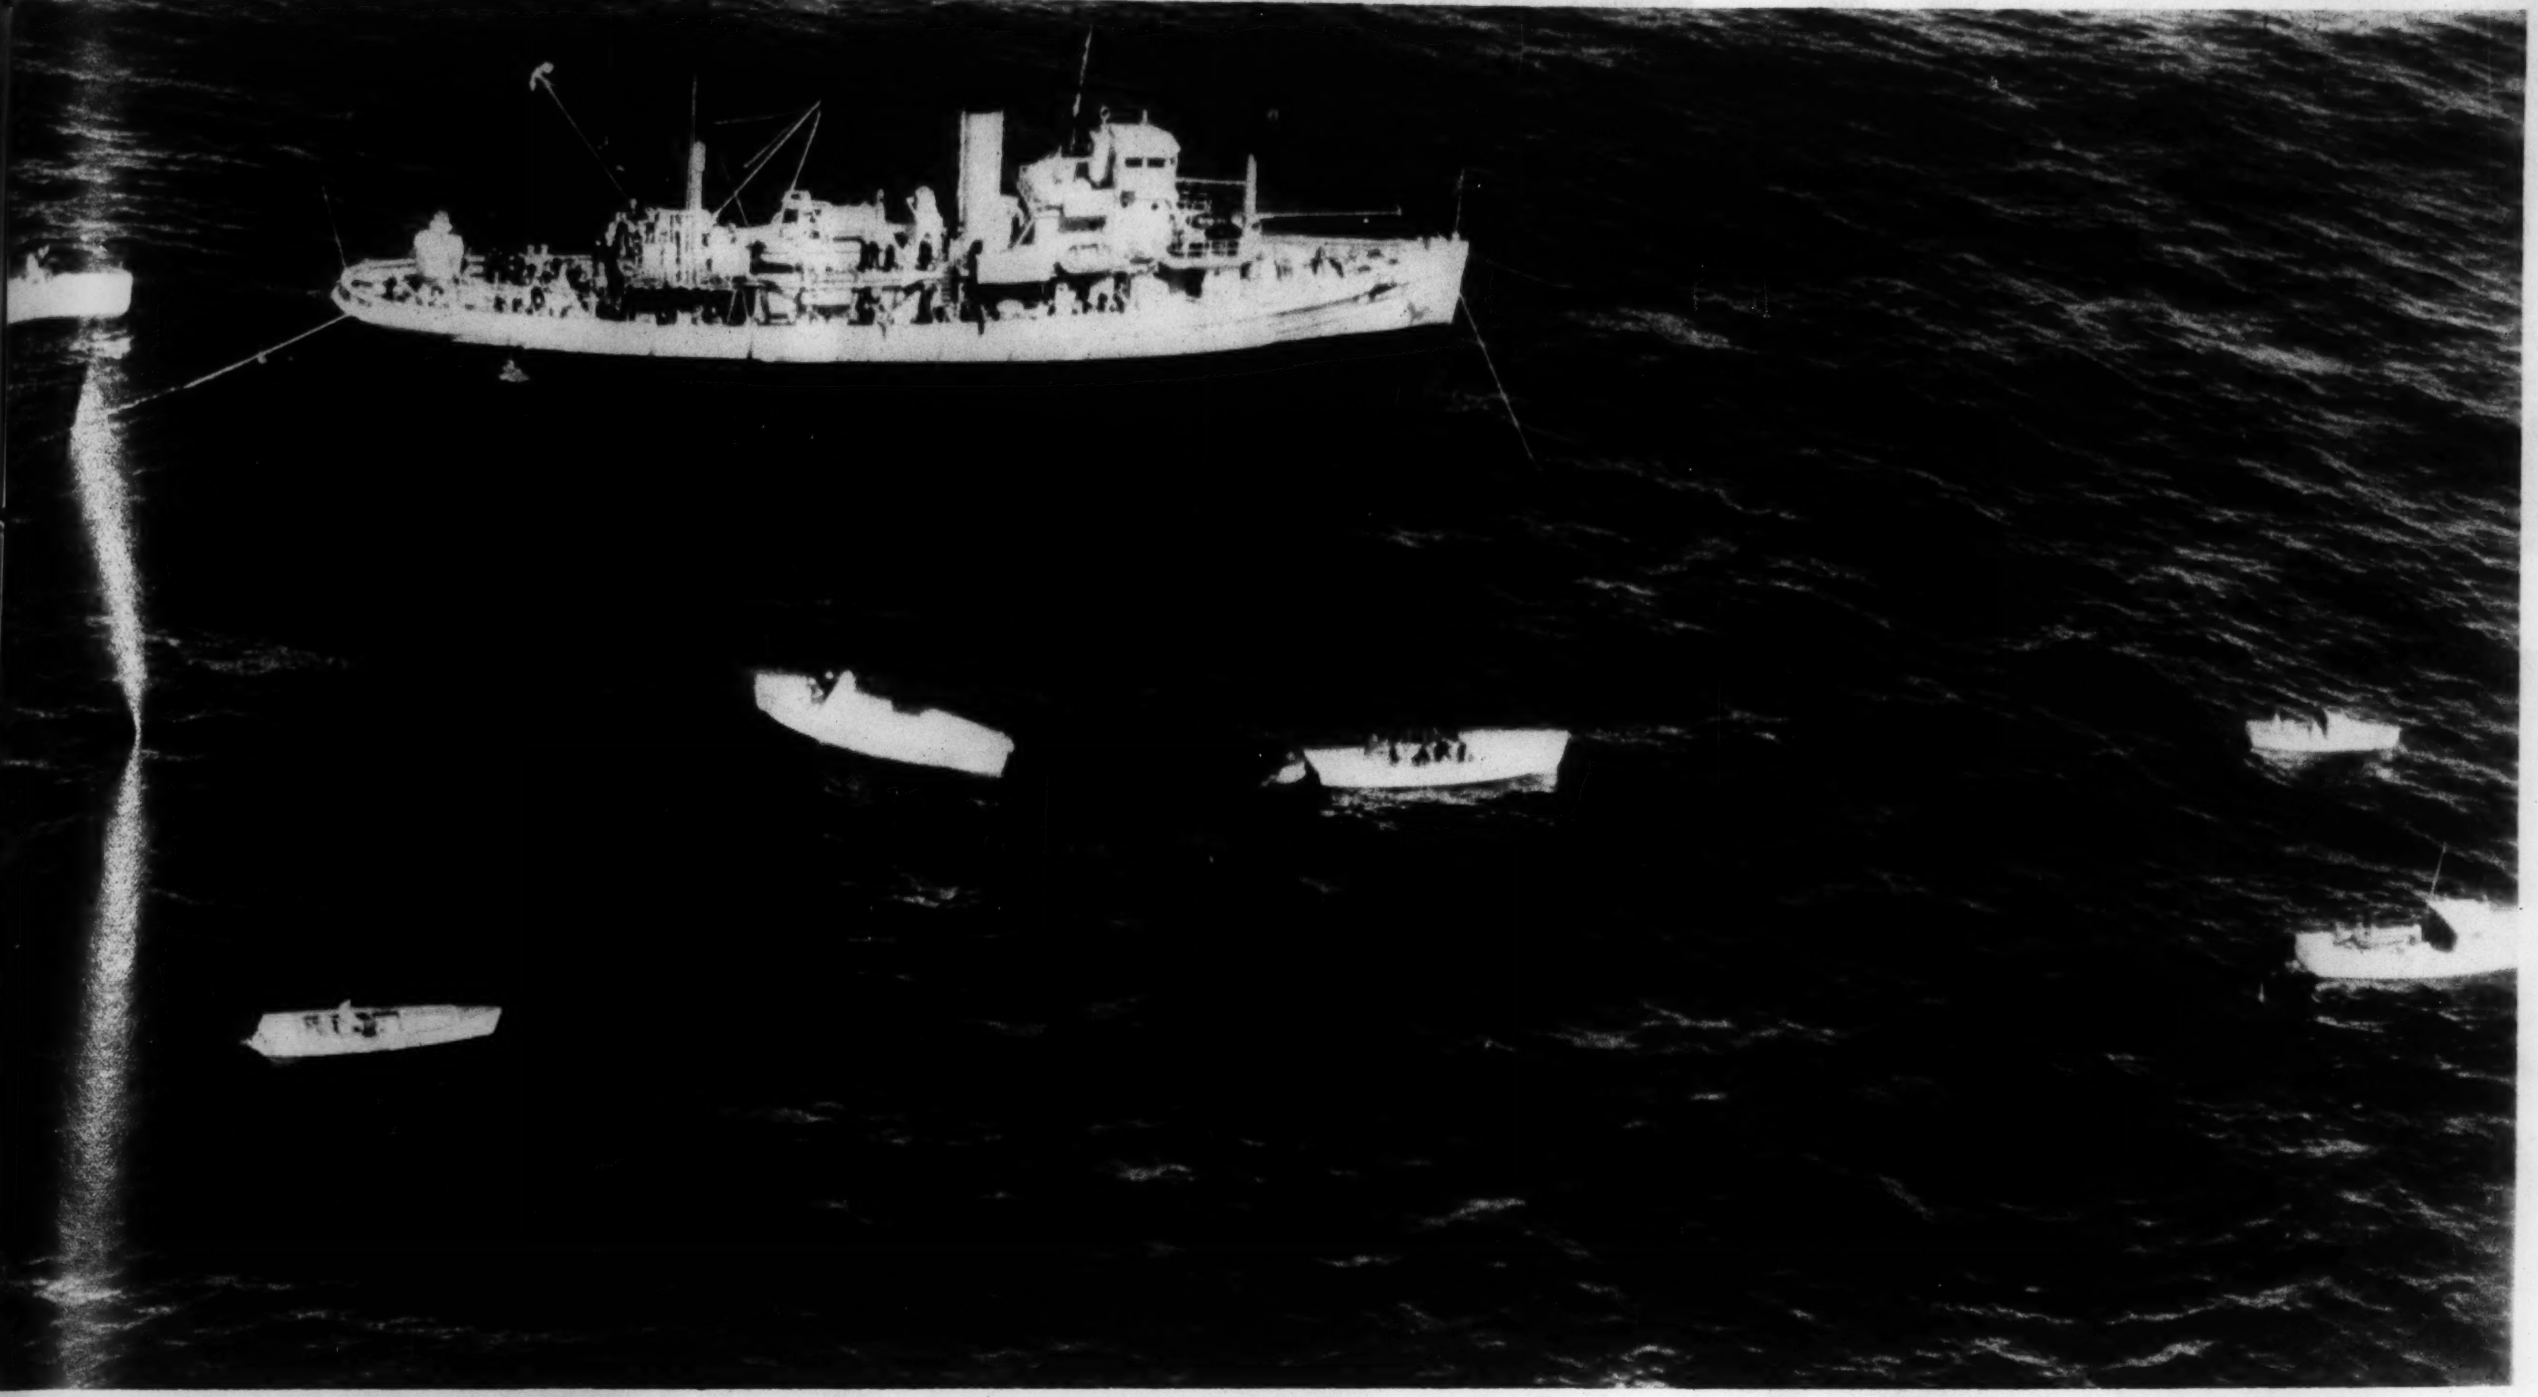
How the Living Were Rescued



General view of the scene where part of the crew of the sunken submarine Squalus was rescued. The navy rescue ship, Falcon, floats over the spot where the submarine lies on the ocean floor. On its stern is the big diving bell, to be lowered later by the derrick.

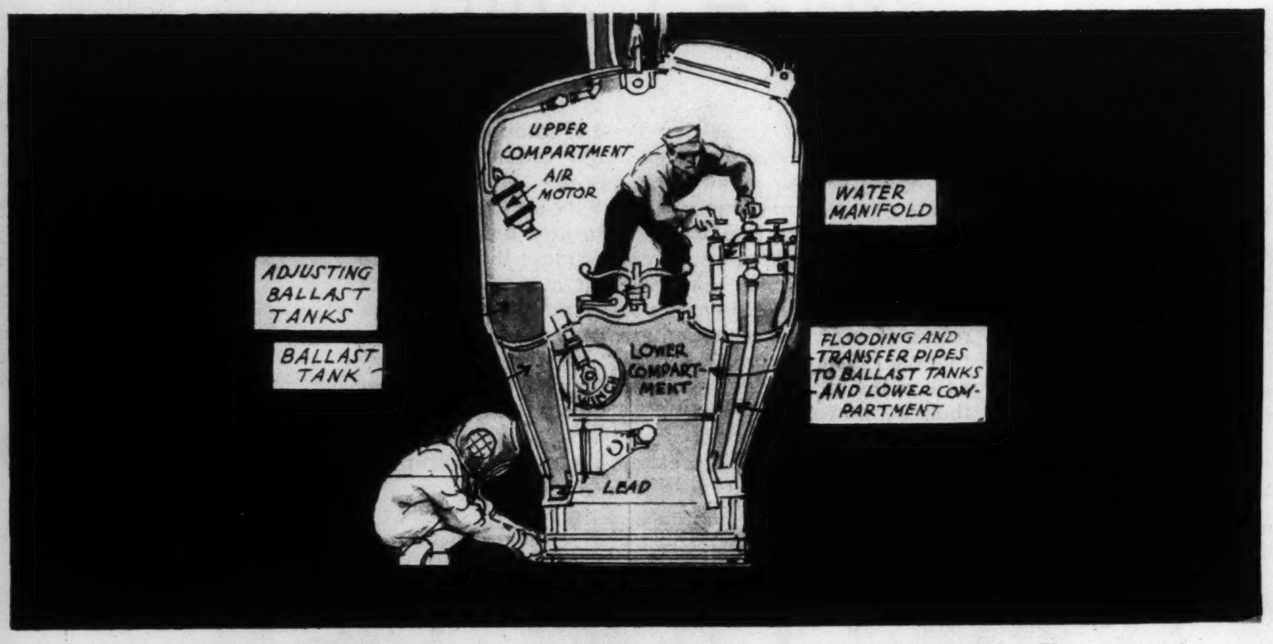
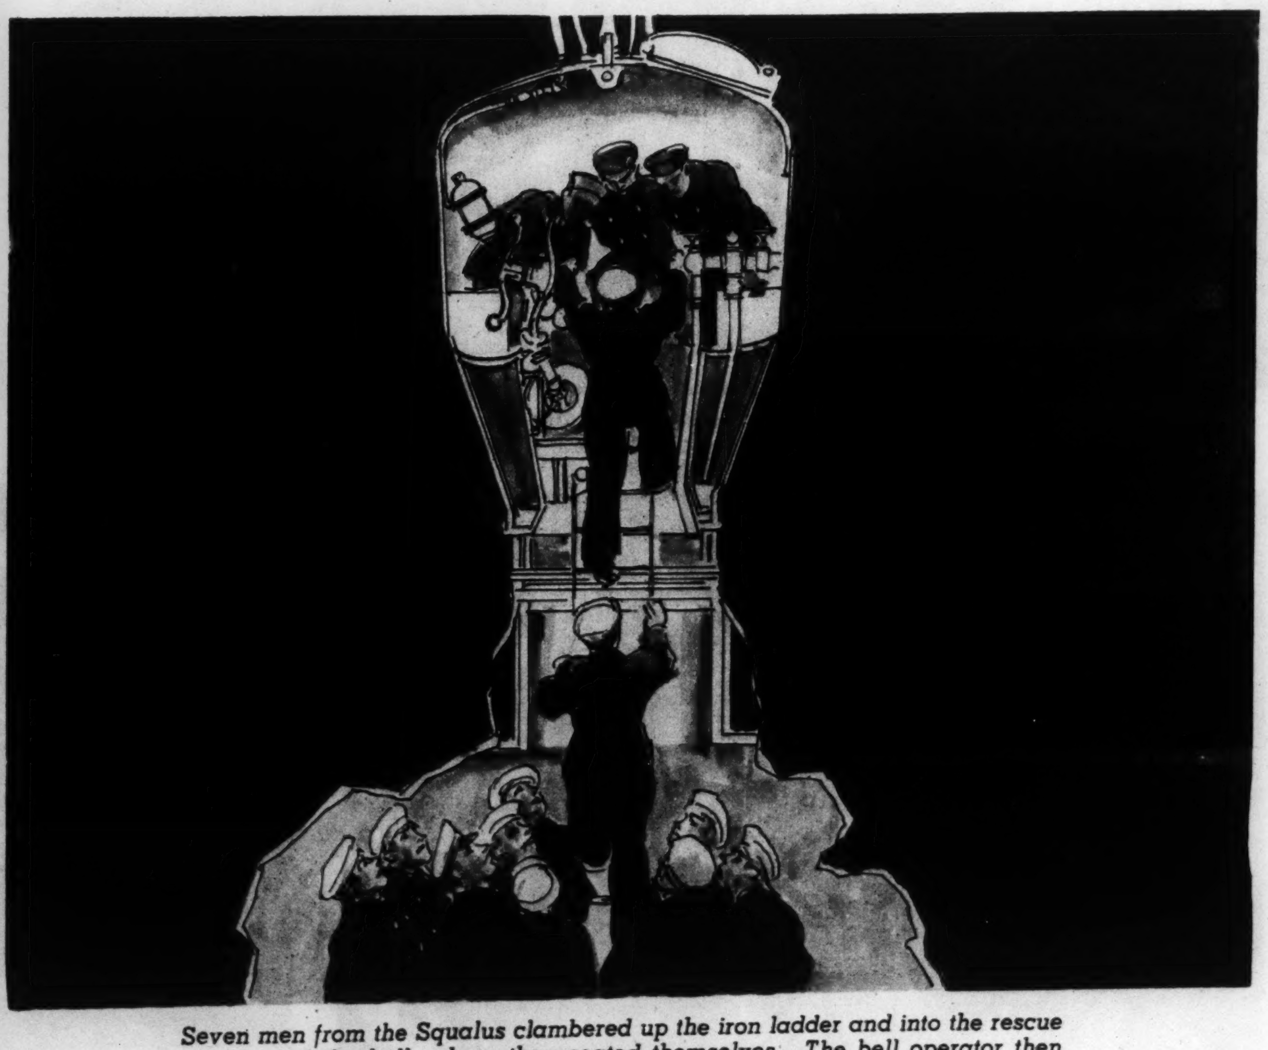
Here's how the rescue was effected. A diver made a cable fast to an escape hatch on the forward deck of the Squalus, one of four such hatches on the craft. This cable was fastened to a winch in the nine-ton diving bell, and guided the bell to the escape hatch as it was lowered from the Falcon. The winch, operated by the man inside the bell, took up the cable slack.



A rubber suction gasket on the bottom of the bell fitted over the raised rim of the hatch. The men in the submarine heard the gurgle of the air motor operating the bell's winch, then a dull clank as the bell settled on the deck of the sub. The man in the bell then manipulated valves to blow out the water in the lower compartment of the bell, and rearranged the buoyancy of the bell so that the pressure of the sea sealed it firmly down on the sub's deck. Turnbuckles inside the bottom of the bell were hooked to "cateyes" on the hatch rim. Then the bell operator opened the hatch of the bell and the escape hatch of the sub.



Seven men from the Squalus clambered up the iron ladder and into the rescue chamber of the bell, where they seated themselves. The bell operator then closed the two hatches and the bell was pulled up again.

(Drawings by William A. Byrnes, Post-Dispatch Staff Artist)

The bell was pulled up even with the deck of the Falcon. The seven survivors were helped out into fresh air, sunlight and freedom. They were rushed to a decompression chamber, so that they could be accustomed gradually to a normal air pressure, then were sent to a hospital in Portsmouth. Within a few minutes, the bell went down again. The process already described was thereupon repeated.

1. Reveille is sounded to arouse the sleeping scouts. The chimes are homemade, with mailing tubes for sounding pipes.

3. Scouts demonstrate their ability to make fire by friction as one of the morning competitive activities.

5. As competition goes on, the results, as well as other camp news, are "set" and run off on a mimeograph for the camporee newspaper.

St. Louis Scouts Make Camp

SOME 4000 St. Louis Boy Scouts gathered at Tilles Park, Litzsinger and McKnight roads, last week end for their annual camporee. After arriving with equipment and setting it in order on the camporee site Friday night, they spent Saturday demonstrating how well the various troops could adapt themselves to camp life, how able they were at numerous outdoor scout activities. Sunday was comparatively quiet, with religious services, get-togethers, and non-strenuous activities. Camp was broken Sunday afternoon. New note of the camporee was competition by troops, rather than by patrols represented by outstanding members. Pictures on this page show scouts during the course of a camporee day, are representative of scout camp life during the summer.

A nymph for a fountain, by Sheila Burlingame. The figure holds a sea horse in her hands.

THESE color photographs are of some of the two dozen pieces of garden sculpture by Sheila Burlingame of St. Louis which were recently exhibited at Cobblestone Gardens, Conway and Warson roads. Most observers agreed that the works, in stone, aluminum, terra cotta, bronze, iron and pewter, possessed a lyric grace and represented a new high point in Mrs. Burlingame's art.

YOUTH OF THE 'GOLDEN CIRCLE'

THIS is the "Golden Circle," a group of young Paramount movie players who have formed a club for mutual aid, comfort and fun. The word "golden" is a rather complacent reference to their youth and their prospects. They are, clockwise beginning from the arrow at the top: William Henry, Susan Hayward, Joyce Mathews, Robert Preston, Betty Field , Ellen Drew, Judith Barrett, Joseph Allen, Evelyn Keyes, Patricia Morison, William Holden, Louise Campbell and Janice Logan.

HOW TELEVISION WORKS

AT LONG last, television is here—at least for people in the New York city area. First regular broadcasts were made in conjunction with the opening of the New York World's Fair April 30, and now the National Broadcasting Company is telecasting 25 hours a week. Columbia Broadcasting Company expects to get started in July. Stations are being operated experimentally in Los Angeles and elsewhere. The first local demonstration was given at Radio Station KMOX May 9.

Although television is by no means perfect, experts say it is better now than radio was when the public started buying sets in 1920. So far, the images are small (7½ by 10 inches) and less distinct than movies. The programs, although interesting as novelties, lack variety and polish. The chief problem, how to make the television waves carry over long distances so as to enable national hookups, has yet to be solved.

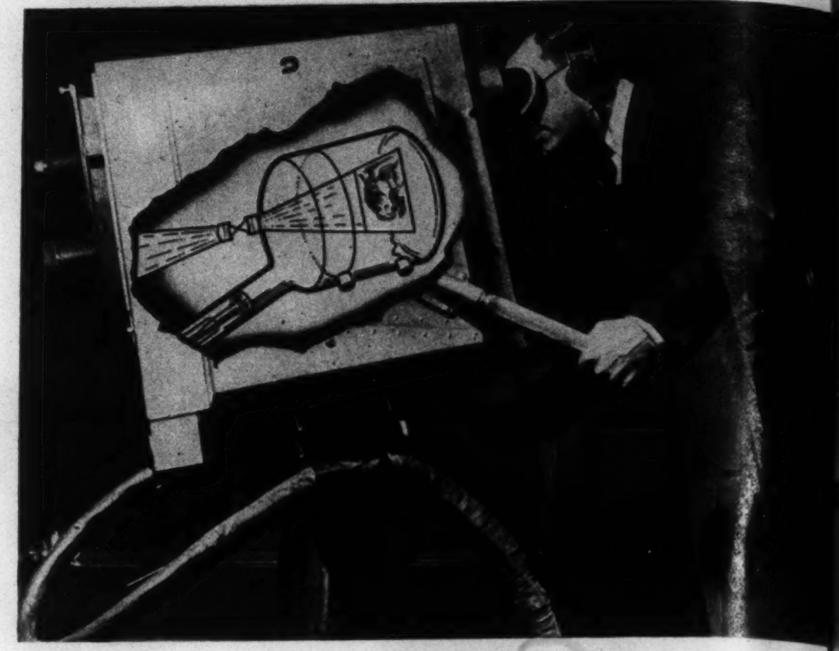
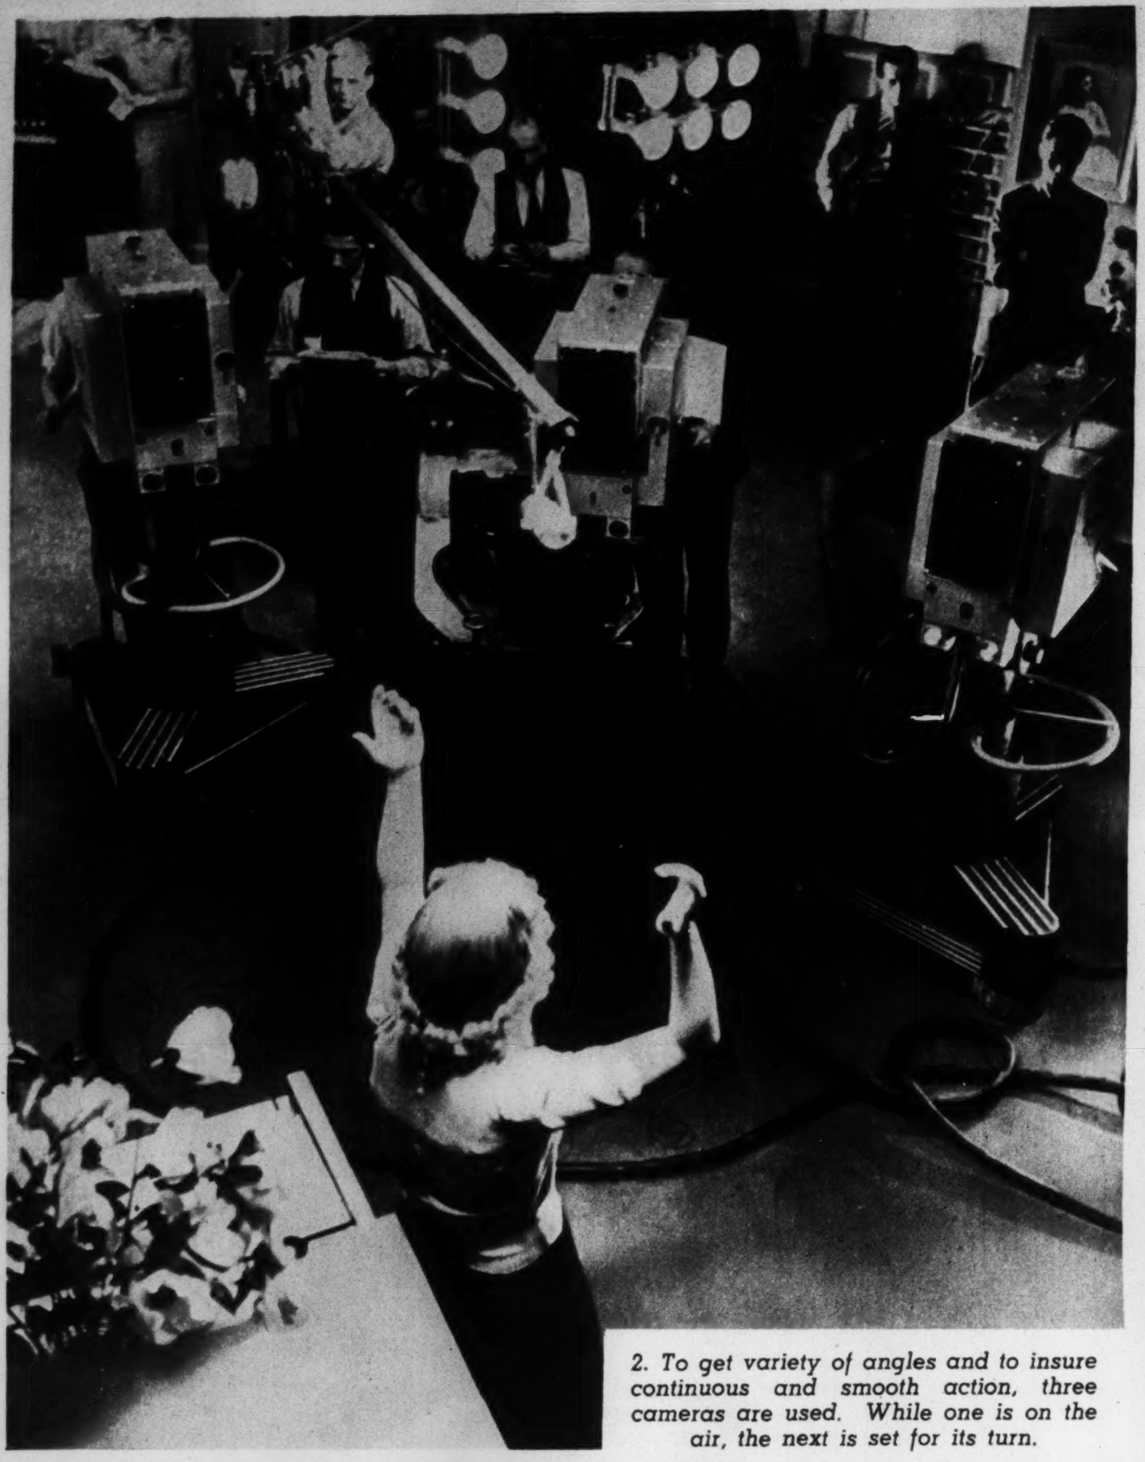
(Associated Press Feature Service Photos)

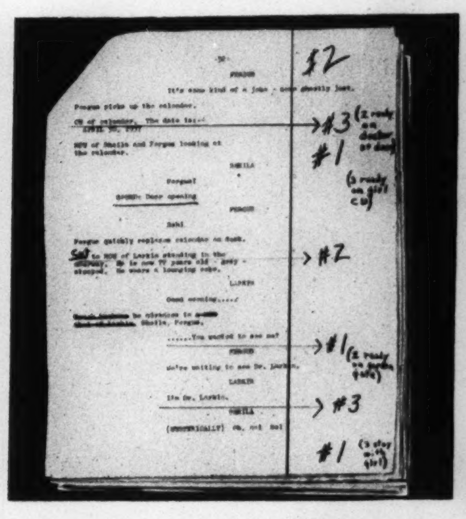


1. Television eye is the iconoscope (ike to the engineers), sketched in position inside this television camera. The camera focuses on a mosaic plate inside ike, and ike turns the image into a series of electrical impulses, just as mike (microphone) does with sound.

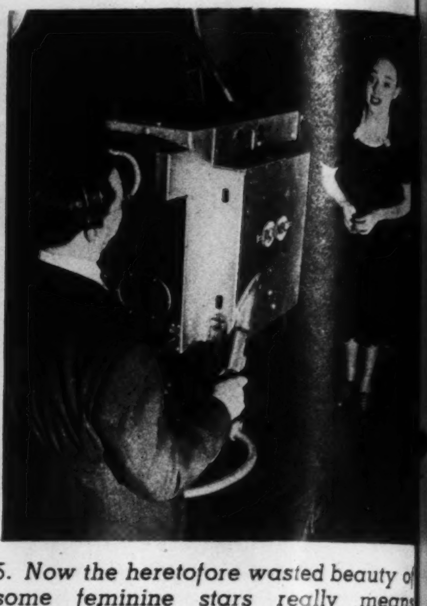


2. To get variety of angles and to insure continuous and smooth action, three cameras are used. While one is on the air, the next is set for its turn.

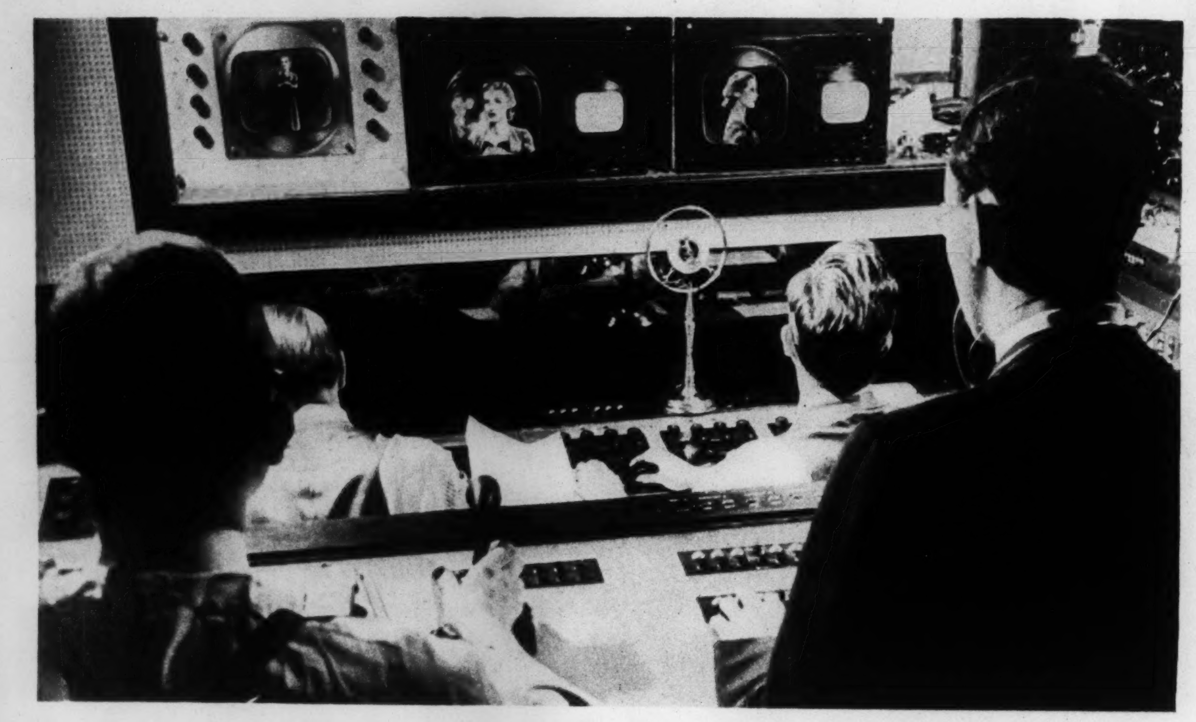
3. As the movies do sometimes, television uses models instead of big outdoor sets. A shot of this miniature house introduced a drama called "A Room With a View."



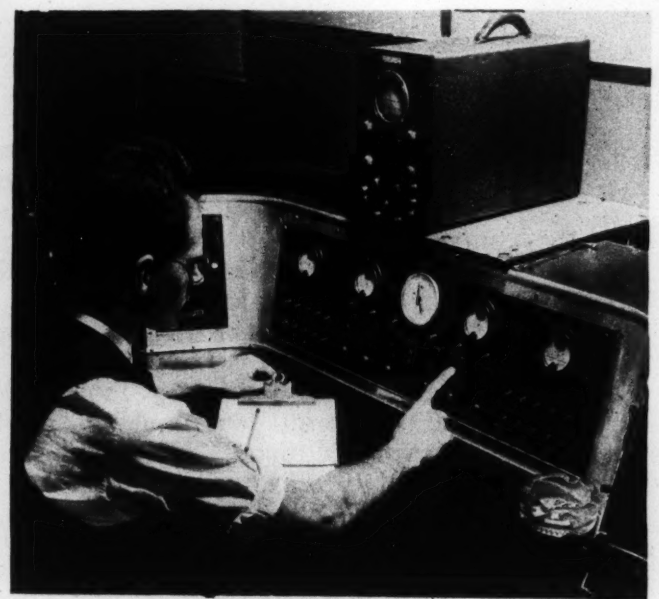
4. The script not only tells the actors what to do and say, but shows the cameramen where and when to shoot. This is a page from a thriller, "May Eve." In case you haven't guessed, CU means closeup.



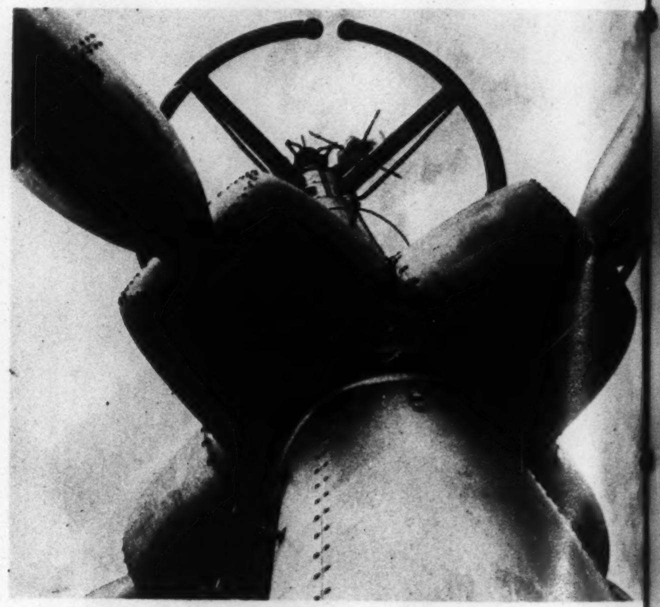
5. Now the heretofore wasted beauty of some feminine stars really means something. Here is Announcer Mary McCormick.



6. These three panels in the control room show what each camera sees. The director (left rear) can cut from one to another at the right split second. The man at the right directs the cameramen by telephone. The other two, monitors, regulate the sight and sound.



7. From NBC's Radio City studio, television impulses travel 16 blocks south by cable to the transmitter in the Empire State Building. Here's the control board.



Atop the 1250-foot Empire State Building is this 30-foot antenna. Sound impulses radiate from the hoop at top, visual ones from the cigar-shaped lower arms. Dependable range is 50 miles (distance to horizon).

Facial Mask

Simply mix three tablespoons of Linit (the same Linit so popular for the Bath) and one teaspoon of Cold Cream with enough milk to make a nice, firm consistency. Apply it to the cleansed face and neck and relax during the twenty minutes the mask takes to set. Then rinse off with clear, tepid water and pat the face and neck dry.

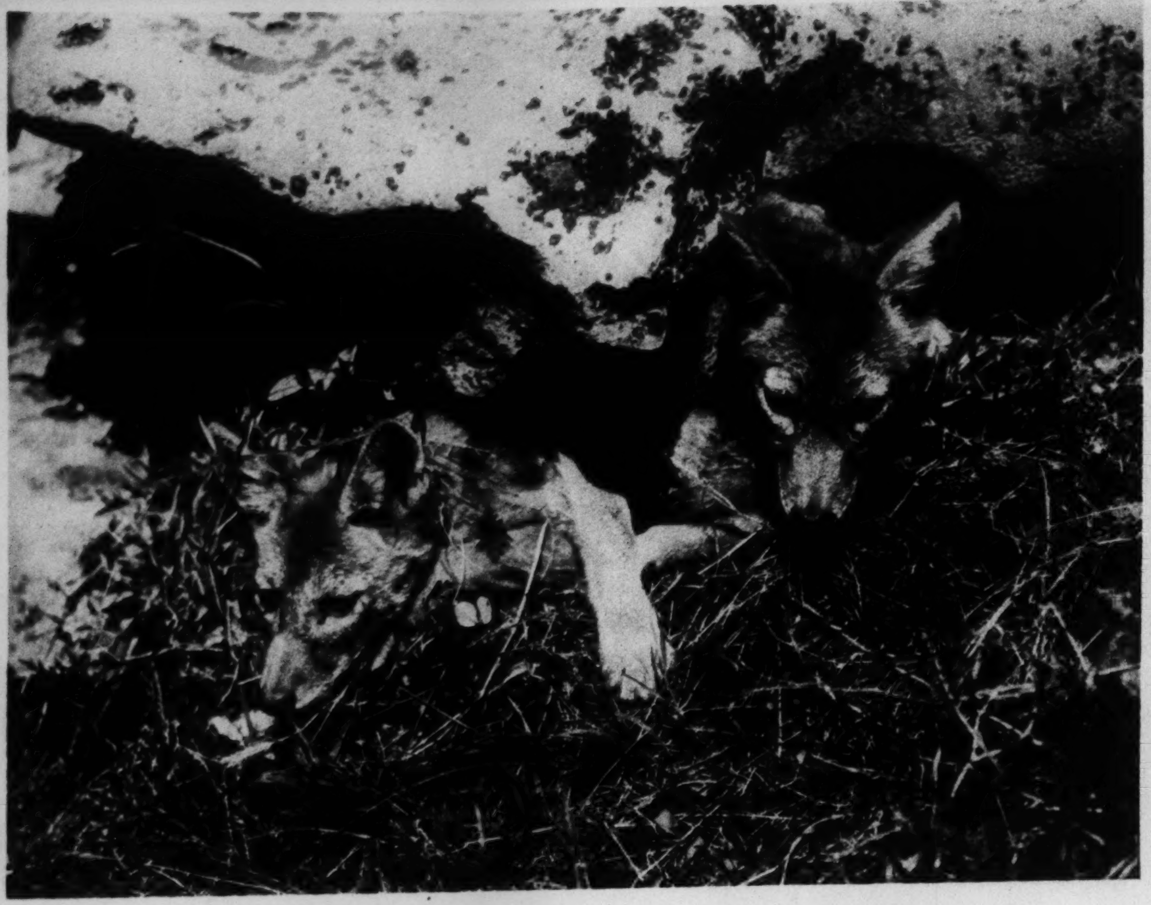
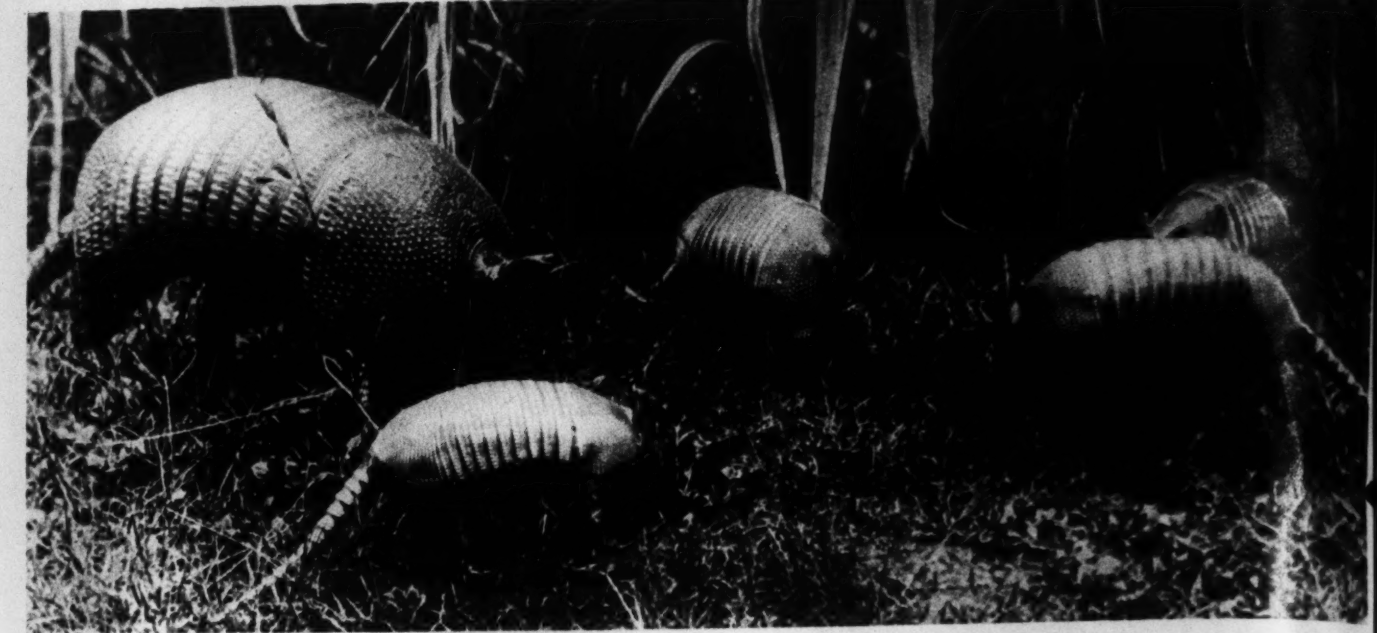
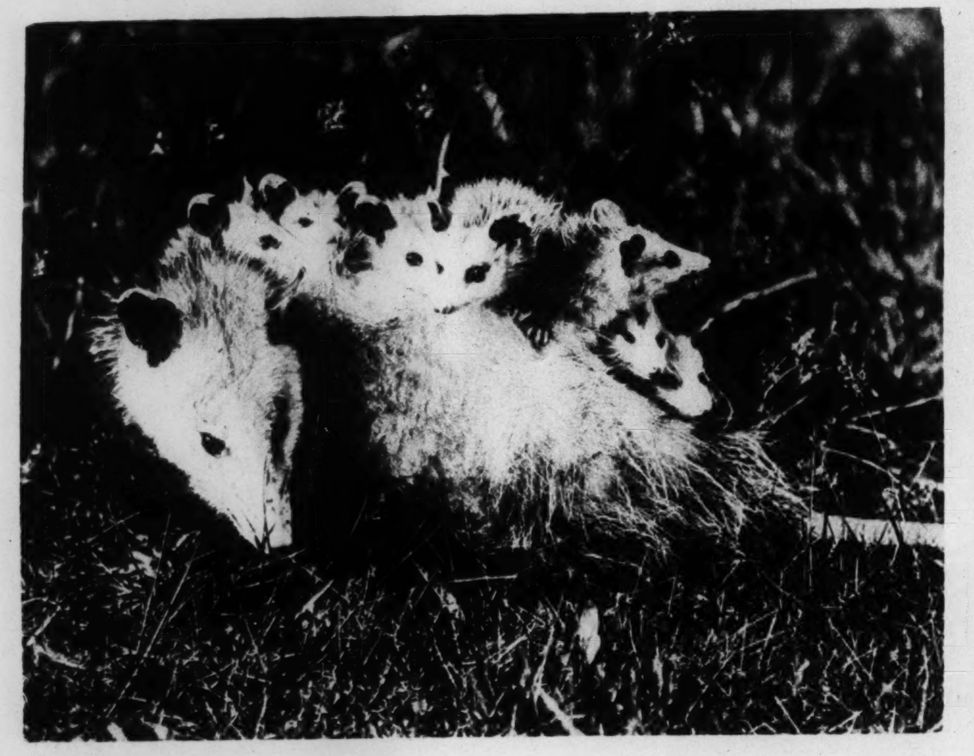
ANIMAL BABES IN AMER



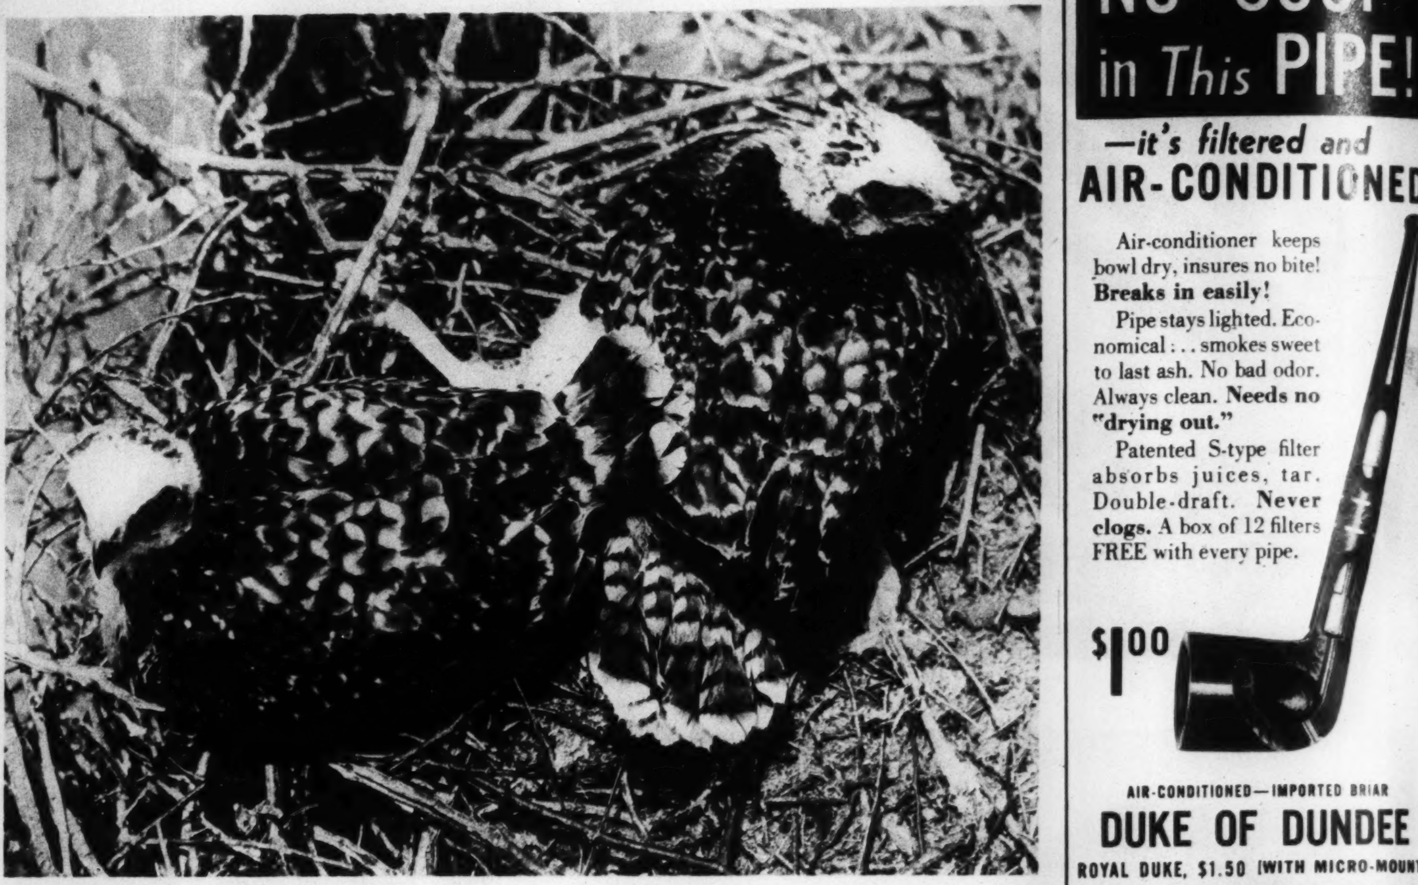
Coyote pups in a den.



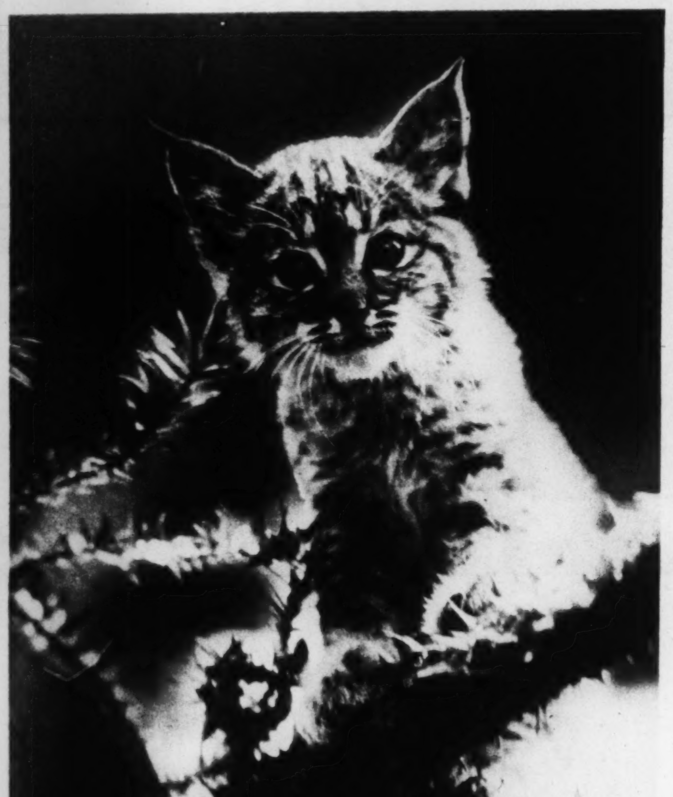
Armadillo family in Texas.



Opossum mother and babies.



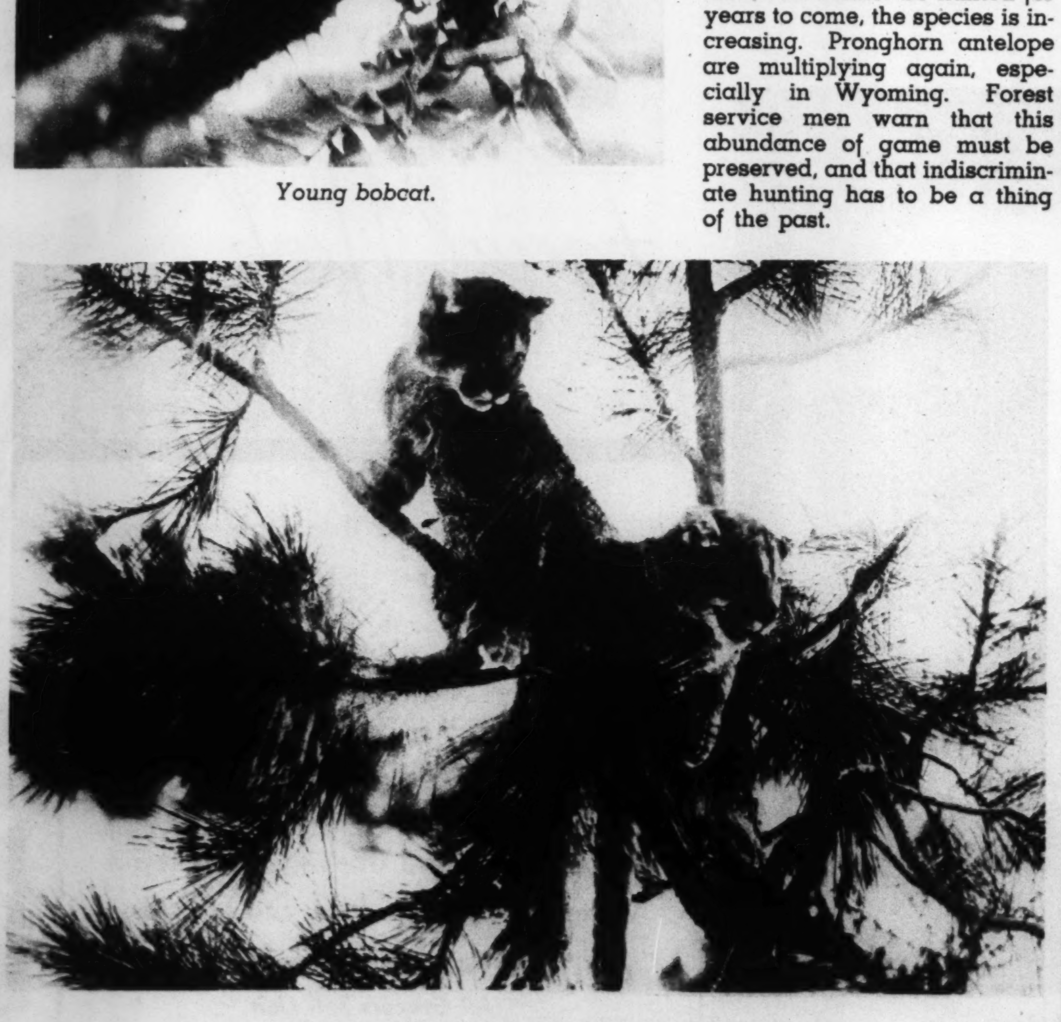
Twin hawk fledglings on a nest.



Young bobcat.

WILD animals on the decline 10 years ago, are again multiplying, it is indicated by reports from forest rangers, CCC leaders and game wardens. This spring's increase—the term used for animal young—is said to be the biggest since President Theodore Roosevelt's conservation campaign. The past winter was comparatively mild, and deer, mountain lions, skunks, hawks, coyotes, jackrabbits, and even armadillos in the Mexican border states have big families. Some of the babies are shown in these photos.

In a few cases, there are reports of actually too many deer, with resultant crop damages. In Montana alone last fall, hunters got 21,000 deer and 7000 elk, an average of one animal to every two hunters, as compared to an average of one to every five 10 years ago. The percentage was even higher in Arizona. While bighorn sheep, once almost exterminated, still cannot be hunted for years to come, the species is increasing. Pronghorn antelope are multiplying again, especially in Wyoming. Forest service men warn that this abundance of game must be preserved, and that indiscriminate hunting has to be a thing of the past.



Mountain lion cubs snarl at a dog that has treed them.

WHY CAN HAIR MAKE A WOMAN LOOK SO YOUNG?

Halo, new soapless shampoo, brings youthful sparkle and manageability to even dry hair—with no scalp irritation!

IF YOU long to possess that "little girl" look so evident in all the latest styles of dress and make-up, then start with your hair!

Because hair that sparkles with highlights—seems to breathe with life and vitality, keys-up your whole appearance with a breathless, expectant note of youth.

Yes, hair can have an electric effect on the rest of your make-up, provided some old-fashioned shampoo is not robbing you of its natural beauty. Because many old-style shampoos so often leave an unrinsable film of soap or oil to actually dull the hair and cover up its natural brilliance. That's why women used to need a lemon or vinegar rinse. Why your hair so often looked dull and dead, stringy and unmanageable.

How lucky for all women that a scientist made this discovery now in Halo Shampoo—a way to make rich, creamy shampoo lather without the use of either soap or oil.

Here at last is the perfect shampoo for dry, oily or normal hair. One shampoo with Halo demonstrates perfectly how it removes all trace of dull film left by old-style shampoos. How radiant and full of luster it leaves your hair, eliminating any need for lemon or vinegar rinse. How silky-soft and manageable it leaves even "wild" hair. How clean and fragrant your scalp, without irritation. In fact, even loose, flaky dandruff is safely removed.

Buy Halo Shampoo from any drug, department or 10¢ store in the 10¢, 50¢ or $1.00 size and discover how beautiful your hair can be. Halo is tested and approved by Good Housekeeping Bureau.

During fall and winter, spruce and balsam are cut. . . .

Trimmed, and sent sliding down hillsides to horse teams. . . .

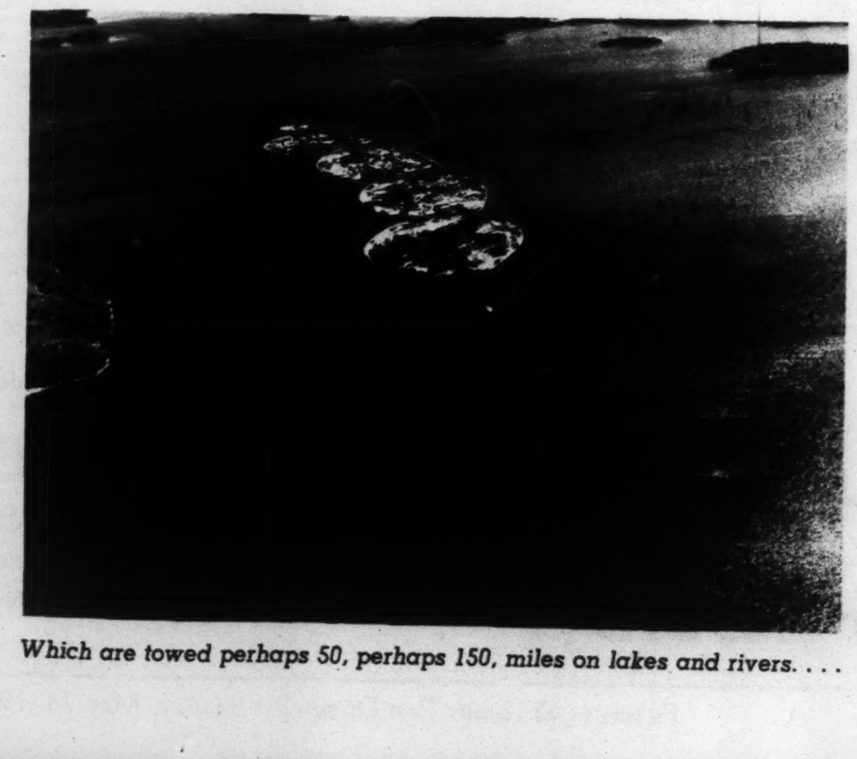
It's done by lumberjacks like these.

Then, with the spring thaw, the logs are pushed down hillside sluices, started to the mills. . . .

Down into the boiling streams, they are pushed on their way to prevent jamming.

They are prodded and herded by nimble, sure-footed river drivers. . . .

And boomed, thousands of 16-foot logs, into huge floating islands. . . .



Which are towed perhaps 50, perhaps 150, miles on lakes and rivers. . . .

THIS is the story of newsprint—the paper on which newspapers are printed—as told by the camera of Margaret Bourke-White, famed woman photographer. To make some of the pictures shown on these pages, Miss Bourke-White flew nearly 2000 miles by airplane over the forests of Central and Eastern Canada, tramped through the timberlands and waded rushing streams.

Newsprint is one of Canada's greatest industries. Ea bout $110,000,000 worth is export to this country. FACT TO PRESSES—The Photographic Story of Newsprint

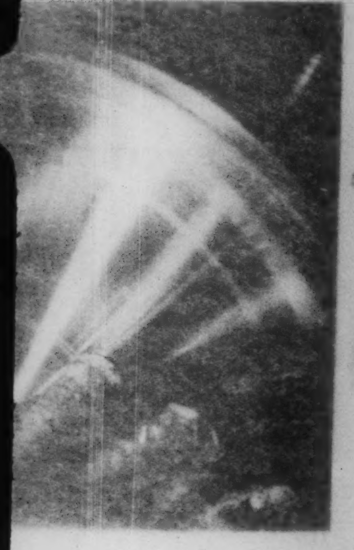
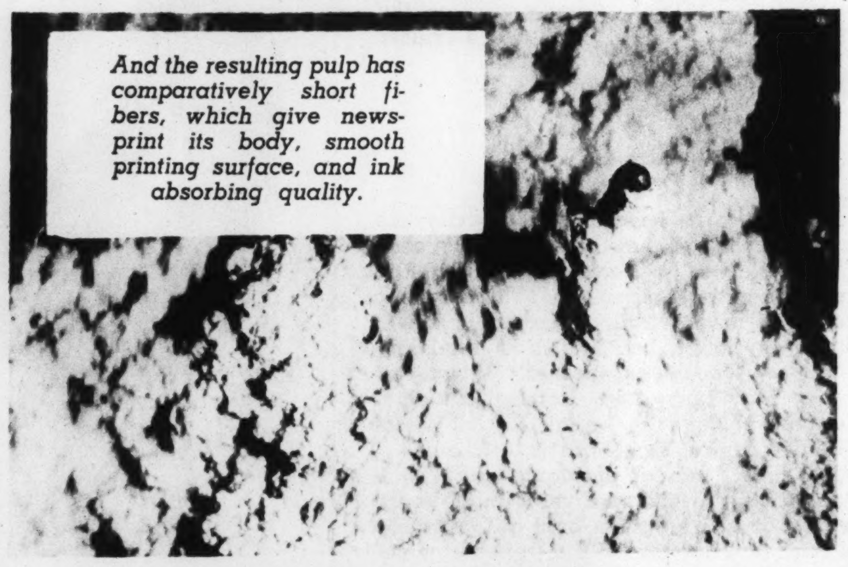
Sent down chutes at [illegible] raging rapids. . . .

Wood is reduced to pulp by mechanical and chemical methods. For the chemical way, logs are reduced by whirling blades to chips like these. . . .

Which are cooked in acid in these great "digesters" under heavy steam pressure. This makes long fiber pulp, which gives newsprint its strength.

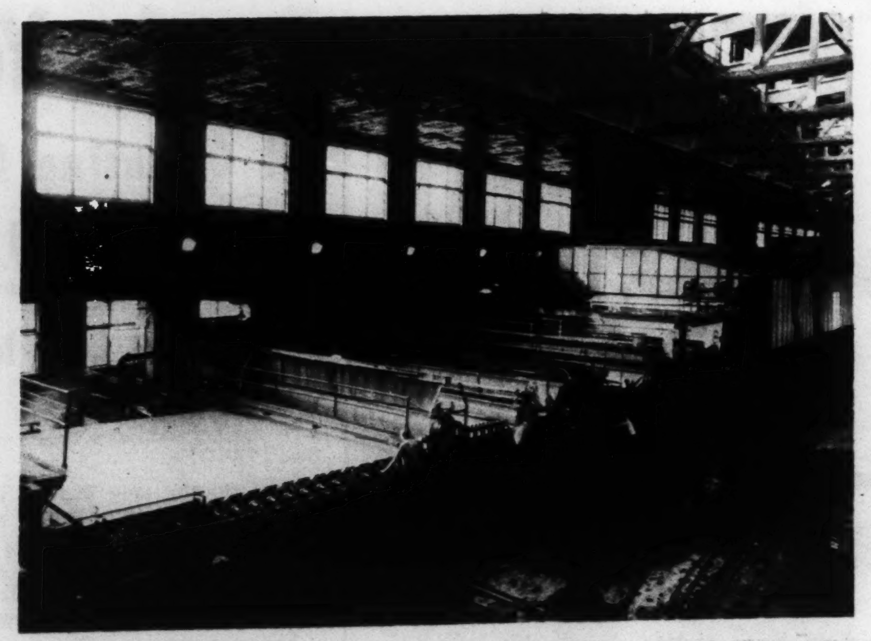


In the mechanical process, logs are loaded from the floor above into magazines like these, from which they are forced down against large stone grinders. . . .

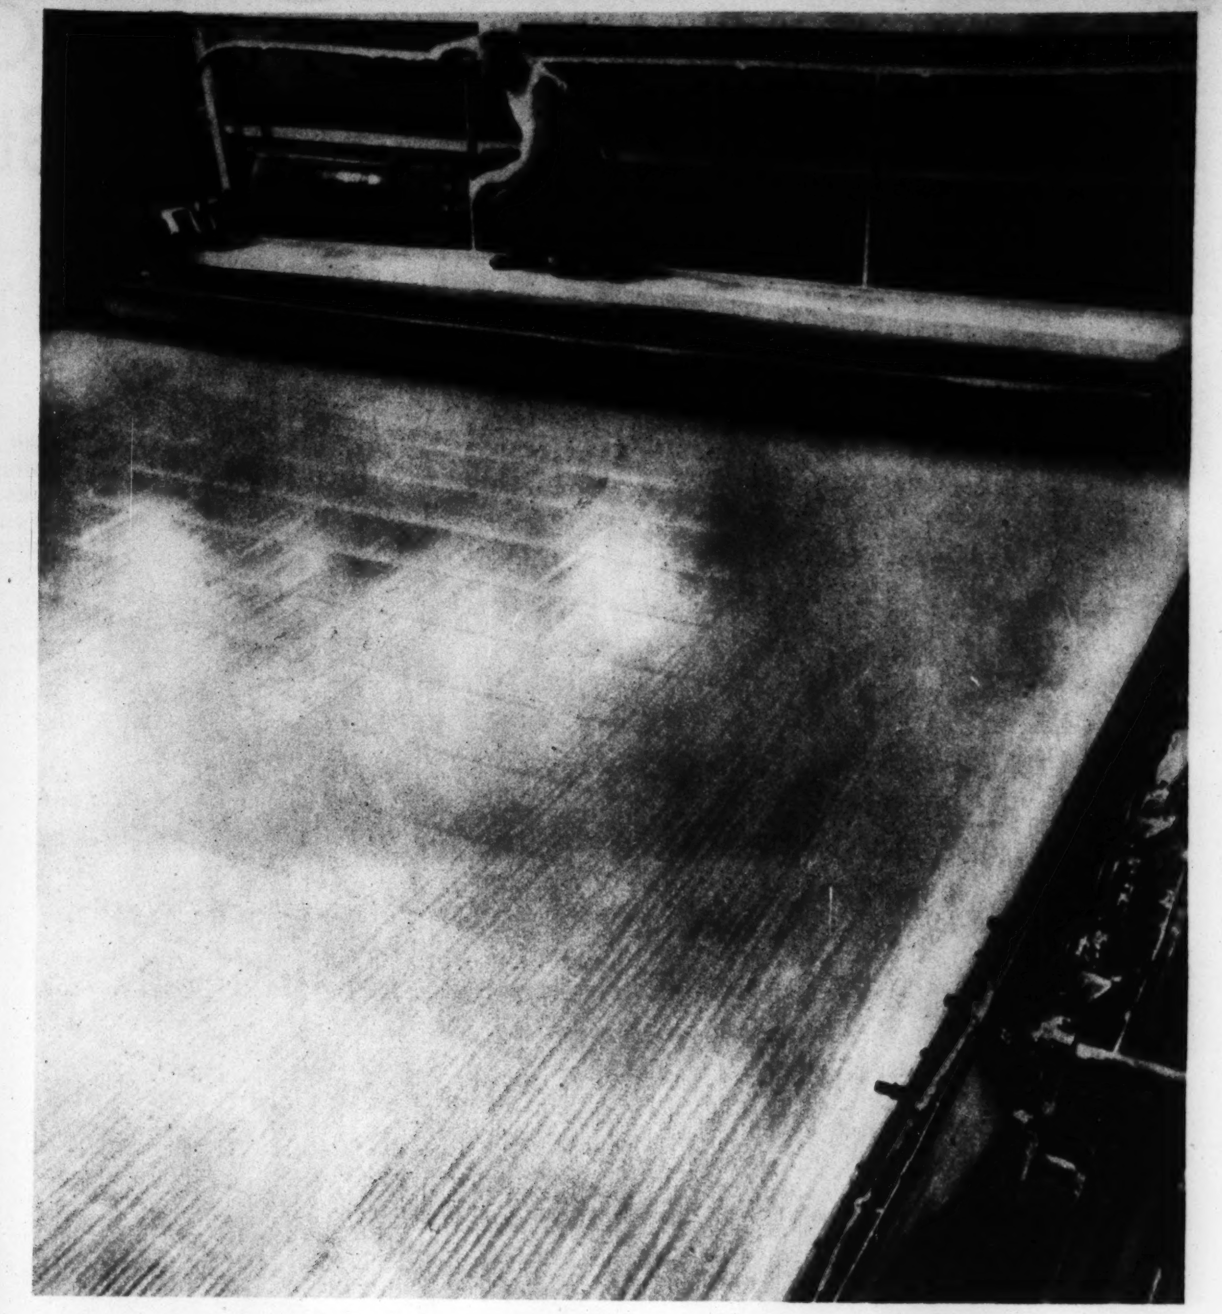


And the resulting pulp has comparatively short fibers, which give newsprint its body, smooth printing surface, and ink absorbing quality.

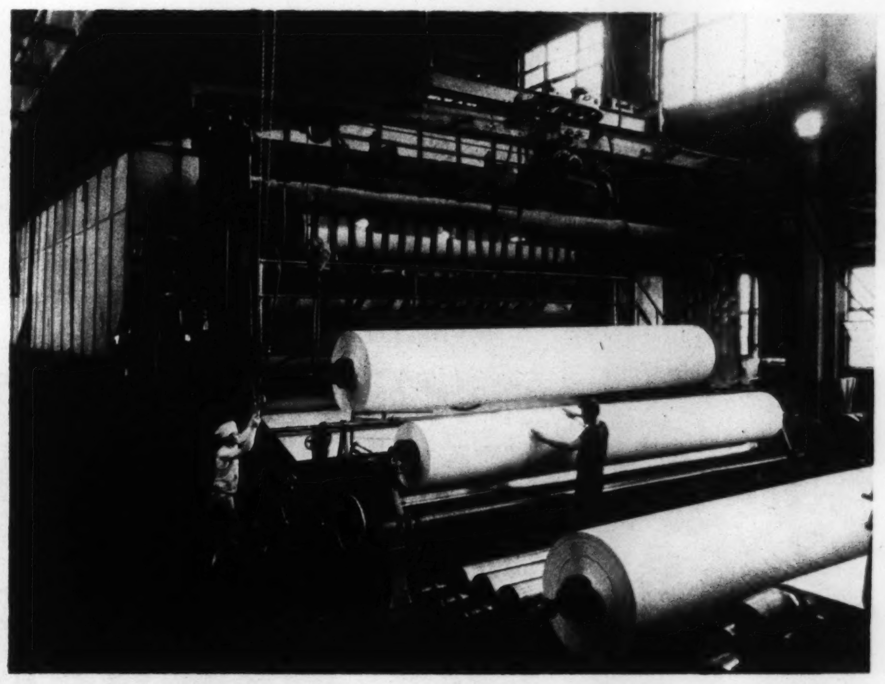
end of each spring's drive, they [illegible] in the mill's woodyards to give a year's supply.

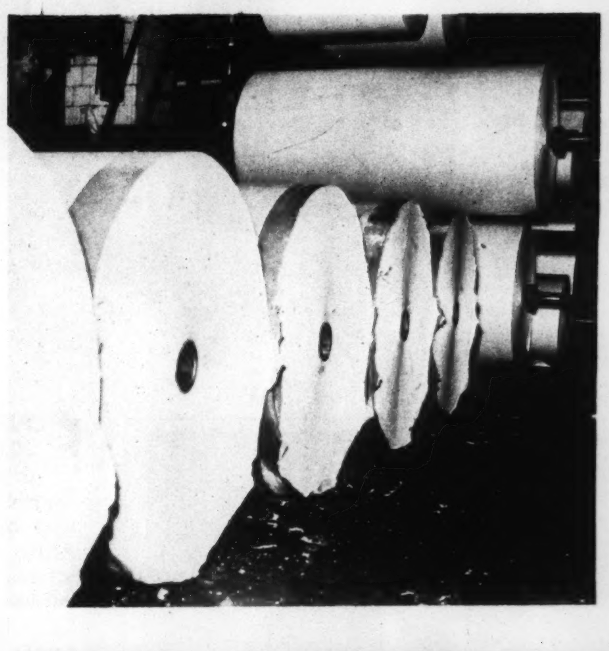


The two varieties of pulp are washed, screened and combined (usually 80 per cent mechanical type, 20 per cent chemical) and the mixture, now 99½ per cent water, flows on to a screen traveling 1200 feet a minute.



Most of the water is removed by suction, gravity and pressing, as the fibers knit into paper. (These photos were taken at one of the three newsprint plants of the International Paper Sales Company).





After passing over steam-heated cylinders, the paper emerges here at the "dry end" of the machine, and is "ironed" by running it through solid steel rolls. One acre of forest has yielded seven to nine tons of newsprint.

Shipped to the Post-Dispatch (from International's Three Rivers mill at the St. Lawrence and St. Maurice rivers in Quebec) the newsprint is fed to the presses in rolls varying from 33½ to 67 inches wide. . . .

And emerges, printed as your newspaper. It takes 88 rolls of 67-inch and 44 rolls of 50¼-inch newsprint to put out a 44-page edition of the Post-Dispatch. Last year this newspaper used 24,793 tons of regular newsprint and 1790 tons of rotogravure stock (a 67-inch roll of newsprint weighs 1260 pounds).

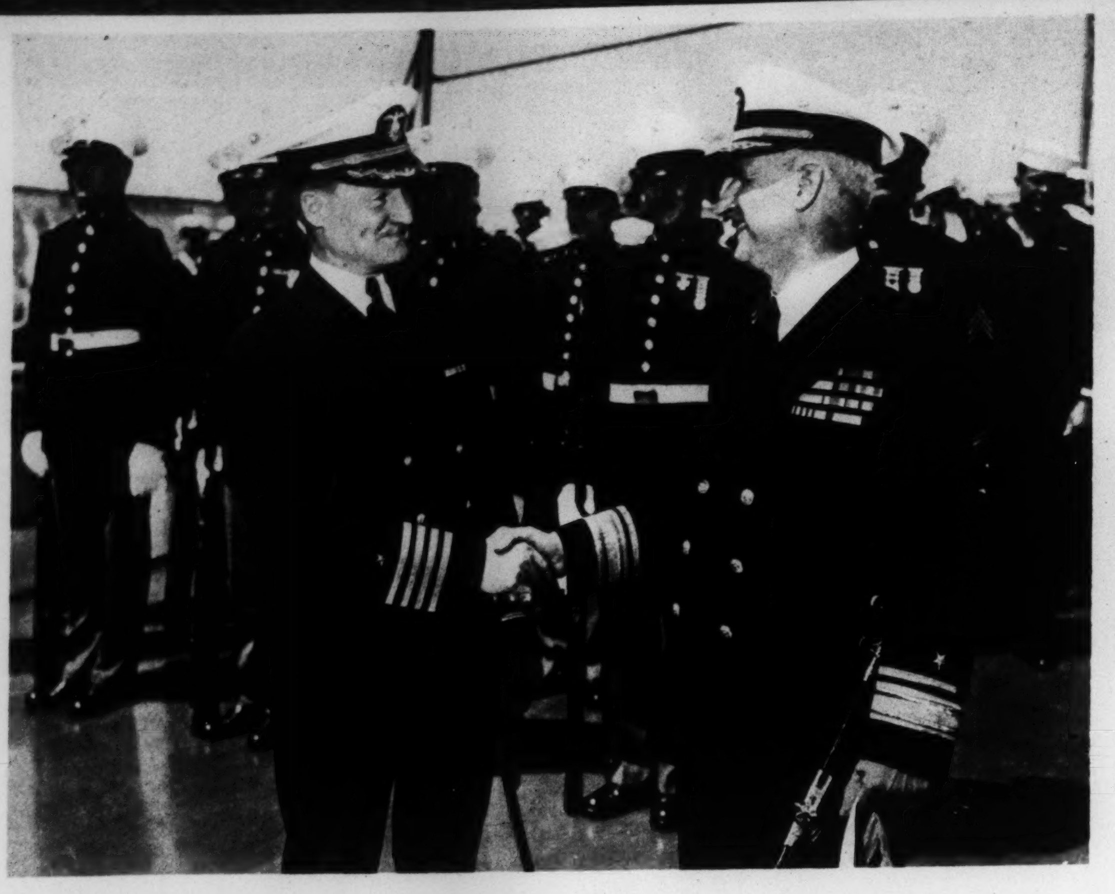
Meanwhile, making of newsprint from yellow pine in the Southern United States is developing, with $100,000,000 invested in pulp and paper mills.



Cruiser St. Louis Joins Up

To left, Rear Admiral Joseph E. Taussig, holding paper, accepting the U. S. S. St. Louis for the navy, during ceremonies on the deck of the cruiser.

FOURTH naval vessel to be named after this city, the 10,000-ton cruiser St. Louis has been formally commissioned, and placed in command of Captain Charles H. Morrison, a native St. Louisan. The new ship was built at Newport News, Virginia, and launched in April, 1938, with Miss Nancy Lee Morrill of St. Louis, former Veiled Prophet Queen, as sponsor. It was accepted for the navy May 19 by Rear Admiral Joseph E. Taussig, commandant of the Fifth Naval District, whose father, also a Rear Admiral, was born in St. Louis.

The first navy vessel to bear the name of St. Louis was a fighting sloop built in 1828 and used for 68 years; the second was an iron clad gunboat built at Carondelet during the Civil War, and the third was a transport which carried the officers of the surrendered Spanish fleet to American ports in the Spanish-American War.

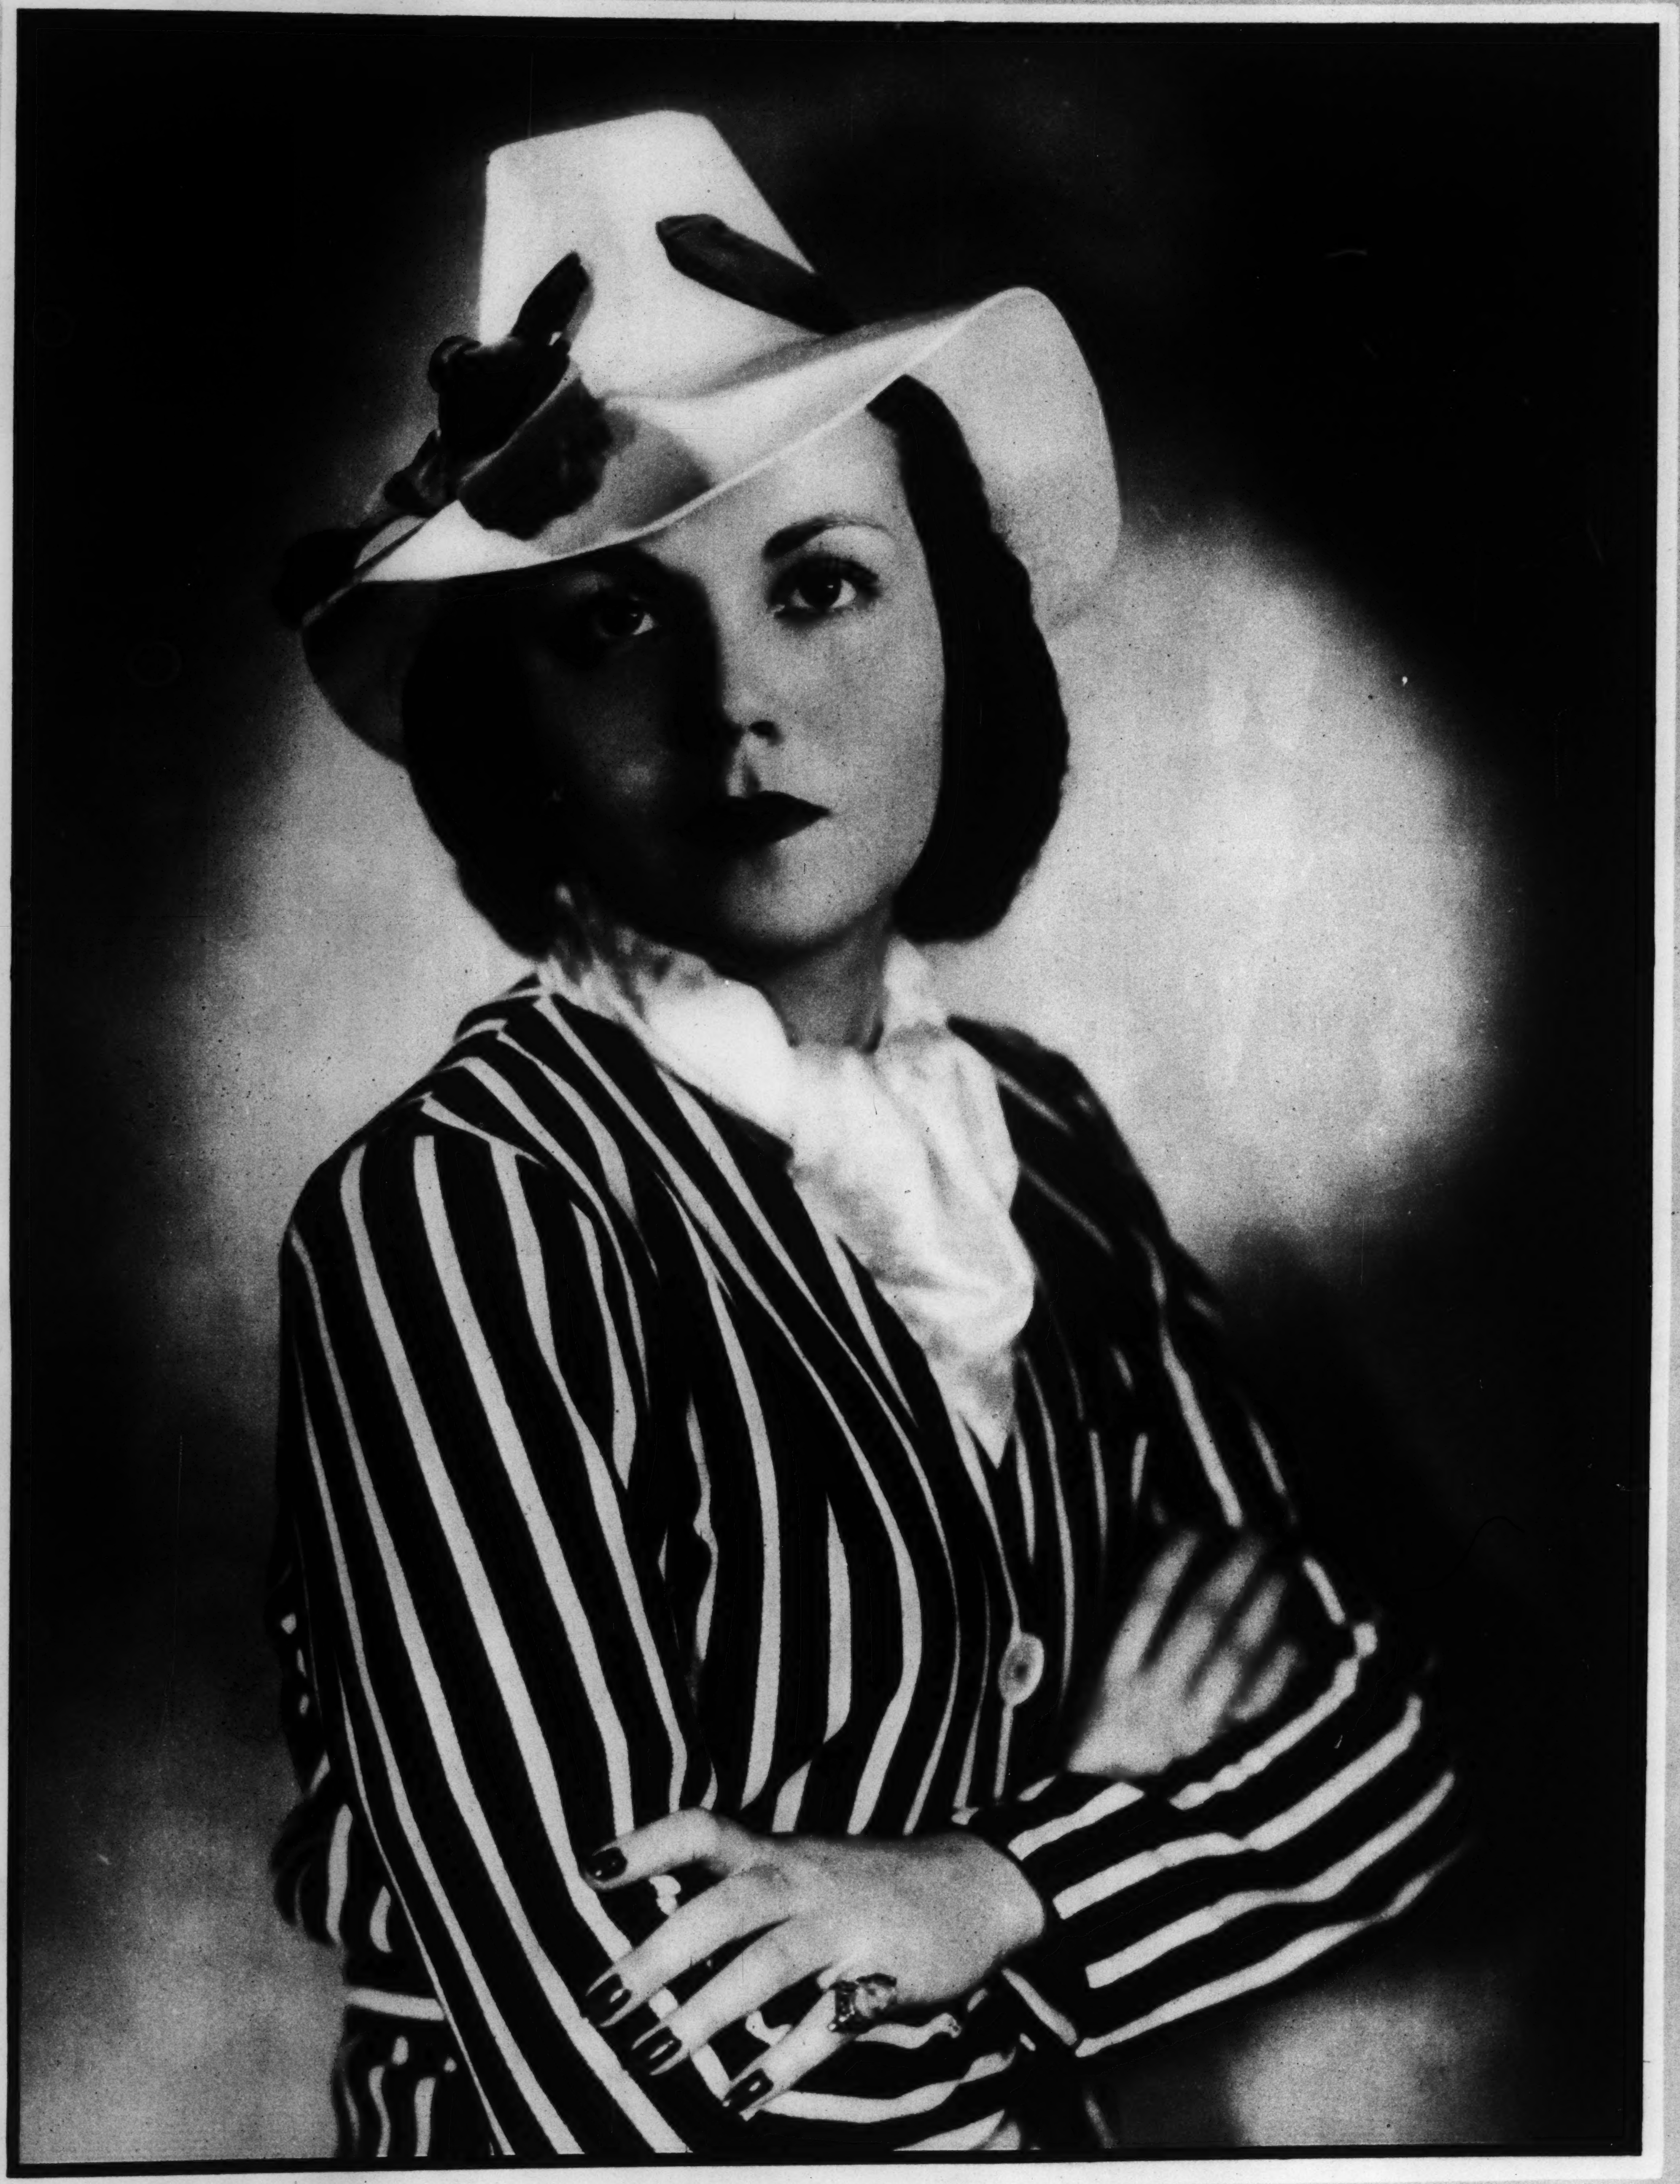
Municipal Opera Starts Again



PRETTIEST CHORUS GIRL

Miss Jane Finnegan

Miss Finnegan, a dancer, has been selected as the prettiest girl of the 1939 Municipal Opera chorus by vote of the girls in the chorus. She is 21 years old, and lives with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John H. King Finnegan, at 4321 Maryland avenue. This will be her fourth season with the opera.

(Jules Pierlow Photo)

ST. LOUIS' unique and famous civic enterprise, the Municipal Opera, will open its twenty-first season of summer entertainment next Friday night. During the following 12 weeks it will present a dozen musical productions, including one new to America, in the open air theater in Forest Park, with its 10,000 seats and its world's largest outdoor stage. In the 20 years of its existence, the Municipal Opera, which is not conducted for profit, has given 1459 performances of 215 productions to a total attendance of 10,706,005. Five American premieres and seven world premieres are in its production record, and many notables of the entertainment world have appeared on its tree-bordered stage. For the 1939 season, more than 50 principals, a chorus of 93 men and girls, and a 50-piece orchestra made up mostly of St. Louis Symphony musicians, have been engaged. Some 500 persons in all will be on the opera payroll. About half the principals will be making their Forest Park debut this summer. Among these newcomers are three prima donnas, Hazel Hayes, Muriel Dickson and Rosemarie Brancato, and two leading men, Robert Shafer, tenor, and Lansing Hatfield, baritone. Principals who have played before in the Municipal Theater include the prima donnas Helen Gleason, Nancy McCord, Annamary Dickey and Gladys Baxter; Doris Patston, comedienne; Una Val Castle, dancer, and Oscar Shaw, Billy House, Lee Dixon and George Rasely. Richard Berger is again production manager; Zeke Colvin, stage director; George Hirst, musical director; Theodor Adolphus and Al White have returned as dance directors. This is Norris Houghton's first season here as stage designer. The new pergolas—to be dedicated this afternoon—which will shelter a capacity audience from rain, constitute the chief architectural change for the coming season. As for the productions, the management has planned to emphasize musical quality and, having chosen shows and voices with this in mind, expects the St. Louis Municipal Opera of 1939 to be particularly memorable for its appeal to the ear. To start the season on this note, "Rose Marie" has been chosen as the opening production.

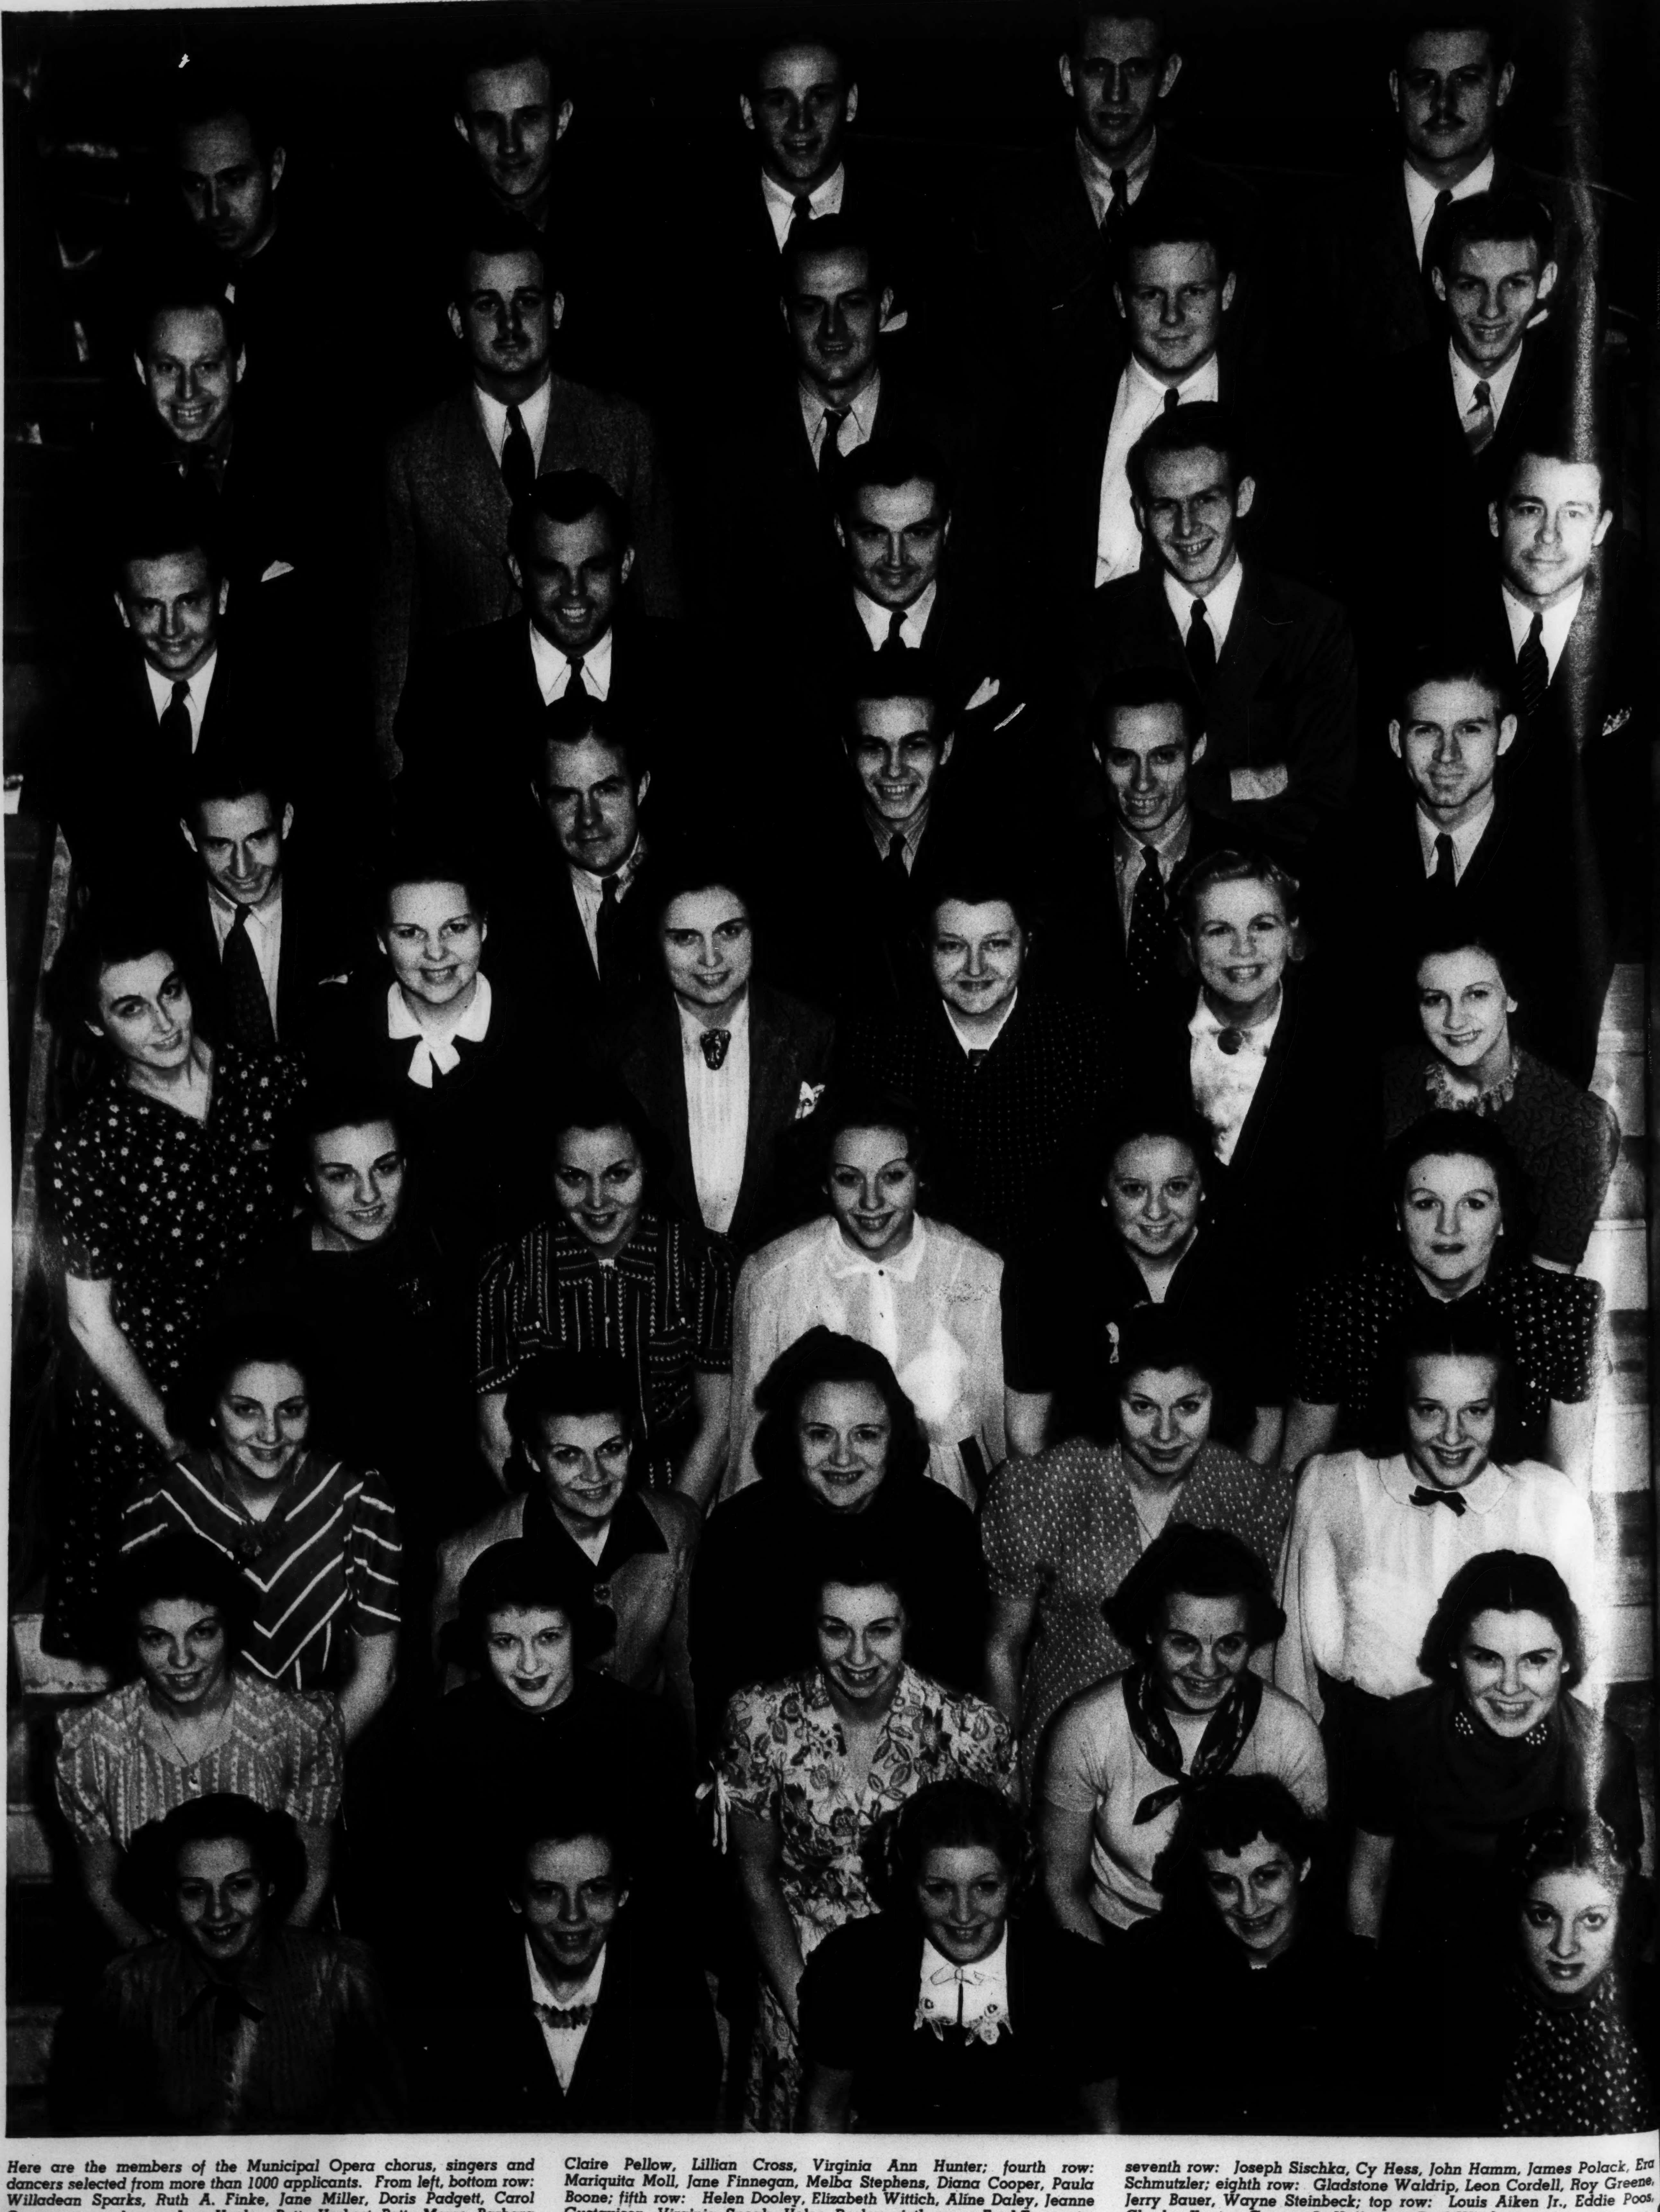
NINETY-TWO IN THE CHORUS



Here are the members of the Municipal Opera chorus, singers and dancers selected from more than 1000 applicants. From left, bottom row: Willadean Sparks, Ruth A. THE productions staff, headed by Richard Berger, has the complex job of collecting scripts, scores, players, scenery, costumes, etc., and combining them into 12 shows. Because of the number, magnitude and quality of the productions, it is one of the biggest jobs in the entertainment world. Early in the spring Productions Manager Berger and the executive board of the Municipal Theater Association completed selection of shows and casts for the season. There followed the employment of the chorus, musicians, backstage technicians, weeks of getting things ready filled with a multiplicity of such diverse detail as making sure the hero kisses the heroine at the right moment and the third chorus girl from the left is supplied with shoes that fit her. Set building will go on during most of the season, 24 hours a day, the men working three shifts.

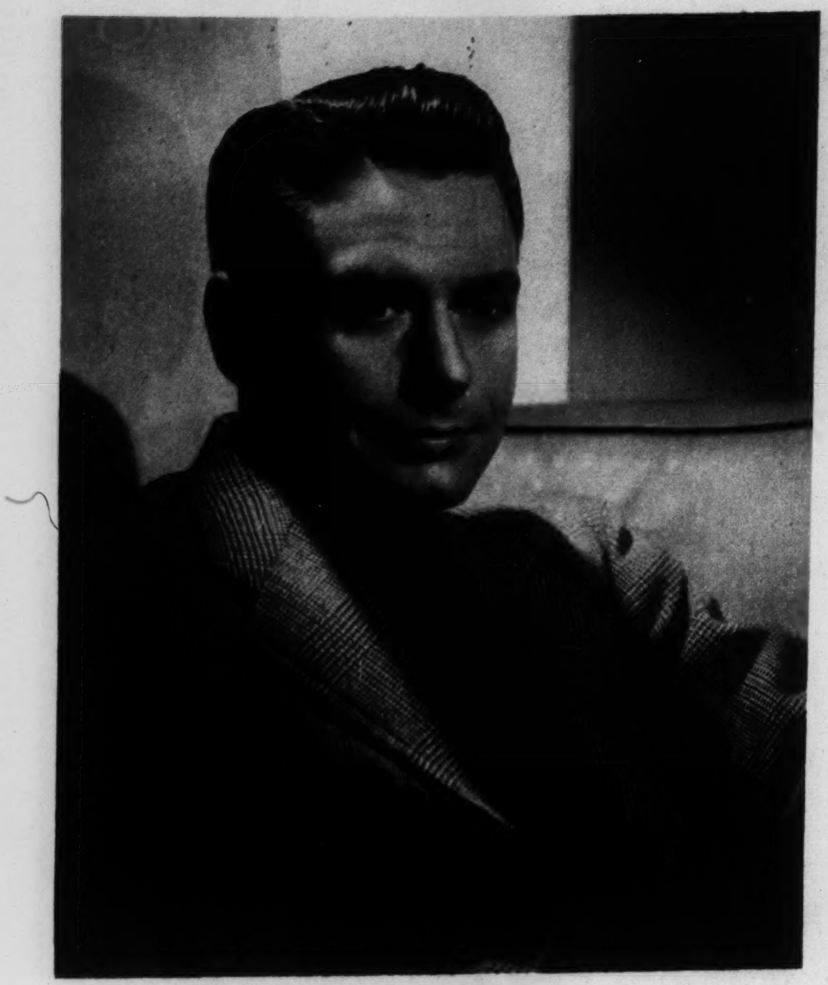
PRINCIPALS FOR THE FOREST PARK SEASON



Wilbur Evans, baritone, Philadelphian, amateur athlete and Marine Corps Reserve officer. When a youth won nationwide radio audition contest; has appeared as soloist with symphony orchestras, made concert tours, sung on radio programs. Sang in Municipal Opera in 1937. Will have role in "Babette," opening August 7.

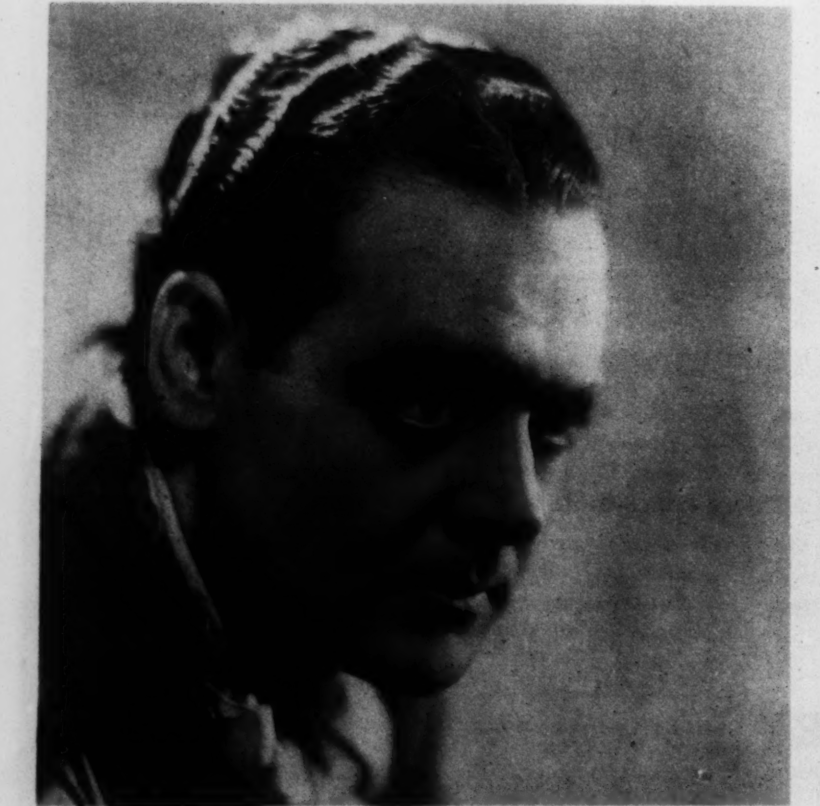
Gladys Baxter, soprano, who has missed only one season of the last eight at Forest Park. Has sung leading roles in a long series of Broadway musicals, including "The Student Prince," "Countess Maritza" and "Music in May." Her 1939 Muny Opera shows are "Queen High," "Lost Waltz," "Katinka," "Waltz Dream," July 3; and "On Your Toes."

Lee Dixon, dancer, has appeared in the "Ziegfeld Follies," been featured in movies, including "Gold Diggers of 1937," "Ready, Willing and Able" and "The Singing Marine." At Municipal Theater last year. Will be seen this season in "On Your Toes," July 10.

Doris Patston, dancing and singing comedienne, veteran of five seasons at Forest Park. London-born, she started to be a pianist, switched to singing and musical comedy. Brought to this country by Ziegfeld to play in "Louie the Fourteenth," remained for featured parts in "Strike Up the Band" and other shows. Scheduled for eight Muny Opera productions, including "Rose Marie," June 2; "Queen High," June 12; and "The Firefly," July 17.

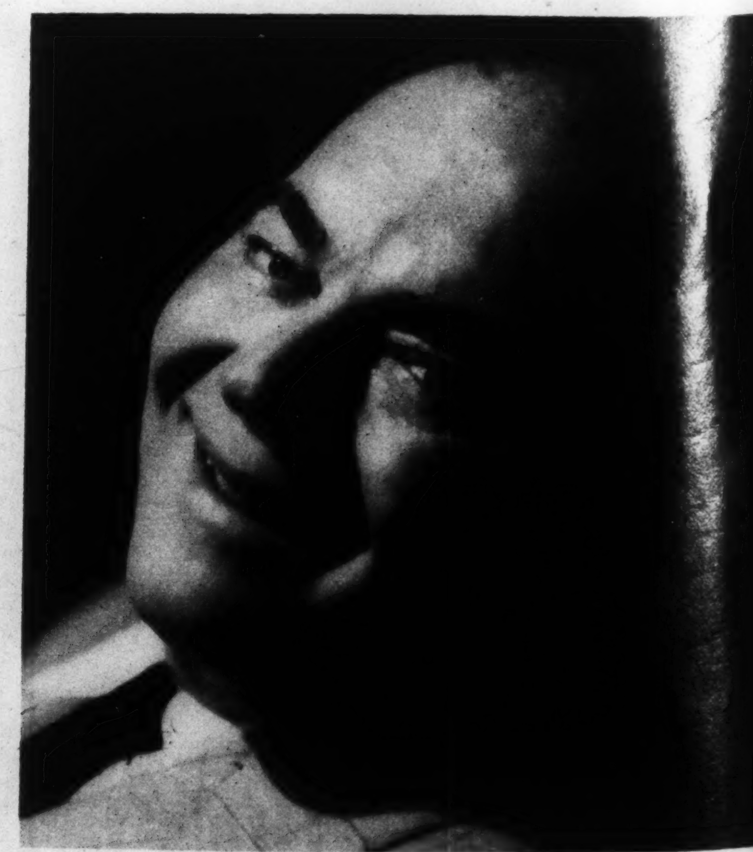
FROM opera, the theater, moviedom, radio, concert stage and night club come the men and women who take the principal parts in Municipal Opera shows. An engagement at Forest Park is a working interlude for them in the lull that falls on the theatrical world in the summer. They are engaged, not for the season, but for specific productions—some of them for just one. Most of them come to St. Louis, rehearse, play their roles and depart, some to return for appearances later in the season. A few, who have been engaged for several shows, spend practically the entire summer here. However glamorous these players may appear from the audience side of the footlights, whatever prestige they may have as theatrical big shots, they are hard workers in St. Louis. They have to be. After the season has started there is only a week to get each production ready for presentation. That means that the principals in a show have to spend almost every waking hour the week before it opens in rehearsal. They start at 10 o'clock in the morning, and they are often at it at 10 o'clock at night, going through lines and business on a rehearsal stage at the rear of the Municipal Theater while on the main stage the current show is entertaining an audience. On Saturday nights they take part in the dress rehearsal that lasts from midnight to dawn. Except for these Saturday nights, they rehearse in clothing designed for summer comfort and efficiency—shirt sleeves, shorts, slacks and the like—and in a business-like atmosphere far different from the romantic illusion they help create when the show is on.

Nancy McCord, soprano, native of Garden City, Long Island, graduate of Juilliard Graduate School of Music, onetime protegee of Mme. Marcella Sembrich. Has sung with American Opera Company, in Shubert shows and in four seasons of Municipal Opera. To be heard in "Rose Marie," "Lost Waltz," June 19; "Katinka," June 26, and "Song of the Flame," August 14.



Robert Shafer, tenor, will make his Forest Park debut in "Katinka;" also to appear in "Waltz Dream," "The Firefly" and "Babette." He has sung many light opera roles in summer stock, and has played on Broadway in "The Show Is On," "At Home Abroad" and "Hooray for What."

Helen Gleason, soprano, a New Yorker who sang her way from vaudeville to the Metropolitan Opera stage. Known as sportswoman and tasteful dresser as well as singer. Sang in Municipal Theater in 1936; to be heard this season in "Victoria and Her Hussar," which will have its American premiere August 21.



Billy House, comedian, seen by Muny Opera audiences last year and in 1936. Veteran of "tab shows," vaudeville, movies, radio and musicals, including Earl Carroll's "Vanities." Will play in "Queen High" and "Katinka."

MOST of the featured dancers who will enliven Municipal Opera shows this summer have never appeared before on the Forest Park stage. All have had New York engagements and many have performed abroad. They will present a wide variety of entertainment, from classic ballet to popular tap, from ballroom grace to acrobatics.

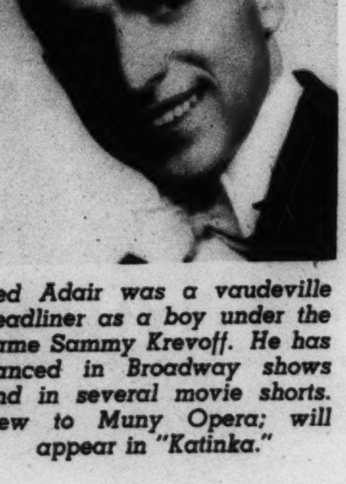
Harris, Claire and Shannon, dance trio, seen on the Forest Park stage in 1937, have been engaged for "The Firefly" this season. They performed in vaudeville, American hotels, movies and at entertainment places in Europe, Australia, Africa and South America.

Duke McHale, who was in several productions here in 1936, began his dancing career as a child. He has played in vaudeville, in touring companies, and on Broadway in "Thumbs Up," the "Follies" and "Babes in Arms." Will be seen in "Queen High."

Isabelle Kimpal, ballerina, new to Municipal Opera, was featured ballerina at the Pan-American Exposition in Texas, appeared in the New York production of "On Your Toes," and was understudy for the star of the recent Broadway success, "I Married an Angel." She will dance in "On Your Toes" and "The Bartered Bride."

Norma Gallo, another newcomer, will appear in "Rose Marie" and "Song of the Flame." She played Broadway as a child, later went into vaudeville, where for a time she was with Pat Rooney. She has danced in London and South America, and recently performed at the Radio City Music Hall.

Valya Valentinoff has appeared with the Ballet Russe and other ballets, and has danced in the New York shows, "At Home Abroad" and "Virginia." In his first season of Municipal Opera he will be seen in "On Your Toes," "The Bartered Bride," "Babette" and "Song of the Flame."



Ted Adair was a vaudeville headliner as a boy under the name Sammy Krevoff. He has danced in Broadway shows and in several movie shorts. New to Muny Opera; will appear in "Katinka."

Cesar Tapia, new to Forest Park audiences, has appeared as a dance soloist in Europe, China and Japan, has played in the movies and was a solo dancer in a 1938 Metropolitan Opera production of "Carmen." He will be seen in "Babette."

STOCK PLAYERS AND UNDERSTUDIES

Eleanor Searle, soprano, attended Southern Florida College and Columbia University, where she sang in musical shows. Has been soloist in New York churches and with oratorio societies, appeared in concert, and played in Max Reinhardt's "The Eternal Road." This will be her first season here.

Robert Betts, tenor, is a St. Louisan who left Washington University to take up music as a career, after a season in the Muny Opera chorus. Studied in New York under Juilliard fellowship. Has sung on radio, had leading parts in New York Opera Comique and appeared as soloist with Philadelphia and St. Louis Symphony orchestras.

Arthur Kent, bass-baritone, switched from medicine to music at Cornell University. Has sung on radio programs, in operettas and recitals; has been church and oratorio soloist. Latest New York show: "I Married an Angel." New to Muny Opera.

Dorothy Johnson, contralto, credited with a range of three and a half octaves, has sung on various radio programs. Featured at Roxy Theater, New York. Stage experience includes part in "Music in the Air." Municipal Opera newcomer.

Frederic Persson, basso, native of Chicago, was a child concert pianist, later concert singer and coach. Has appeared in New York in Gilbert and Sullivan light operas and other productions, including Theater Guild's "They Shall Not Die."

Al Downing, character actor, was with the Municipal Opera last year and in 1935. Toured with Olsen and Johnson, worked on radio programs, appeared in the movies "Swing Your Lady" and "Jezebel."

STOCK players of the Municipal Opera are employed for the entire season, and remain in St. Louis throughout the summer. They play character and minor roles and understudy the leads, each one working in a number of the season's shows. They are required to be versatile and dependable, able to handle competently a variety of parts. Several of those engaged for this season will be making their first appearance at the Municipal Theater.

Una Val Castle, understudy, has sung, danced and handled dramatic roles in her previous seasons in Forest Park. Got her start in "Show Boat," when she was picked from chorus to do a specialty dance. Played in "Idiot's Delight" and more recently in Chicago production of "The Women."

FRANK, LET'S STOP AND SEE THE WEBSTERS
OH GOSH, HONEY LET'S DON'T THEY BORE ME STIFF!
YOU KNOW WE PROMISED TO DROP IN WEEKS AGO. WE'VE JUST GOT TO!
WELL, ALL RIGHT— BUT MAKE IT SHORT.
JANE AND FRANK! WHAT A PLEASANT SURPRISE.
WELCOME, FOLKS— COME ON IN, AND I'LL GET SOME BEER.
AL, THIS IS GREAT! I NEVER KNEW YOU WERE A GRIESEDIECK BROS. FAN, TOO.
SURE, FRANK— WE NEVER DRINK ANY OTHER BEER!
THREE HOURS LATER—GUESS I HAD THE WEBSTERS WRONG, HONEY—THEY'RE REALLY O.K.
BET YOU WOULDN'T THINK SO IF AL HADN'T SERVED THAT GRIESEDIECK BROS. BEER. BELIEVE ME I'M GLAD THERE'S SUCH AN EASY WAY TO PUT YOU IN A MELLOW MOOD.
Griesedieck Bros. St. Louis LIGHT LAGER BEER

Here's Lesson Number One in how to influence people: do the things they like to have you do for them. And that includes serving Griesedieck Bros. Beer. There's no better "hospitality insurance" than an ice box full of this famous old brew, ready and waiting when friends drop in. They'll enjoy its mellow-smooth goodness—and so will you. Griesedieck Bros. Beer is brewed by masters of the art, then aged to the peak of its flavor. Bottled or draught, it's the best beer in town. Ask for Griesedieck Bros. Beer by name when you're eating out—order a case or a "Pick-Up Pack" to keep handy at home. It's so delicious you'll want to drink it often—so economical you can afford to.

Try Griesedieck Bros. Beer With This Delicious Snack
Toast buttered buns lightly. Place lettuce leaf and a thin slice of Swiss cheese on bottom half. Then a hot hamburger to melt the cheese, then a slice of tomato. Garnish with sliced pickles and serve with plenty of Griesedieck Bros. Beer—it makes all good food taste better.

"Colgate's special penetrating foam gets into the hidden crevices between your teeth. It helps your toothbrush clean out decaying food particles and stop the stagnant saliva odors that cause much bad breath. And, at the same time, Colgate's gentle polishing agent safely cleans the enamel—makes teeth naturally bright and sparkling! Always use Colgate Dental Cream—regularly and frequently. No other dentifrice is exactly like it."

PLANE SIGHTED OVER ENGLAND, THOUGHT TO BE BABY CLIPPER

SEEN EARLIER OVER IRELAND, SCOTLAND

Craft Believed to Be That of Thomas H. Smith, Who Left Old Orchard Beach, Me., on Atlantic Flight.

LONDON, May 29 (AP).—The British Press Association reported tonight that a plane believed to be Thomas H. Smith's "Baby Clipper" was sighted off Saint Bees in Cumberland County, Northern England, about 5:30 p. m. (11:30 St. Louis time.)

The plane circled over the coast guard station where it was given a ground signal and made off south, keeping to the coast line.

Saint Bees is in a direct line from Western Scotland, where a previous report said a plane like Smith's was seen.

The plane, flying high, was seen over Wigtown-shire, on the western tip of Scotland, at 4:15 p. m. (10:15 a. m. St. Louis time.) It was about three miles inland, was headed for England and came from the direction of Ireland.

Nearly two hours earlier a high-flying airplane was seen passing over Londonderry, Northern Ireland, in the direction of England.

It was seen by hundreds who had been scanning clear skies for Smith's 670-pound, one-motor plane which took off from Old Orchard Beach, Me., yesterday and was expected to rea the Irish coast about 4 p. m. (10 a. m. St. Louis time) today.

Flyer Took Off Yesterday Morning From Old Orchard Beach, Me.

OLD ORCHARD BEACH, Me., May 29 (AP).—Thomas H. Smith, 24-year-old flyer, took off in a four-cylinder plane from Old Orchard's hard-packed sands yesterday in an unsanctioned experimental flight to Europe.

Smith, who is from Los Angeles, began his flight at 3:47 a. m. yesterday (2:47 St. Louis time) and associates said he expected to sight Slyne Head, Ireland, nearly 2800 miles away, at 11 a. m today (10 a. m. St. Louis time). Where he hoped to land was not announced.

His plane, the Baby Clipper, a 670-pound Aeronca monoplane with a 65-horsepower motor, carried 160 gallons of gasoline, which Smith estimated would carry him 3600 miles in from 32 to 40 hours, barring bad weather. His plane's cruising speed is 100 miles an hour.

Fog and Rain Along Route.

Fog and rain clamped a low ceiling over the first third of his route. No word came of the tin ship's passage over Newfoundland, but at Saint John, N. S., airport officials heard a plane they thought might be Smith's.

Smith, a former transport pilot, had equipment for blind flying, if necessary, but no radio. His only means of communication consist ed of three canvas message bags he hoped to drop to ships at sea.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Smith expressed themselves as "amazed" when news of their son's solo take off reached them at Clarksburg, W. Va. "We had no advance no tice," said the father, a lawyer. Neither did the Civil Aeronautic Authority, officials said at Washington, adding they had given n permission to the flight, whic Smith said was to demonstrate th practicability of long-distance fly ing by light planes. Associates es timated Smith's fuel cost at les than $30.

Charles Deland, Cincinnati, on of the associates who helped Smit prepare secretly near here for th flight, said weather reports ind cated good conditions over muc of the "Great Circle" course Smit was to follow.

Most recent of the many airme who have set out on that trail wa Charles Bachman, unreported o a solo hop to Sweden in a plan not much larger than Smith's.

50 Well-Wishers at Takeoff.

With the first light of daw breaking over the tide-hardene sands, Smith lifted his plane int the Atlantic mists yesterday whil flares and flashlights of news ph tographers lighted his path and
